AIR FIGHT RAGES OFF BRITAIN

KEY TO MYSTERY OF TRAIN WRECK HUNTED; 28 DIE

Four Way Inquiry Is Opened.

Little Falls, N. Y., April 20 [Special].—A four way investigation was launched tonight in an attempt to solve the mystery as to what caused the New York Central's proud Lake Shore Limited to jump the track near here last night.

The death toll in the disastrous wreck meantime climbed to 28 known dead with possibly five bodies still in the wreckage. The bodies of one woman and one man remained unidentified. Seventy-five injured persons were still in hospitals tonight.

Investigations were begun by the Interstate Commerce commission, the New York State Public Service commission, the operating railroad, and Coroner Fred C. Sabin.

High Speed Considered.

There was much speculation as to the possible cause of the wreck, but little official information bearing on the subject. The most popular theory was that excessive speed had forced an outside rail to give way on the sharp curve where the train left the tracks. While the cause was being formally investigated, the following factors were under consideration:

The locomotive's speedometer indicated the train was going 59 miles an hour around a six degree curve, the most abrupt on the system, where company rules called for a running speed of 45 miles an hour. The train was 15 minutes late.

F. E. Williamson, president of the railroad, said: "Everything now indicates that the road bed, track, and equipment were in first class condition, and the engineman experienced and with an unusually good record."

"No Way of Knowing."

C. M. Hoffman, chief dispatcher of the Albany division of the line, said: "There is no way of knowing whether the accident was caused by defective rails, the engine itself, or some other reason."

Harold Kunzer of Chicago, a passenger, said: "The engineer slammed on the brakes rounding the curve. It felt as if the rails were spreading. Then came the crash."

Coroner Sabin announced he had performed an autopsy on the body of the engineer, Jesse Earl of Albany, N. Y., and ascertained that he did not suffer a heart attack.

Death sealed the lips of Earl, the one man who probably could have explained the catastrophe, just as rescuers reached him after cutting with acetylene torches thru the twisted steel that imprisoned him.

Two Chicagoans Killed.

Among the identified dead were two Chicagoans, while ten other residents of Chicago and its environs were among the injured. One of the dead was Harry Rouse, 65 years old, who lived in the Chicago suburb of Glencoe. The other was identified as Harry Hollander, 39 years old, 4500 North Lawndale avenue, vice president of the foreign department of the Universal Car Loading company of Chicago and New York.

Efforts to clear away the thousands of tons of torn and twisted steel were impeded today by snow and a cold rain that intermittently fell on the scores of workmen. The wrecking crews had not attempted to move the overturned locomotive or the three front Pullmans, where most of the victims were found.

It is under these three cars that Coroner Sabin believed would be found about five more bodies. He said the cars would not be moved until tomorrow.

Scene: A Historic Valley.

The scene of the wreck is the picturesque Mohawk valley, where some of the revolutionary war's major battles were fought. It lies at the foot of jutting hills, 60 miles west of Albany and several hundred yards east of the highest lift-lock on the North American continent. Rugged rocky cliffs line the roadbed.

Most of the 300 passengers in the 16 car train were asleep in Pullmans when the train suddenly left the track and crashed with terrific force

KLAN'S VICTIMS SHOW FLOGGING SCARS IN COURT

Georgia Closes Case Against Deacon.

BY MARCIA WINN.

Atlanta, Ga., April 20 [Special].—The state of Georgia today concluded its case against Henry Cauthon, red headed chairman of a Ku Klux Klan wrecking [or whipping] crew, who is accused of having a hand in 16 floggings.

Cauthon, pinch-nosed, tight-mouthed and a deacon in the Baptist church, also was keeper of the klan's knout or whip in Eastpoint, Ga., an Atlanta suburb which klan terrorism has ruled for three years. His trial on 16 counts of assault and battery is the state's opening, if tardy, wedge in its drive against klan outlawry. Fifteen others also are under indictment.

Thruout the day, just as on the three preceding days, a grim line of victims ascended the witness stand. Each tells how he was taken out into the woods, stripped and flogged. Each eyes the two black leather whips on the exhibit table. Each says the one used on him must have been this wide—four inches—and that long—four feet.

Exhibit Scars to Jurors.

The daughter of an elderly tenant farmer identifies Cauthon as saying to her father: "Get that nigger off your place, or we'll take you out and flog you."

The Negro was a workman housed in the farmhouse. The farmer refuses, and is taken into the road before his home and flogged.

A thin leathery farmer of 50 identifies Cauthon as the driver of the car in which he was taken to the woods. He tells of his protest that he had just come out of a plaster cast, having had two broken legs. Two men hurl him to the ground, gag and pinion him. Four wield the whip.

"I was just beat to a jelly," he says, "the soft, mushy kind."

Negro Driven from Suburb.

A black young Negro tells how the men, posing as sheriffs, arrested him for selling whisky. They hit him with a blackjack. Five men take turns at the whip. They tell him, he repeats with whites of eyes rolling: "If I say anythin' about it they'll kill me." He identifies Cauthon and the whip, "that big 'un there.

Thus the line goes. A burly man of 44 displays his back—after a year still deeply scarred. A chocolate Negro youth tells how, after he had been flogged, a deputy sheriff stuck a pistol in his mouth, told him to leave Eastpoint and never come back.

"Did you leave?" he is asked. "Yas, suh," he says, "I got."

Best Friend Testifies.

Cauthon's best friend, Ray Davis, an instructor in scientific motor analysis at Georgia Tech, is the final witness. He tells how, when he and his wife separated, he received a warning letter, threatening a flogging. A few months later, he says, Cauthon called him and asked if "they" got him the previous night. Cauthon told him, he says, that the wrecking crew was after him, but that he, Cauthon, refused to go on it, saying: "He's my friend, and I won't go along."

Davis wasn't flogged, but later, worried about klan activity, advised Cauthon to get out of it. Cauthon replied: "You'd be surprised at the ones back of it."

Still later, Davis overheard Cauthon, discussing a man who wrecked a car while drunk, say: "Guess I'll have to get the wrecking crew and straighten him out. Can't allow a thing like that to go on."

35 Witnesses for Defense.

The court room gasped as one blood-chilling tale after another was told, but Cauthon sat impassively chewing gum. What form his defense will take is not known, but he has 35 witnesses. To date they have been sequestered in an upstairs courtroom, where they sing "Pass Me Not, O Gentle Saviour" and "Throw Out the Life Line."

EXPECT BRITAIN TO WIDEN BASE OF INCOME TAX

LONDON, April 20 (AP).—Britons look hopefully for few surprises and "no shocks" in the war swollen budget to be presented Tuesday in the house of commons by Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer.

The nation probably will have to pay the equivalent of $10,000,000,000 for war and government in the 1940-'41 fiscal year. Already Britons are wrestling with a 37.5 per cent income tax, and it is expected this will be spread over a wider base, reaching lower income brackets than heretofore. Other possibilities mentioned for increased revenue:

An additional surtax on large incomes and increase of the excess profits tax from 60 to 70 per cent.

Higher postage rates and increased taxes on tobacco and whisky.

A tax on bicycles, so far untaxed.

Direct war costs will take the equivalent of about $7,000,000,000.

6 KILLED, 20 HURT WHEN MOSLEMS AND HINDUS FIGHT

RANGOON, Burma, April 20.—Six persons were stabbed to death and 20 injured in an outbreak of Hindu-Moslem fighting on the eve of the Moslem celebrations in honor of the Prophet Mohammed's birthday. Troops and police were called out to restore order.

Moslem congregations yesterday after the Friday prayers indorsed the Moslem league's Lahore resolution, thus responding to the call of Mohammed Ali Jinnah, president of the Indian-Moslem league, to observe Friday as a "day for confirming the declaration of self-determination and independence."

Jinnah has asked all Moslems to express their opinion of the Lahore resolution, which proposes that provinces in India having a Moslem majority should be made autonomous.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

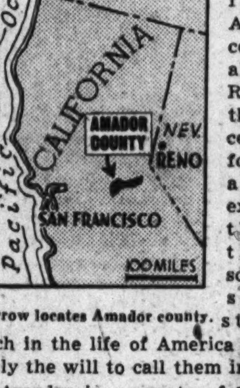
BUDAPEST, Hungary, April 20.—The ministry of agriculture today appealed to farmers for "exceptional efforts" in the present "exceptional times." The ministry said it expected them to leave "not an inch of land untilled."

O, KEEP YOUR MONEY! U. S. TOLD

A town in Indiana and a county in California were revealed in news dispatches yesterday as having rejected help from the federal government and told the New Deal to keep its money—that they'll get along without outside aid. The dispatches follow:

Jackson, Cal., April 20 [Special].—Proof that the American spirit of self-reliance is neither dead nor dying stands forth in Amador county for all to see. Residents of this east central California area are living examples of the fact that resources of self-help still run rich in the life of America and await only the will to call them into action.



Arrow locates Amador county.

Amador is a county of 120 square miles located 110 miles east of San Francisco on the west slope of the Sierra Nevada mountains. It has a population of approximately 11,000, with about one-fifth living here in the county seat.

WPA Help Spurned.

Five years ago Amador county cast out the Works Progress administration and other forms of federal and state relief and adopted a "pay as you go" formula for county business.

Since that time it has repeatedly turned down new offers from WPA, has refused to allow the state relief administration to establish a "dole" setup similar to that in operation in other parts of California, has financed its own relief needs from regularly assessed tax revenues, and has, in short, paid its way.

Today Amador county is completing work on a $150,000 courthouse without a bond issue—funds for its building were laid aside for three years out of tax receipts—and it has a county tax rate of only $1.15 for the four incorporated cities and only $1.30 for the small towns and rural areas.

An Object of Pride.

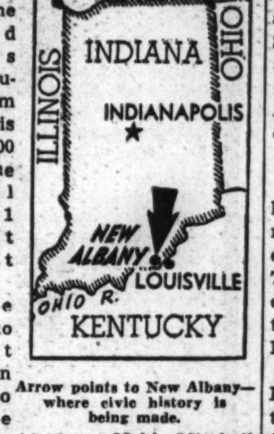
Behind the county's departure from the relief-grabbing of most sections of the country lies a story that has its roots in the personal philosophies of the five supervisors who govern its policies.

Each of them represents the community in which he was born and personally knows most of the people in his district and their problems. All have come up the "hard way" and believe in getting the full value of their dollars. All are past 50 years of age.

New Albany, Ind., April 20 [Special].—The city council today wondered what it could do to keep the United States Housing authority from giving this city $564,000—which the council voted 6 to 1 that it doesn't want.



Arrow points to New Albany—where civic history is being made.

"We're waiting to see what Washington will do about the situation," said Mayor Noble Mitchell [who does not want it]; the local housing authority, [which does]; the citizens' association [which doesn't], and representatives of C. I. O. and A. F. of L. unions [which do].

Thousands Protest.

The gift had a few strings tied to it. Under contracts which the New Albany Housing authority was authorized [by a 5-2 vote of the council last August] to enter into with the FHA 126 low rent housing units were to be constructed in a subdivision. Not until a few months ago, long after the contracts were signed, did protests grow loud enough to be heard. A citizens' association was formed. Massmeetings were held and petitions against the housing project bore 3,278 names. Labor organizations moved to support the project. Their petitions had but 513 names.

The citizens' association discovered the new subdivision must be provided with police and fire protection and garbage service, yet remain untaxable by the city. The no tax clause was insisted upon by U. S. H. A. Further, the association maintained, so many new housing units would discourage private capital from competing. Because the housing project was being constructed on unoccupied land, the association was openly skeptical of slums being eliminated.

First Refusal of Kind.

The city council counted the names on the petitions and went into a huddle. They emerged to make history—local and national. It was the first time that pressure brought to bear caused a city to ask the U. S. H. A. to call the whole thing off—after contracts already were signed calling for a $564,000 gift.

No money has been received by the new Albany Housing authority, said Evan McLinn, Housing authority secretary, which strengthened hopes of protesters that the project would be wiped off the records by the U. S. H. A.

GERMANY WANTS ALL IT RULED 300 YEARS AGO

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, April 20. — "Germany wants everything she controled 300 years ago,". Robert Ley, head of the German labor front and trusted aid of Fuehrer Hitler, declared today in Hamburg.

Robert Ley.

Ley offered this new definition of German ambitions while speaking in honor of Hitler's 51st birthday. The rest of the nation rang with praise of the Fuehrer, too.

The German empire 300 years ago included the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxemburg, eastern France, Switzerland, part of present day Italy, and Jugo-Slavia. That was before the Treaty of Westphalia which ended the Thirty Years' war.

Three "Major Miracles."

Ley said that Germany in her history had witnessed three major miracles—her resurrection after the Thirty Years' war, the victories of Frederick the Great, and the saving of German unity after the world war. "Germany lost the world war but this enabled her to win her present revolution," he said.

Ley told his listeners that "England will again become an unknown island in the ocean," and declared "Germany's victory in the north is the greatest victory of all times, which will decide this war."

Emphasize One Theme.

All over the nation today this theme was emphasized:

"That history has chosen Hitler to create the new German empire. The construction of this empire is not completed. The army is still fighting for it with its first soldier at its head."

The first soldier, of course, is Hitler, who was an unknown trooper in the world war. Today he commands the biggest army ever seen in Europe. The neighbors with whom he is not at war tremble with fear of invasion. Soviet Russia is his friend and ally and his troops stand in Norway and could, if they wanted, control the Adriatic from the Alpine crags they occupy in former Austria.

All Within a Year.

A year ago in a giant parade in honor of his 50th birthday Hitler permitted the world to have a glimpse of the strength of his armed forces. Today these armed forces have conquered Poland and Denmark, and they are fighting for possession of Norway.

Just what Germany and its allies, Italy and soviet Russia, are doing is the object of heated debates. The fate of Jugo-Slavia remains an important topic of discussion. A number of Italians say that "Croatia, which is not satisfied with the concessions granted by the Serbs, may find it necessary to rise."

An Excuse for Action.

This would give the Italians an excuse to take over Dalmatia and place Croatia and Serbia under their protection. Italians think such a move might satisfy their radicals clamoring for action without precipitating an immediate conflict with England and France.

Other Italians point to Greece, saying that control of that country would be the "logical stepping stone in the development of the Italian empire." The presence of the Italian fleet off the Dodecanese Islands, the strength of the Italian forces in Albania, and the concentration of Italian troops near Brindisi and Bari have convinced observers who have traveled in those regions that Italy is preparing to strike.

Conservative Germans hold that it is of paramount importance for Germany that there should be no major upheaval in the Balkans so that production may be maintained in those countries. But you meet Nazis who say that "if we do not get all the oil we want from Rumania and all the ores we want from Jugo-Slavia, we shall take action."

ENGLISH FLYERS AND SHORE GUNS ATTACK NAZIS

Believe Germans Try to Plant Mines.

LONDON, April 20 (AP).—British planes and shore batteries fought a prolonged and spectacular battle with German air raiders off the southeast British coast tonight.

The battle followed the mining of two British merchantmen in that area and resulted from what Britons said were new German aerial mine laying operations in an effort to block the flow of British and French troops to Norway.

The appearance of the German planes came within a few hours of the sinking of the 5,404 ton freighter Hawnby and the 1,037 ton coastal steamer Mersey with 13 dead or missing.

As on a previous raid last Wednesday night, British planes sped out to sea to engage the Germans. Firing, reported to be the heaviest of the war in that vicinity, continued until shortly after 11 p. m.

Searchlights Brighten Sky.

The sputtering flares, the sweeping beams of searchlights, and the flash of the guns drew scores of coastal residents to the sea-front after the raiders swept out of the northeast to be attacked by the British fighters and anti-aircraft guns.

Then the hour long fight ended as abruptly as it started and the Germans headed toward the northwest. The Hawnby and the Mersey were the first British ships destroyed by mines in the southeast coastal area this month.

Following the southeast coast air battle, antiaircraft guns and planes went into action in the neighborhood of the Thames estuary. No attacks were reported on shipping, however, and no air raid alarm was sounded.

The British earlier in the day had taunted Germany with the declaration that an Anglo-French fighting force had been transported across 400 miles of North sea and landed on the unfamiliar Norwegian coast without the loss of a single life. Communiques from the war office and admiralty announced that:

1. While allied transports had reached Norway unscathed, British submarines in an attack on a German convoy torpedoed two troopships. [Whether the transports sank was not stated.]

3 Planes Shot Down.

2. Three German planes were shot down and others damaged in unsuccessful raids on British naval units and transports, in which the enemy obtained no hits.

3. Anglo-French forces in Norway "occupied certain positions of vantage" on April 19, and operations there are "proceeding according to plan."

The vanguard of the Anglo-French expedition, consisting of two British divisions and one French, was reported pushing southward thru the snow-clad mountain terrain toward the German outposts, while the main allied body continues to assemble unhampered at bases along the coast.

[The British denied that German bombers had sunk a troop transport on Friday. There was no comment on German claims that a cruiser had been sunk and a troopship set afire yesterday. Stockholm dispatches said the British and French troops had landed at Mamsos, Molde, and Laerdal.]

Full Credit to Navy.

The army gave the British navy full credit for the success of the transport operation. Warship guns kept landings covered while Royal Air Force planes overhead scanned sky and sea for German bombers or warships.

The Anglo-French force was believed to be at least partly mechanized and equipped with heavy artillery. To reach what is reported as a rapidly forming German line running east from the seaport of Trondheim, this force must penetrate a craggy and difficult terrain.

Submarine Returns.

The British today announced that the submarine Truant had returned home safely after "negotiating the minefields in the Skagerrak and torpedoing the German cruiser Karlsruhe, which was carrying 571 troops."

The Germans have admitted the loss of the Karlsruhe. It was sunk early in the Norwegian campaign.

Naval sources confirmed reports that the Polish submarine Orzel, cooperating with the allied navy, was responsible for sinking the German troop transport Rio de Janeiro off Kristiansand April 8

DEWEY BLASTS FAILURE TO FIND WORK FOR IDLE

Outlines His Own Views on Social Security.

BY WILLIAM FULTON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood Bowl, Los Angeles, April 21.—Before a crowd of 20,000 wildly cheering Californians gathered in the Hollywood hills tonight Thomas E. Dewey, New York district attorney and a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, warned that the social security program is in jeopardy because of the "economic defeatism" of the Roosevelt administration.

Dewey's appearance in the bandshell at the foot of the hill produced a five minute ovation. It was dusk and the clouds above the mountain to the west were still flecked with pink.

Dewey declared that providing a social security program for the employed of the country constitutes only part of the problem. The major part of the problem is to give security to the unemployed by creating jobs, and this the present régime in Washington had not done, Dewey charged.

Reveals New Deal Fraud.

Reviewing Republican achievements in progressive legislation, beginning with the abolition of slavery, Dewey said the claims of New Dealers to a monopoly on social measures are just "plain fraud." Republicans supported the present security program and will continue to do so when they obtain a congressional majority, he maintained, by "making it a workable social service; not a peg on which bureaucracy may hang its hat."

Applause rolled and echoed thru the canyon when Dewey, with characteristic force, predicted a new administration will be in Washington next year to reverse the failures and correct the abuses of the present government.

"Government by resonant protestation, government by financial insecurity, government by unscrupulous opportunism has run its course," he asserted. "Our people already have begun the process of its elimination.

"There is a new sense of confidence, health, and strength abroad in the land. We are awakening from a political nightmare to find ourselves once more in our own great free forward moving America."

Offers 5 Point Program.

Dewey set forth a five point program for safeguarding the social security of the people, which he declared could be saved from destruction only by being backed by economic security. The program follows:

"First and foremost, the release of all of our productive energies so that our economy may provide the fullest measure of material well being for our people.

"Second, adequate and non-political relief for those who are thrown out of work and for whom unemployment insurance has not been provided.

"Third, unemployment insurance, efficiently and economically administered in the interest of all workers.

"Fourth, old age insurance, to provide a reasonable standard of living after the years of active work have passed.

"Fifth, a continuing survey of the possibilities of extending social insurance to new fields whenever the administration of existing forms has been sufficiently consolidated to justify further expansion."

Assails New Deal Failure.

Dewey referred to the economic failure of the New Deal, which, he said, had led thousands of unemployed to flock to California when adequate provision should have been available elsewhere. He said it was a national problem and had been unfairly thrust upon California.

"There is much to be done to make the social security program complete," he said. "In some regions an essential part of the economic system is the migratory worker. A careful study should be made to see whether he, too, can be afforded a decent protection against prolonged unemployment.

"The social security program is not just one of unemployment insurance. Among other things, it includes old age insurance. What of the management of this part of the program?

"The taxes which employés and employers pay to the federal government as premiums for old age insurance must be credited to each employé's account so that when the time arrives he may receive the benefits to which he is entitled.

Workers Pay in Vain.

"If any such tax payment is not credited to the account of the employé, he loses not only that much insurance. He also loses the premium the law makes him pay. Over 250 million such payments have now been made. What has happened to these payments under the New Deal?

"A few months ago the rumor spread in Washington that millions of these tax payments were wholly 'John Doe' accounts. The rumor was promptly and sweepingly dismissed. But the house appropriations committee demanded the truth, and the director of the bureau of old age insurance grudgingly admitted that there were 7,000,000 unidentified items.

"The director minimized the importance of his statement. But I cannot minimize seven million tax payments which have not been placed to the credit of the workers who paid for them.

7 Million Unidentified Items.

"The truth is that this figure of 7,000,000 represents the unidentified tax items remaining for only 1937 and 1938. Counting in 1939, the total of unidentified items must be at least 12,000,000. I cannot minimize that.

"I cannot minimize it when even one worker may find when he needs his old age insurance that an incompetent administration has no record of the payments it took from him on the promise of protecting his old age."

Dewey developed his philosophy of social security in the state that produced such pension pressure groups as the "Ham and Eggers" $30 every Thursday organization, Upton Sinclair's epic [end poverty in California movement] and the Townsend old age pension plan.

Dewey recalled that Elmer F. Andrews, state commissioner of labor in New York, had been declared incompetent by the legislature after an investigation, but that the Roosevelt administration had appointed him federal wage and hour administrator. The legislature made similar findings about Paul Sifton, executive director of the division of unemployment insurance, who became deputy administrator under Andrews, Dewey said.

That proves, he declared, that if a man is of the right political complexion, no matter whether he is a bungler, he is "just the man for the New Deal to put in charge of the workers' welfare."

The presidential candidate drew a round of applause when he recalled the distinguished services of Senator Hiram Johnson and urged his reelection this year.

Fight for Delegates.

Dewey came to California today for a 48 hour tour in quest of delegates to the Republican national convention, opening in Philadelphia on June 24. The delegates already have been named and are uninstructed.

According to the best estimates available here from seasoned observers, 12 of the delegates will be for Former President Herbert Hoover and the same number for Dewey, with a struggle between them for most of the remaining 20. Senators Robert A. Taft of Ohio and Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan are reported to have no more than one or two delegates apiece.

Jam Platform in Greeting.

Dewey's day in southern California began at San Bernardino, in the heart of the citrus belt, where more than 2,000 persons swarmed over the station platform to see him. He and Mrs. Dewey left the train and clambered upon a bunting draped flat car.

Looking up at a bright sun, hatless in the 70 degree temperature, the candidate paid tribute to the weather. Climate-proud Californians applauded. They yelled again when he attacked the Roosevelt régime for creating the beatitude, "Blessed are the youth, for they will inherit the national debt."

The next stop was Pasadena, where 5,000 men, women, and children wedged themselves in between the train and the station for a look at New York's favorite son.

Crowds Block Traffic.

Mayor Fletcher Bowron and Earl Warren, attorney general, both Republicans, were waiting on the steps to greet the visitor.

About 2,000 persons were at the city hall and the curbs were lined as the Dewey motorcade moved thru the downtown streets to the Biltmore hotel. Crowds in front of the Biltmore jammed the street and traffic was halted for several blocks.

Then followed a luncheon. The 1,500 tickets for this affair were sold out. Afterward Dewey conferred with party leaders, veterans, young Republicans, editors, a delegation of Republican leaders from Arizona, and other groups.

Later in the afternoon Dewey and his party were taken to the Roosevelt hotel in Hollywood for a visit to the state convention of the Republican assembly. This is the young, live wire group in the state G. O. P. organization, which sponsored tonight's rally at Hollywood Bowl.

Pay Tribute to "Teddy."

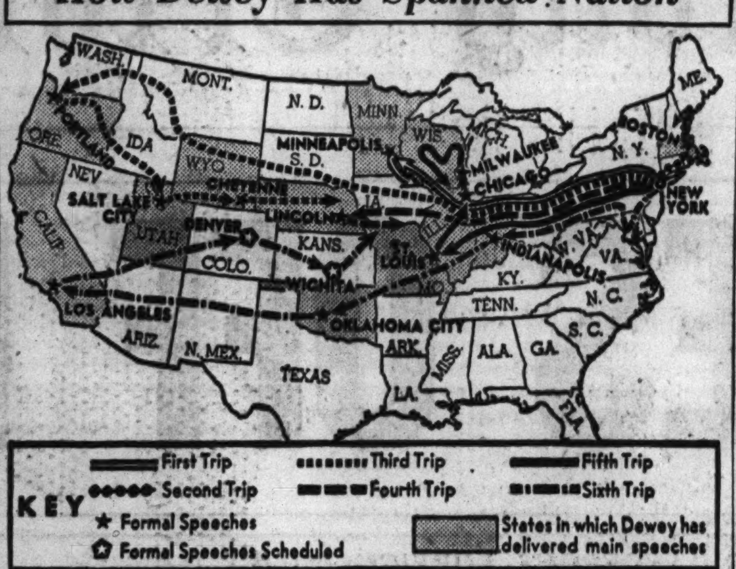
Assembly members had climbed on top of the marquee outside the hotel and placed the huge letters "Teddy" in front of "Roosevelt" to show their loyalty for the first President of that name, and to show the hotel was not named for the present occupant of the White House.

Among those in the California delegation who met Dewey and conferred with him during the day were:

William P. Knowland, national committeeman; Mrs. Edith Van de Water, national committeewoman, and Bradford Melvin, chairman of the state central committee.

Fred Abarle, 43 year old Los Angeles attorney, ably headed up the arrangements for the visit here. He and Dewey were born in the same town—Owosso, Mich.

How Dewey Has Spanned Nation



Map shows how Thomas E. Dewey, candidate for Republican presidential nomination, has covered the country on his campaign trips to date. He spoke last night in Los Angeles on his sixth trip and goes from there to Denver, Colo., and Wichita, Kas., and thence into Iowa where appearances are scheduled at Des Moines and Marshalltown. At the conclusion of each trip Mr. Dewey returned to New York.

APPEALS TO HIGH COURT TO TIE UP STATE ROAD FUND

Springfield, Ill., April 20 (AP).—State Representative Arnold L. Lund of Riverside appealed today to the Illinois Supreme court in an attempt to impound $71,000,000 in state highway division funds.

Lund appealed from a decision of the Sangamon county Circuit court which had denied him permission to file a suit to enjoin the highway division funds on the ground that the appropriations were in "lump sums" and not itemized.

Circuit Judge L. E. Stone refused to admit the suit with a ruling that Lund had failed to "show reasonable grounds." Lund, in his suit, named Gov. Henry Horner, State Treasurer Louie E. Lewis and Auditor Edward J. Barrett as defendants.

M'NUTT PRAISES NEW DEAL ACHIEVEMENTS IN WICHITA ADDRESS

Wichita, Kas., April 20 (AP).—Paul V. McNutt, federal security administrator, praised the Roosevelt administration tonight by contrasting what he termed its "achievements" with Republican "promises," but made no mention of his own prospective candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination.

"The Democratic party goes before the people in 1940 with a record for fidelity to the public trust that defies all attempts to defile it," he said in an address at a Jefferson day banquet.

Without mentioning by name Thomas E. Dewey, New York district attorney campaigning for the Republican nomination, McNutt quoted a recent talk in which Dewey accused the Roosevelt administration of a "cynical disregard of the principles of common honesty." That, said McNutt, was an all-time high in "Republican effrontery."

SECURITY BOARD KEEPS SILENT ON DEWEY CHARGES

Washington, D. C., April 20 [Special].—On record in Washington is the admission of social security officials concerning the truth of District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey's statement in a speech at Los Angeles tonight that millions of social security payment items are unidentified in government accounts, being listed only as "John Doe" credits.

Officials would not comment when they were asked tonight about Dewey's charges. They referred questioners to a report of proceedings before the house appropriations committee on the 1941 appropriation bill for the social security board. The report stated:

"It appears that some confusion exists with respect to the so-called John Doe items, or suspended items of tax. The total number of items involved is 7,000,000 . . . The amount of pay roll wages involved in these items is approximately $410,000,000 . . .

"It should be made clear that the reason for the suspension of these items is not thru a failure on the part of the board's administrative machinery, but is due to the negligence on the part of the employer in not properly keeping a record and correctly making out his report."

TRUCKER DIES OF INJURIES.

Ottawa, Ill., April 20 [Special].—Edgar Gayle Mochelman, 27 years old, of Galesburg, died today in a Mendota hospital of injuries incurred when the transport truck he was driving crashed into the rear of a truck stalled on U. S. highway 34, half a mile east of Meriden.

ICKES TO DEBATE HUGH JOHNSON ON THIRD TERM ISSUE

Gen. Hugh Johnson, former NRA head and militant critic of the Roosevelt administration, and Harold L. Ickes, secretary of the interior, will debate tomorrow night in the Civic Opera house on the question: "Shall the New Deal Have a Third Term?" The debate is under auspices of the Citizens' Schools committee. Ickes will speak for a third term, and Johnson will argue against it.

New York, April 20 [Special].—For more than an hour and a half today 30 federal agents hunted thru the crew's quarters of the United States liner Manhattan before she sailed for Italy. SENATOR BYRNES LOOSES NEW DEAL BLAST AT DEWEY

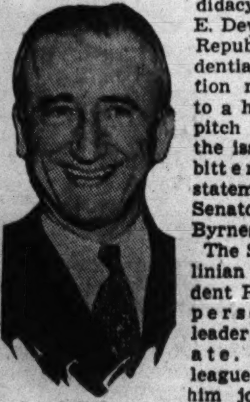
Foreign Policy Stand Is Reckless, He Charges.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 20.—The New Deal's outcries against the candidacy of Thomas E. Dewey for the Republican presidential nomination rose almost to a hysterical pitch today with the issuance of a bitterly critical statement from Senator James F. Byrnes [D., S. C.].



Sen. J. F. Byrnes.

The South Carolinian is President Roosevelt's personal floor leader in the senate. His colleagues refer to him jocularly as the White House errand boy. Thus, the blast against Dewey certainly carried Mr. Roosevelt's indorsement and possibly was inspired by him.

The statement, which was issued thru the Democratic national committee, clearly reflected the resentment of the administration against the vigorous campaign being waged against the Roosevelt régime by Dewey.

It was interpreted also as reflecting Democratic fears of Dewey's capabilities as a vote getter.

Assails Foreign Stand.

Senator Byrnes accused Dewey of making "reckless and irresponsible statements" in regard to the foreign policies of the government. He charged that Dewey is taking any position that he thought would catch votes. The senator declared that the New Yorker in his tour thru the west has made serious charges that "the Roosevelt administration may drag this nation into war by meddling in the European situation."

Dewey's effort to convince the west that he is a 100 per cent isolationist is in contrast to a speech he made to the Women's National Republican club in New York on Jan. 20, Byrnes declared. In that speech, Dewey said that the Roosevelt administration was following the foreign policies laid down during 12 years of Republican administrations. The basic policy, he asserted, was to refrain from entangling alliances.

"Mr. Dewey has abandoned the foreign policy he enunciated in New York," Byrnes remarked. "No doubt he will resume it upon his return to the Atlantic seaboard."

Managers Deny Charge.

Another development involving Dewey was the decision of the senate committee investigating the 1940 elections to ask for an additional $45,000 to augment the $30,000 it was granted by congress when it was named in January. It is an open secret in Washington that the committee has received charges that Dewey's campaign is costing an excessive amount.

This has been denied by Dewey's managers, who assert that nothing beyond traveling expenses has been spent in connection with the presidential primaries Dewey has entered. Any money spent in the primary campaigns, they say, has been raised by local Republican organizations.

Investigators May Be Sent.

If granted the requested additional funds, the committee, which is headed by Senator Guy M. Gillette [D., Ia.], may send investigators into every state to report on circumstances surrounding elections, instead of taking action only after complaints have been filed. Senator Gillette yesterday was empowered by the committee to send operatives into any state, even if no complaints have been received from it.

The action of the committee was reported to have been dictated by apprehension that a concerted movement to discredit a candidate might be made by flooding the committee with complaints which would harm his chances even if they were later found to be untrue.

Heard in Divorce Suit

ARLINE JUDGE.

Bridgeport, Conn., April 20 (AP).—Arline Judge, former screen actress, testified today that her marital difficulties with Dan Topping reached a climax last year when the millionaire sportsman crashed thru the door of her bedroom in a Palm Springs, Cal., hotel, broke a bed, tossed furniture around in fury, and had to be restrained from assaulting her by her mother.

Miss Judge told State Referee John W. Banks, taking evidence in her suit for divorce, that the attack followed a quarrel precipitated when her personal maid found Topping kissing a young woman who was their guest at the resort, playground of Hollywood stars.

The former actress married Topping, owner of the Brooklyn Dodgers professional football team, on April 9, 1937, a few days after her divorce from Wesley Ruggles, film director, by whom she had a son.

She soon learned that Topping drank excessively, Miss Judge testified, and, finally, in an attempt to halt his drinking, agreed to have a child. Topping kept his pledge for a year, she said, but resumed drinking immediately after the birth of their son, Daniel Reid Topping Jr., on Feb. 2, 1938.

Referee Banks closed the hearing after Miss Judge's testimony, and will report to the Superior court.

SCOPE OF INQUIRY INTO SLUSH FUND BOTHERS INDIANA

Hoosiers Wonder if It's to Be a Whitewash.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 20 [Special].—The question in Indiana's Democratic slush fund scandal most pressing to politicians in both parties is this:

Is the government merely trying to collect income taxes which it deems have been evaded upon the sums squeezed into the Democratic machine's campaign chest, or does it intend to start criminal prosecution against some Democratic politicians that might blow the lid off the so-called 2 per cent club and the operations in slush collections?

Since August the federal treasury has been investigating the 2 per cent club. At times as many as 40 internal revenue agents have been on the scene. The activity has not been engineered thru the department of justice but thru the federal treasury.

Claim $372,000 Due.

About two weeks ago the treasury department cracked down on four Indiana politicians who have handled some of the funds, claiming back taxes aggregating $372,000, with the investigation still incomplete. At Washington it was said this amount includes 50 per cent penalties, and there were intimations that the amount might climb higher before the inquiry is finished.

The demands:

Upon Bowman Elder, former treasurer of the 2 per cent club, which was legalized by state law and decorated with the name Hoosier Democratic club, $233,000. Elder is one of the big three in the McHale-McNutt-Elder political machine.

Upon three other Democrats, not mentioned by name, who handled "voluntary contributions" from various interests, $139,000.

Total, $372,000.

Elder to Fight Claims.

Elder, who ranks second only to Frank McHale, Democratic national committeeman, as a leader in the Paul V. McNutt campaign for the nomination for President, says it is not quite clear whether the claim is for that amount of income tax and penalties, or whether it is income on which the government claims tax should have been paid.

Elder says it is a natural assumption that he will contest any claim. His legal representative is Attorney Harry B. Sutter of Chicago, a specialist in tax matters who was a college classmate of McHale. Information from Washington is that the treasury billed the $233,000 as income tax plus 50 per cent penalties and that it covered a period of seven years—1933 to 1939, inclusive—upon Elder as treasurer of the 2 per cent club.

What effect the scandal may have upon the political fortunes of McNutt is an absorbing topic here.

Friends Insist He's Guiltless.

The 2 per cent levy on pay rollers was established during the McNutt régime as governor, and later was legalized by statute. Friends of McNutt, who relinquished his post as high commissioner to the Philippines and was appointed federal security administrator, say he has been cleared of any involvement in the slush mess.

In Washington there was an expectation that either the White House or Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau would make a statement to that effect. So far none has been forthcoming.

McNutt has taken a leave of absence as federal security administrator and has started on a 14,000 mile tour of the west, which will take him into 22 states as a candidate for the presidency.

Newspapers here comment on the delay in giving McNutt a white mantle, and declare that his glamor is beclouded by the failure of the administration to give him a clean bill of health.

McNutt Declines Comment.

In a press conference here yesterday, McNutt declined to comment on recent reports that the treasury was preparing a report for release in the near future. Of late there are indications that the smearing thru nine months of investigation may have been overdone, and now may be making sympathy for McNutt. The failure of the White House to fish or cut bait brought an off the record remark from a Republican of national prominence which is to the effect that to injure a candidacy by a continued smear is un-American—that instead, if there is guilt, quick action should be taken in a grand jury room.

It all weaves into the question of whether the federal inquiry will take the course of criminal action against politicians deemed involved, or whether it will be a mere collection matter—in other words, a whitewash.

Denied Name Change

HELEN BAKALEINIKOFF.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 20 [Special.]—A woman in California cannot legally change her married name until her divorce becomes final. So ruled Superior Judge Emmett H. Wilson on petition of Helen Gilbert Bakaleinikoff, actress, who sought to change her name to Helen Gilbert. Her divorce from Mischa Bakaleinikoff, musician, is not yet final. The judge ruled, however, that there is no law to prevent her from calling herself Miss Helen Gilbert.

TICKET NAMED BY PROHIBITION PARTY IN STATE

Decatur, Ill., April 20 [Special].—Calling for repeal of the state sales tax and the outlawing of any political party which in effect is the agent of a foreign government, the Illinois Prohibition party closed its state convention here this afternoon after naming a full slate of candidates.

Clay F. Gaumer, Vermillion county farmer and a former state representative, was nominated for governor. Other nominees are Enoch A. Holtwick, Greenville college faculty member, for United States senator; Henry Johnson Long, president of Greenville college, for lieutenant governor; Harriett McBride, Evanston, for secretary of state; Carl T. E. Schultz, Chicago, for state auditor, and John H. Everett, Mason City, for state treasurer.

Official Admits Excessive Speed on Curve.

into a massive stone embankment. All of them were hurled from their beds into an inferno of grinding steel, hissing steam, and the shrieks of the injured and frightened.

It was the line's first passenger fatality in 13 years.

The high powered locomotive carried with it the tender and baggage car. One coach, uncoupled, sped down the tracks and apparently was not damaged. Another was cut open like a can of sardines, its top ripped off and the inside a complete wreck. A Pullman came to rest on its right side. From each several bodies were removed.

A dining car was tipped at a 75 degree angle, a mass of wreckage. Two more Pullmans tilted precariously near the edge of the barge canal.

Débris Strewn About.

The dead, the injured, car cushions, clothing and personal effects were strewn along the right of way. Feet of some of the victims protruded from the wreckage. Crumpled metal, ties and rails gave a junkyard appearance to the scene.

Survivors straggled back and forth looking for friends, relatives and luggage. There was little hysteria. Many persons grabbed blankets from the Pullman berths and huddled in groups against the freezing temperature. Communication lines torn down by the plunging locomotive were entwined in the débris.

Identification Difficult.

Identification of the victims was made difficult because most of them were in sleeping attire. Their clothing and luggage, only clues to identity, were lost in the wreckage. In addition, many of the bodies were so badly mangled identification was virtually impossible.

Hospitals in the area were jammed with the injured and ambulances and physicians rushed to the scene from miles around. Cots were placed along the highway and the four track line for those less seriously hurt.

Railroad men of the line, which received the Harriman award last year for passenger safety record, were inclined to discount a theory the locomotive exploded.

FEDERAL BOARD ORDERS INQUIRY INTO BIG WRECK

Washington, D. C., April 20 [Special] —The Interstate Commerce commission today assigned inspectors Bexford H. Wood and Gordon Morris to investigate the New York Central wreck at Little Falls, N. Y. A report is not expected to be made public for several months.

The New York Central was criticized today in a report on a wreck which occurred last Jan. 19 in which 10 persons were injured. Lax observance of operating rules was held responsible for the accident. A rear end collision of two passenger trains at Wickliffe, O.

"This accident was caused by failure to provide adequate flag protection for the preceding train and failure to operate the following train in accordance with signal indications," the commission reported.

Death Toll in Train Wreck Rises to 28—Cause Sought as Debris Is Searched

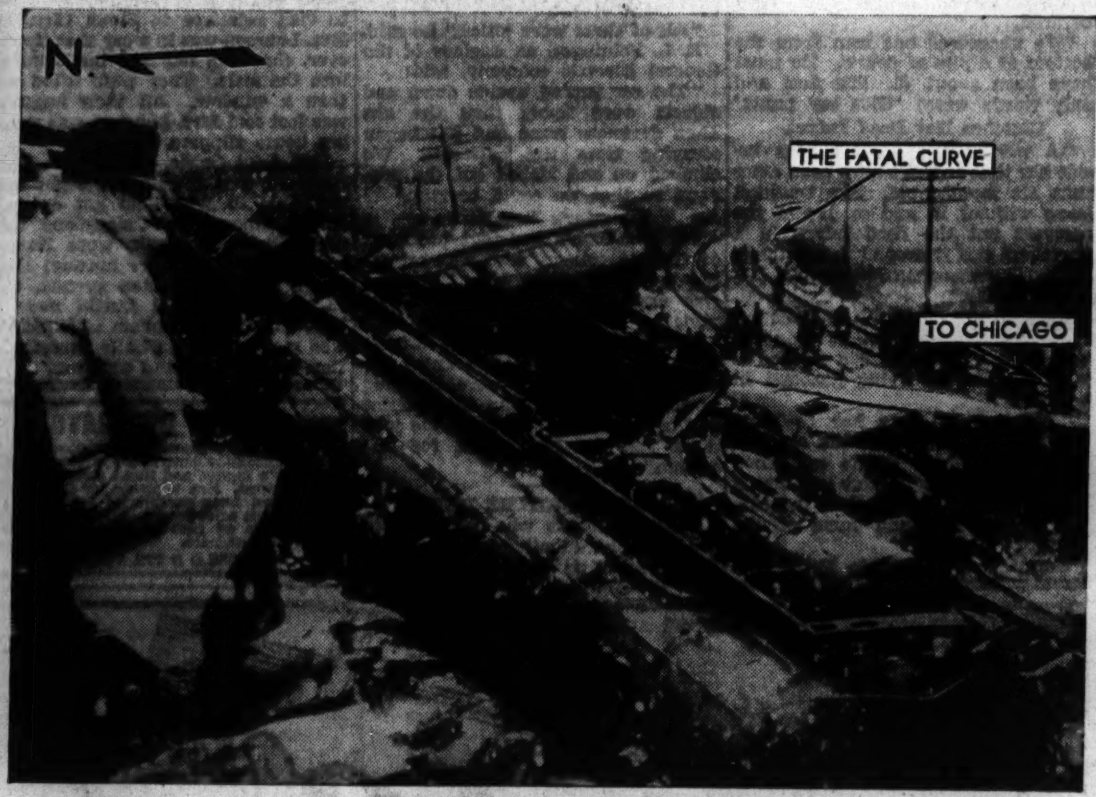
An aerial view of the overturned train as it appeared early yesterday. The limited was traveling 59 miles an hour as it swung around the 6 degree curve, hurling some of the cars against the stone embankment and pitching some 300 sleeping passengers from their berths. [Associated Press Wirephoto.]



[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

When the locomotive upset and its framework snapped as if it had been matchwood, both the engineer and fireman were killed, and the lips that might have explained the disaster were sealed.

The heaviest loss of life occurred in this sleeping car when its roof was ripped off and its interior smashed. The coach hurtled past the overturned locomotive. Several of the sixteen cars of the train were Pullmans.

WITNESSES TELL OF EERIE SCENES IN TANGLED CARS

Describe Explosion Which Rocked Locomotive.

Little Falls, N. Y., April 20 [Special].—Eyewitnesses today described the scenes of horror which followed the collision of the Lake Shore Limited with the rock side of a gorge here last night.

One of the first persons to reach the scene, Edward Pawluk, 21 years old, of Herkimer, said he saw red and blue flames shoot from the derailed locomotive and then heard a deafening explosion as the engine blew up.

Driving with a Girl.

At the time, Pawluk was driving with a girl friend directly opposite the gorge where the train was wrecked. He dashed down the embankment, rushed to a Pullman car and carried out a man with a crushed head.

"He was alive at the time," Pawluk said.

Returning to the Pullman, he saw a man, uninjured and naked, climb out of a window. Pawluk gave him his sweater. Pawluk said that he saw in the Pullman a man and a woman whose heads had been severed.

"We uncovered one man from the bottom of a pile of debris. He must have been about 70. His first and only words were: 'Give my pants.'

Clutches Her Dead Infant.

"A woman had a dead baby beside her that couldn't have been more than six months old. She wouldn't leave without it, and so one of the rescuers put the dead infant in a sheet and tied it around the mother's neck. She was then led down a ladder to safety."

Giles Brown, 22, a Little Falls garage mechanic, told of groping his way thru a battered car to find a woman with her dying husband in her arms.

"We had to force her to leave him and lift her out of the car," he said. It was hell. There was blood all over and people were screaming and moaning. The steel of the cars was wrapped around some of the bodies."

Henry Jones of Little Falls, who lives near the tracks, was in bed at the time of the explosion. "My bed shook and I thought sure the house was going to come down," he said.

One uninjured passenger said he was just sitting down to a game of cards with four companions when the crash occurred.

"All of them were killed," he said.

E. L. Feininger, an engineer of the General Electric company, said:

"The car turned upside down and objects were flying thru the air. Then darkness came and gas began escaping from the batteries. We climbed up and kicked out the windows so that we could breathe."

Educator's Experience.

W. Fred Bohn, assistant president of Oberlin college, who was returning to Oberlin from New York and was asleep in the fourth Pullman, said:

"I was sound asleep when the car crashed. The first thing I knew people from the outside were breaking in the windows. Altho the interior of the car seemed wrecked, the windows had to be broken for the rescue."

WRECK VICTIMS HERE.

Fifteen persons who were aboard the Lake Shore limited train, wrecked Friday at Little Falls, N. Y., arrived in Chicago last night. This contingent was made up of persons who escaped injuries worse than bruises and shock.

Mrs. Gordon Lahrson, of Hollis, N. Y., and her sons, Gordon Jr., 6 years old, and Donald, 3, went on to visit relatives in Sioux City, Ia. Mrs. Lahrson was in a car that tipped over, throwing her and the children into the aisle. They were lifted out thru a window. All their baggage was lost and Mrs. Lahrson was wearing house slippers.

Mrs. Levi Lewis, of Palo, Ia., was on a car that remained upright and was able to dress and get out unhurt. Among the Chicagoans who came in on the train were Harold Kunzer, 1248 Ardmore avenue; Paul Doyle Jr., 7204 Paxton avenue, and B. J. Axling, 7822 Luella avenue. Mrs. Allan Brantingham of Rockford was met at the La Salle Street station by her husband and son.

Mother and Children Shaken in Wreck

GOV. RIVERS' FOE RESUMES OFFICE ON COURT ORDER

Atlanta, Ga., April 20 [Special].—Dissolution of Gov. E. D. Rivers' military rule was completed today as W. L. Miller, ousted by the governor last Dec. 2 and barred by National Guard troops since that time, returned to his office as chairman of the state highway board.

However, Miller found no business awaiting him and nothing to do except receive personal callers and answer messages of congratulation. Speculation immediately arose as to whether Miller, altho the legally constituted chairman, will be permitted to run the department.

It was remarked in authoritative circles that the other two members of the highway board are friendly to Gov. Rivers, and therefore likely to side with the governor and enable him to retain control over the department.

Bowing to a Supreme court ruling, Gov. Rivers yesterday restored Miller to office. Miller, who was ousted on charges of using his office for political purposes, indicated that he will start an investigation into a report that the highway department, during his absence, bought enough road material and machinery to last several years.

DIES IN CALIFORNIA.

Hooppole, Ill., April 20 [Special].—Mrs. Anna Miller, 83 years old, one of Hooppole's oldest residents, died yesterday in San Bernardino, Cal., while visiting a son, Clarence Miller. She leaves two sons and a daughter. The funeral will be held Wednesday in Hooppole.

FRANCE OFFERS OLIVE BRANCH TO ITALY AND SPAIN

Mediterranean Entente Is Set as Goal.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 20.—A "Mediterranean entente" embracing France, Italy, and Spain is one of the foreign policy goals of the French government despite ideological considerations and the hostile attitude of Italy toward the empires as reflected in its controled press.

Lifting the curtain a bit on the diplomatic program of the Quai d'Orsay, [foreign office] Premier Paul Reynaud made this important declaration in a lengthy appearance before the foreign affairs committee of the senate today.

The attitude of the Italian press toward France and Britain, characterized by some circles here as "more unfriendly than that of the Germans," has preoccupied political observers and brought a number of demands from French commentators that the government take a stiffer line.

See Duce Bargaining.

This opinion, however, is opposed by another interpretation which holds that, despite the growlings from over the Alps, Il Duce is in no position to take sides yet and is still trying to improve his bargaining position.

Reynaud, who also holds the portfolio of foreign minister, indicated to the senate committee that he still sees the possibility of making an arrangement with Rome. Before and after the outbreak of the war, Reynaud reminded the senators, France informed the Italian government that it was ready to undertake friendly conversations to settle all outstanding problems.

The Italian government has not replied to the French overtures, Reynaud revealed.

"Putting aside all ideological considerations, the French government will pursue its efforts in regard to these two countries with the view to establishing a Mediterranean entente, which is one of the indispensable bases of peace," Reynaud told the committee, a communique said.

[Italy's Fascist press today insisted on freedom from British and French control over the Mediterranean as the Italians' chief claim on the empires and termed this freedom a necessary condition for peace in Europe.]

Briton Warns Italy.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 20.—Another warning to Italy not to attempt to take advantage of the British and French preoccupation with the war in Scandinavia was given tonight by Hugh Dalton, prominent Labor member of parliament. "Our war is against Hitler," he said. "We seek no other enemy. But we are not running away from any allies Hitler may collect. We are mentally prepared for all possibilities."

The assertion "mentally prepared," was taken to mean the nation was militarily prepared. Later, he said: "Most of Hitler's fleet has been destroyed, so the Anglo-French sea power can be strongly reinforced in any other sea and a strong army stands in Syria and the adjoining lands."

She's Not Acting Now

LONDON, April 20 [Special].—There's no acting about it when Florence Desmond, well known British actress, hops on her bicycle and pedals to the theater. For gasoline is scarce in wartime Britain and her use of a bicycle conserves the precious fluid for war purposes. She is one of many Britons who are doing the same thing.

DANES SCORN PROPOSAL TO SELL GREENLAND

COPENHAGEN, April 20 (AP)—Danish foreign office circles declared today that the question of the sale of Greenland to the United States has not been raised, and does not exist so far as the Danish government is concerned. The declaration answered queries regarding a proposal made in the United States congress by Representative Hamilton Fish of New York that the United States buy the Danish colony for $40,000,000.

[When Germany occupied Denmark normal ties between that country and overseas territories were severed. Iceland, linked to Denmark by allegiance to the Danish royal house, has taken charge of her own affairs. Britain has occupied the Faroe Islands. The status of Greenland has been the subject of much discussion in England, Canada, and the United States.]

CANADIAN LAKE SEAMEN'S UNION CALLS OFF STRIKE

TORONTO, Ont., April 20 (AP).—The Canadian seamen's union called off its strike late today and agreed to submit its quarrel with Great Lakes ship operators to conciliation, Labor Minister Norman A. McLarty announced.

McLarty said a mediation board consisting of an impartial chairman and one representative each of the union and the companies would be established at Ottawa immediately. Neither side is pledged, however, to accept the mediators' findings.

Meanwhile, the seamen agreed to return to work at once and the companies said they would pay $7.50 monthly wage increases.

The strike, called six days ago, just before the official start of Great Lakes aviation, affected 285 ships of 10 companies and 6,500 seamen.

Union demands included $15 monthly increases, larger crews, and a closed shop.

BUILDING TOMORROW'S MEN

By CALEB

TWO everyday questions were asked me recently that I should have known the answers to—and didn't! Not only am I ashamed, but I would be ashamed for any reader in my predicament—therefore the answers here and now. One question was: "How many Boy Scouts are there in Chicagoland?" And the other: "How are their numbers organized and distributed?"

The queries are rendered especially timely—the answers important—because this year of 1940 is the Thirtieth Anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America's founding. In those three swift decades more than nine million boys and men have come up through the ranks from Cub to Senior Scout . . . and in so doing have imparted to the country's citizenship a sound characterfulness and sturdy integrity whose final values can never possibly be computed.

The reason for such "uncomputability" lies in Scouting's major fundamental function. Building tomorrow's men—and building them along those lines which assure tomorrow's men not a modicum, but an optimum, of manhood—is the one great B. S. A. goal. Vaguely the public realizes this—but its quiet magnitude of scope needs ceaseless reiteration. Even more needed is clearer knowledge of its methods.

Returning to the local questions I mentioned: the Chicago Council of B. S. A. boasts today an enrollment of 24,500 boys from 9 to 18 years old. Serving voluntarily as their leaders are 7,000 men from 18 up to 85. These boys and men, remember, are of every race, color, creed, nationality and station in life. No bars of wealth or poverty, social status, or private belief exist: all that counts is a boy's honor and his right intent.

These "Tomorrow Men" fall by age groups into four classifications. Boys of 9 to 12 are Cubs—boys of 12 up to 15 are Scouts—boys of 15 to 17 are Sea Scouts—young men from 17 on are Senior Scouts (Rovers, Explorers, etc.). Over 17,000 of Chicago's Boy Scouts, as might be expected, comprise the Scouts proper (12 to 15); with nearly 6,000 Cubs representing the next highest total. Last year's roster of outdoor activities for these energetic young Americans—carried on at the Chicago Council's ten camps in Michigan and Illinois—included 16,000 parent and Cub outing days, 166,000 camping and hiking days, and 12,000 exciting days afloat for Sea Scouts.

A simple fact of the city's "vital statistics" gives urgency to the Council's present $100,000 drive for needed additional funds. Namely, that each year, in Chicago alone, 28,000 boys, more than today's local Boy Scout enrollment, become 12 years of age! . . . Contributions to Scouting, therefore, can have no deeper significance for civic or even national welfare than the better facilities they will help supply for sound Boy Scout training of these 28,000 potential "Tomorrow Men" who are automatically made eligible each year.

BRITISH CRUISER SUNK BY PLANE, GERMANS ASSERT

Big Troopship Set Afire, Soldiers Attacked.

BERLIN, April 20 (AP).—A 15,000 ton British transport was blasted into flaming wreckage and a cruiser sent to the bottom of central Norway's Romsdals fjord late today by a squadron of German bombers, it was officially announced tonight.

Thruout wartime Germany, meantime, patriotism was being fanned in a multitude of observances of Adolf Hitler's 51st anniversary and stern steps were being taken in the struggle to subdue Norway.

The German bombers, escaping without losses, also effectively attacked British soldiers who already had landed at Andalsnes, at the head of Romsdals fjord, DNB, official news agency, reported. Andalsnes is one of the five railheads on the Norwegian west coast.

Sinks on the Spot.

The ships were attacked as they were landing troops, DNB said. The cruiser was hit by a tremendous bomb and sank on the spot, the news agency reported. The transport "went up in flames," it asserted, after being hit by several bombs, "and it can be regarded as a total loss."

Germany also announced the bombing yesterday of three British transports and a cruiser and said one transport was sunk.

[The British reported yesterday afternoon that their expeditionary army had been moved to Norway without loss of a man.]

Altho it was conceded that formidable British forces have been landed far to the north, in the Lofoten island region opposite Narvik, and at points further south, German military leaders expressed confidence that German shock troops could prevent effective coöperation between British and Norwegian soldiers.

Irritation at Norway.

In some German quarters, however, there seemed to be irritation over the continued opposition of Norway, a feeble country from a military standpoint, but one which is taking full advantage of its geographical position and difficult terrain to oppose the German forces.

Nevertheless, war maps have showed widening arcs of German occupation about Oslo, Bergen, Stavanger, and even Arctic Narvik.

In 11 days of sea action, which failed to dislodge the Germans from Narvik, German experts asserted, the British have lost four cruisers, 10 torpedo boats or destroyers and eight submarines, while six battleships or cruisers and one airplane carrier have been damaged seriously. This tabulation is unofficial. The same compilation said as many as seven British transports had been sunk prior to this afternoon's engagement.

Few Casualties Listed.

A DNB dispatch from Narvik said total German troop casualties there to date were one dead, two missing, and 13 wounded in a clash with the Norwegians. Naval or aircraft casualties were not mentioned.

In Oslo the German commander in chief, Gen. Nicholas von Falkenhorst, spoke out in the name of Hitler, with a "last" demand that Norway cease "this nonsensical resistance" or else feel the "dreadful" edge of the German sword.

The semiofficial commentary, Dienst aus Deutschland, likewise warned Norwegians that Germany is determined to "end this purposeless opposition as quickly as possible."

Whatever emotional impulse may have been needed to give the German spirit new fortitude with which to pursue the Scandinavian campaign to a victorious conclusion seems to have been supplied today, at any rate, by the host of expressions of implicit faith in the Fuehrer.

At 2 a. m. next Sunday, April 28, Chicagoans will move their clocks ahead one hour, from central standard to daylight saving time. Then, for the 23d year, daylight time will be in effect, and the city will receive its many benefits until Sept. 29, the last Sunday in September, when clocks will be moved back again.

Daylight time will bring 154 extra hours of sunlight to 4 million persons in the Chicago area during the summer months. At least 150 million persons thruout the world it is estimated, will observe daylight time this year.

One of the greatest benefits from daylight saving time has been a reduction in the number of motor accidents as a result of the lengthened sunlight late in the day, when many motorists are on the streets.

SMALL GARRISON IN A NORSE FORT FIGHTS OFF NAZIS

STOCKHOLM, April 20 (AP).—A Norwegian officer told tonight of a little garrison in Hegra fortress, just east of Trondheim, which already has withstood two German attacks and has used its cannon to help British bombers destroy the airport at nearby Varnas.

The fortress, past which a German troop train sped safely last week by a ruse, is cut into the mountain rocks. The Germans already have given up trying to master it from the air, as the walls, eight to 10 yards thick, make bombings virtually useless.

When the Germans invaded Trondheim, he said, Hegra's commander, a Maj. Holtermann, gathered a party of about 100 men and took charge. He had three days before the first German attack, and spent the time gathering supplies. Two German infantry drives were stopped by barbed wire, snow, and the fort's guns. Two days ago a German major under a flag of truce asked Hegra's surrender, but was sent back with a firm "no."

NORWEGIAN SHIP IN CANADA; WHY IS BIG MYSTERY

SEATTLE, Wash., April 20 (AP).—Diverted from her course under "mysterious circumstances," the Norwegian motorship Indra, out of Seattle for Chile, was reported today in port at Victoria, B. C.

Whether she entered the Canadian harbor of her own volition or was forced in by a British or Canadian warship was a mystery cloaked by the Canadian censorship.

The ship left here Monday for Comox, B. C. David R. Girdwood, president of the company which had her under charter, said a guarantee that she would be allowed to sail from Comox was given before she left Seattle. Shortly afterward the guarantee was revoked and the ship was wirelessed to proceed only to Port Townsend, Wash.

FRENCH NUN TO BE MADE SAINT IN ROME MAY 2

Today it counts 313 convents and 9,400 sisters caring for more than 50,000 women in almost every country in the world.

SHOOT DOWN SIX GERMAN PLANES ON WEST FRONT

3 More Reported Bagged; Nazis Claim Four.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 20 (AP)—British-French flyers and antiaircraft gunners gave a wry twist to Adolf Hitler's birthday celebration today with a series of western front combats in which nine German warplanes were reported brought down. Six of the air victories were listed officially. Scores of planes engaged in the fights.

The British royal air force claimed four of the six air victories and declared another plane was believed to have been destroyed. The French said they shot down two German planes in fights on the west front and that their antiaircraft guns bagged another in central France.

In addition, a German bomber crashed at the tip of Holland after being hit by a Belgian plane's fire. The dog-fights veered repeatedly over the Netherlands and Belgian borders.

One royal air force plane was forced to land by enemy action, the British reported. A French fighter was forced down within his own lines.

British Tell of Fights.

A British communique said British fighters shot down a Heinkel 111 plane near Charnay, France. The crew was captured. A patrol attacked a Heinkel 111 escorted by three enemy fighters and downed the Heinkel and a Messerschmitt 109. Patrols later attacked nine German fighter planes, the communique added, and shot down a Messerschmitt 109 in France.

The struggles took place over front lines in which artillery was engaged in exchanges of heavy fire and French troops repulsed several attacks by German infantry.

Four Downed by Nazis.

BERLIN, April 20 (AP).—DNB, German official news agency, announced tonight that four enemy planes were shot down today on the German-French border. One was an American-made Curtiss craft, two were French, and the fourth British. One German pursuit plane was reported lost.

Belgians Bag One in South.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, April 20.—Violations of neutrality by flyers occurred today over various parts of Belgium, stated an official communique tonight.

Three specific violations were charged: A German Heinkel plane, hit by Belgian ground defense fire, came down at Bunde, in Dutch Limburg. At Flavion a French plane made a forced landing. It was seized and the pilot interned. Near Paliseul four planes, both German and French, fought at a great height.

The Belgian government protested to Paris and to Berlin against the violations.

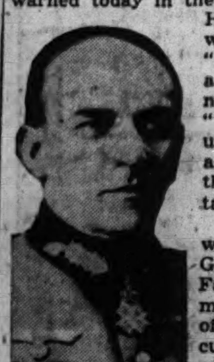
QUIT YOUR SILLY RESISTANCE, NAZI WARNS NORWAY

General Threatens Use of All His Might.

OSLO, April 20 (AP).—Norway was warned today in the name of Adolf Hitler that she will feel the "full sharpness and dreadfulness" of the "German sword" unless she ceases all resistance to the German military occupation.



Gen. von Falkenhorst.

This warning was sounded by Gen. Nicholas von Falkenhorst, commander in chief of the army of occupation, in an address highlighting a German military parade and demonstration in celebration of Chancellor Adolf Hitler's 51st birthday.

The German commander also commuted the death sentences of all Norwegians "who, according to international laws of war, have forfeited their lives."

[This presumably is a reference to civilian sniping and other undercover acts against the German occupation.]

Charges Nation Misled.

The general said:

"I invite the Norwegian nation, which has been misled by the ministry of Premier John Nygaardsvold and its agents and which is marching toward ruin if it continues this nonsensical resistance, to receive the extended hand of German friendship.

Fix Ration Scale.

"But if the generosity of the Fuehrer and chancellor, and the mildness which I am showing today, should be interpreted as signs of weakness, the German sword shall hit Norway with all its full sharpness and dreadfulness."

At the same time that General von Falkenhorst was making his address in the square before Oslo university, the Nazi-established administration council for the Oslo district fixed a scale of rations to go into effect April 29.

It prescribes an allowance, per person per day, of 300 grams [approximately 10.6 ounces] of flour, peeled grain, peas, beans, or rice, or 240 grams of hard baked goods, or 390 grams of fresh baked goods.

Claim Germans Repulsed.

STOCKHOLM, April 20 (AP).—The German advance northward from Oslo was declared unofficially tonight to have been set back by a defeat at Elverum, one time refuge of King Haakon VII.

Contradicting earlier Swedish reports that the Nazis had captured the town of Elverum, about 75 miles north of German-held Oslo, travelers crossing the border from Norway insisted the bitterly contested town still is in the hands of the Norsemen.

Secrecy still shrouds the present refuge of King Haakon. Norwegian sources insist he still is in Norway.

Jumping Off Places.

Reports of British and French troop landings received by Swedish newspapers said one French and two British divisions, estimated at between 30,000 and 40,000 men, came ashore at Namsos, Molde, and Laerdal, possible jumping off places for drives on Bergen and Trondheim, two western ports. Other British forces are reported west and north of Narvik.

For their part, the Germans were rushing troops from near the Swedish border to Levanger, 40 miles northeast of Trondheim and south of Steinkjer, where real action may begin shortly between the allies and the Germans.

A communique from the Norwegian high command declared:

"Norwegian fighting forces are putting up a heroic defense on all fronts, especially around the Trondheim, Narvik, Elverum, and Hamar sectors.

Germans in Major Cities.

"The Germans of course are occupying major cities, as already known, but outside of the actual confined occupation there is little importance in their operations thus far. The southern part of Norway seems to be more or less in control of the German armed forces.

"Altho the Germans are in possession of both the Bergen and Oslo railroad stations, the major part of the trunk line running between these two points is in possession of Norwegian forces, thus making this particular line useless to the Germans."

A later Norwegian army communique from somewhere in Norway said:

"Norwegian troops occupied their new positions. Our advanced bodies had contact with the enemy. English forces participated in fighting at Ostlandet. At Randsfjorden two German tanks were destroyed in close fighting. The Germans yesterday bombed Rena and North Osen.

"In the district of Dombos last night about 50 parachute troops were imprisoned."

Kansas City, Mo., April 20.—The s-t-r-e-t-c-h girl has her wings. Kathleen Hildebrand, 19 year old redhead who had to add an inch to her height in a month to meet requirements for federal aviation student training, has taken her first solo flight.

"The nicest solo I've ever seen for a beginner," said her instructor, James F. Selby, after the eight minute hop.

Five months ago Kathleen won her stretching battle by pulling on doors, taking special exercises and consulting a chiropodist and chiropractor.

LOYOLA LOSES TO DE PAUL IN LEGAL DEBATE

De Paul university law students triumphed over their Loyola opponents yesterday in the finals of the Illinois State Bar association moot court competition in Lincoln hall on Northwestern university's Chicago campus.

The teams argued whether the legislature could convene itself, without the governor's call, and impeach a Municipal court judge. De Paul students took the affirmative and Loyola the negative. Judges were State Senator Harold G. Ward, Democratic nominee for attorney general; Charles P. Megan, former president of the Chicago and the state bar associations, and Albert E. Jenner Jr. of the Chicago Bar association.

The judges did not decide the question but graded the debaters on a point system. The De Paul debaters scored 19.75 points of a possible score of 36. Loyola scored 16.25. Fred Brandstrader of Loyola and Eugene Lieberman of De Paul were picked as the best speakers on the teams.

SWISS NAB ARMY OFFICER AND TWO AIDS IN SPY PLOT

BERNE, Switzerland, April 20 (AP).—The Swiss high command announced today that army counter espionage agents had made a number of arrests in a spy plot involving a Swiss army officer working in the judicial division of the war mnistry.

It was learned on high authority that the officer and two others were working for Germany.

A brief communique said that the officer, Lieut. Col. Hans Trueb, had confessed, adding that he had been spying for a certain foreign power."

The arrests were the first in Switzerland's nationwide drive against spies and potential "fifth column" leaders.

36 New Zealand Pilots Are En Route to Britain

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, April 20—The New Zealand air force, Defense Minister M. F. Jones said today, totals 3,600 men, with 380 officers. Thirty-six pilots are now on their way to Britain.

RUMANIAN FEAR GROWS DESPITE NAZI TRADE PACT

Suspect Hitler May Move to Assure Supplies.

BY SAM BREWER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUCHAREST, April 20.—Rumania and Germany today signed an amendment making a series of minor adjustments in their trade treaty, but the atmosphere of Bucharest is one of intense nervous tension.

Behind official satisfaction expressed over settlement of the trade questions, there is a widespread public wonder at what is to come next in the political sensations and rumors that have stirred Bucharest all week.

In amending the treaty Rumania obtained from Germany a promise of large quantities of munitions. Rumanian contracts with the Skoda works, in former Czecho-Slovakia, were confirmed and the Nazis promised to speed production. They made a gentlemen's agreement, too, to send Rumania at least 100 Messerschmitt fighting planes.

Rumania agreed to fulfill contracts for Rumanian wheat obtained by the Germans before Rumania recently prohibited export of the grain. About $8,000,000 worth of wheat is believed to be involved.

Political "Miracles" Develop.

That was the official news. But what the ordinary person here wants to know is what is going to happen to Rumania and in Rumania. Outside Rumania it may sound like a minor matter that Ion Mihalache, former cabinet member, became a member of the king's council, and that Julius Maniu, former premier, gave his approval in a letter that was modified only slightly, to eliminate a reference to their officially abolished Peasant party, before its publication. Foreigners take all that merely as a sign of national union in troubled times.

To Rumanians it appears almost a political miracle that those stout leaders of the late Peasant party have made that truce with King Carol's National Rebirth Front, and that the Rebirth Front weakened to the point of allowing Mihalache to be a councilor without joining the front.

Iron Guardists' Friends Freed.

It seems almost another miracle that whereas semi-Nazi iron guardists were being shot as traitors last September, their former colleagues are now being released from prisons and concentration camps. Rumanians are baffled to know the reason for the sudden change and hope German threats are not behind it. There is something deeper going on, they say, than a mere move to unify the country.

There are rumors that 100 iron guardists who have been refugees in Germany for two years will return.

Parliament's sudden closing has puzzled many. It was expected to remain in session until Wednesday and then recess over the Orthodox Easter next Sunday. Instead, when it met yesterday, the speaker read a royal decree closing the session, but it did not mention the reopening.

It all adds up to a general atmosphere of nerves produced by wondering which way Germany will pounce next, plus the possibility of an internal political tangle in efforts to unite the country's political elements and at the same time placate the Germans.

Fears of Russia have dropped to a low ebb. Where Russia was the bogeyman a few months ago and everybody said Germany wanted peace in the Balkans so that she could get supplies, the view in recent days is that since Germany is not getting the supplies she needs there is danger again. It is feared Adolf Hitler may move in to assure supplies.

BRITAIN TO 'EXPLORE' POSSIBILITY OF TRADE PACT WITH RUSSIANS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 20.—Trade negotiations with Russia will be undertaken "in an exploratory manner," it was officially announced today. The announcement, made from the foreign office, followed an interview between Ivan Maisky, soviet ambassador here, and Viscount Halifax, foreign minister.

Viscount Halifax.
[Top]
Ivan Maisky.

Britain, however, is cautious, declaring the basis for any agreement must "take into account the war situation." This is believed to mean that the government is insisting that Russia limit its trade with Germany and not pass on any British goods to the enemy.

The importance of trade with Russia has been increased by the cutting off of the Baltic states by the German occupation of Norway. Among the goods Britain is desirous of obtaining from Russia are timber and wood pulp in exchange for tin and rubber. Previous British-Russian negotiations were disrupted by signature of the Russian-German pact last August.

JUNE WILL SEE BREAD IN FRANCE UNDER RATIONING

Cards to Cover Just One Item—at First.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 20.—An individual rationing system will be inaugurated June 1 in France under which tickets will have to be presented when bread is purchased, it was announced officially today.

Food cards, to which bread tickets for June and July will be attached, will be distributed to 2,000,000 Parisians beginning May 10. This will be done in Paris by air raid wardens and 3,000 Boy Scouts. It is planned to have the job finished by May 31.

Parisians, who find the present food and drink restrictions only remind them how well they can wine and dine even on the limited régime, thus will have the war's results on the civil population brought a little closer.

How Card System Works.

The food cards are divided into detachable sections, each marked with the name of the month and numbered from 1 to 10. No. 1 stands for bread tickets and each month the section bearing this number and the name of the month will have to be exchanged for new bread tickets. The other numbers do not stand for anything yet. They are just included with an eye to eventualities. It is widely believed here that coffee will be the next item rationed.

Food cards are to be issued in six categories, as follows: 1. Infants under 3 years of age; 2. Children from 3 to 12; 3. Adults; 4. Adults doing hard work; 5. Persons over 70, and 6. Farmers.

Many Protests Anticipated.

Believing certain sections of the population will protest being put in category 3 instead of 4, the press today warned that the distinctions have been established by decree and that changes will not be made loosely.

Nevertheless, it was predicted there will be highly vocal indignation from at least one group—the Paris maids of all work who are classed as adults while housewives are rated as adults doing hard work and entitled to extra rations.

CHARGES BRITISH RATION SYSTEM KEEPS PRICES UP

Poor Can't Buy Food, Warns Journal.

BY LARRY RUE.

LONDON, April 20.—Charges that rationing has failed to keep prices down to the point where the population can benefit, which was said to be the original purpose of the scheme, are made in the current issue of Lancet, Britain's leading medical journal.

The journal declares that rationing "was meant to assure to each one of us four ounces of butter and four ounces of bacon weekly, but it was forgotten or never known that the poorest third of the population could not afford even in peace time more than the minimum diet necessary for health and that they cannot buy four ounces of butter and four ounces of bacon weekly. The scheme has not helped the poor get their share of food."

Car Orders Increase.

Lancet contends that "in this country foods are rationed far more by price than by the fiats of the ministry of food."

At the same time motor dealers reported that orders for new cars, despite the blackout and gasoline rationing, are three times larger than manufacturing production. A large portion of the automobile output has been earmarked for export to obtain foreign exchange. Many factories also are engaged in turning out war equipment.

Ask Higher Coal Output.

An increase in coal exports is being urged, it is reported. Thousands of miners have been asked to forego their summer holidays this year to help raise the output, it is said.

The miners are said to be insisting that they be given extra wages as an inducement to remain at work.

Speeds at 40 Knots

Detroit, Mich., April 20.—A new 59 foot, 20 ton torpedo boat designed for the United States navy has been given a test run on the Detroit river. Another is nearing completion in a local boat works.

Lieut. W. E. Howard Jr. of the navy department said the boat, known as the PT3, attained a speed of 40 knots in its first test. It is fitted with two machine gun mountings and is designed to fire two torpedoes at one time. Powered by two 1,200 horse power motors, the craft will be manned by an officer and crew of seven men.

If approved by a board of inspection from Washington, the boats will be delivered by the builders to the Norfolk navy yard.

JAPANESE ENVOY REASSURES U. S. ON DUTCH INDIES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 20.—Kensuke Horinouchi, the Japanese ambassador, called upon Secretary of State Cordell Hull today and voiced the assurance that the Japanese government feels there is no divergence between the American and Japanese points of view about the status of the Dutch East Indies.

This assertion was in conflict with reports from Tokio during the last week which quoted the Japanese press as declaring that the United States and Japan have different ideas regarding the status quo of the Dutch possessions.

Statement Left Doubt.

Both Secretary Hull and Hachiro Arita, the Japanese foreign minister, have announced that they are committed to the observance of the maintenance of the status quo. Secretary Hull's statement, however, took the form of a warning to Japan to keep hands off the islands, and the Japanese statement left some doubt as to whether Japan would or would not take any action regarding the Dutch Indies in an emergency.

Horinouchi said that Japan has a great interest in the islands but did not claim a special interest.

The Arita statement, the ambassador said, was designed primarily to ascertain the Netherlands government's attitude in the event some foreign power offered its preventive protection in the event of any further spread of the European war. The Netherlands reply that it would neither ask nor accept protection of foreign powers for the Dutch Indies was satisfactory to Japan, he said.

CHARGE NAZIS STIR ROW.

SHANGHAI, China, April 20.—Confidential reports charging Dr. Eugen Ott, German ambassador to Tokio, with having stirred up the dispute over The Netherlands East Indies were sent to the governments of Holland, Britain and other countries today by their representatives here.

Diplomatic sources indicated the reports charge Ambassador Ott paid 25,000 yen [about $5,870] to a chain of Japanese language newspapers centering in Tokio for the publication of a series of alarmist articles. These articles were said to have declared that if Adolf Hitler invaded The Netherlands, Great Britain and France would seize the Dutch East Indies and divert all the rubber, tin, and oil products to their own use, thereby crippling Japan's war supplies.

The German ambassador is said to have sought to increase tension between the United States and Japan, as German diplomacy is said to desire war between America and Japan in order to cut off essential military supplies for Britain and France.

Is it nesting time for Canada geese?

How many eggs were taken from the nests of turkeys and Muscovy ducks on the Tribune's Du Page County farm? What will be done with these eggs? The nesting problem of fowls and birds on the farm is the interesting subject of Bob Becker's article in the want ad section of today's Chicago Sunday Tribune.

HITLER SETTLES ON 3 YEARS AS LENGTH OF WAR

Hear He Has Ordered Great Air Attacks.

BY CAPT. M. M. CORPENING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BASEL, Switzerland, April 20.—Informed sources in Berlin hint that Adolf Hitler now has settled on three years as the duration of the war instead of the much popularized belief that it would end before this fall if the United States remained out.

This report is coupled with rumors in Berlin that a rift has developed between Hitler and Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering over certain jealousies, and that the fuehrer has ordered the annihilation of the British fleet as soon as an air base in Oslo, Norway, has been prepared.

Only two days ago, it is said, Hitler told members of his staff in a meeting at the chancellery to make plans for three years of hard sledding. More or less substantiating this report was the news that Denmark has been ordered to begin the slaughter of livestock in preparation for the maximum conservation of all kinds of foodstuffs.

Potatoes to Be Rationed.

Hitler is overlooking nothing that will aid in enlarging German resources for waging a prolonged conflict. Even potatoes, the only substantial food so far to escape restrictions, now are to be rationed.

As to the war in Norway, informed sources state that the most interesting phase of the conflict—the battleship versus the bomber—will be opened as soon as the Oslo air base is established. Airplanes and flying equipment are being rushed northward daily despite British efforts to halt such a move.

It is reported that half of Germany's bombers are in Norway or on their way, together with all reserve anti-aircraft equipment. Hitler is reported to have ordered the air drive on the British fleet in a message to Goering with an appended note to the effect that objections would be useless because the decision had been made.

Support from Submarines.

The air assault is to be supported by vigorous submarine action, it is said. A special course for submarine officers pertaining to coördination of air and U-boat warfare now is being given and will end in approximately 10 days. Another special school to study the use of chemicals also is being conducted in Berlin and any officers attached to air bases in the rear of the Siegfried line are permitted to attend.

Diplomacy also is reported playing its part in the schemes for action in both the north and the south. Negotiations are said to be in progress between Berlin and Sweden in the north and Berlin, Italy, and Hungary in the south.

The idea apparently is to keep Sweden and Hungary neutral but at the same time to use their territories to transport troops and material.

Troop Movements Continue.

The movement of German troops is said to be continuing apace in the southeast. There are said to be 140,000 troops around Graz, Austria, which is only a few miles from the Hungarian line.

Information also was reported to have been received from Jugo-Slavia to the effect that Nazi agents and members of the GSP [secret police] there have done excellent work in stirring up internal strife. This information was said to have been sent to Germany by a special messenger.

South Bend Boy, 15, Shot as He Peeps Into Window

South Bend, Ind., April 20 [Special].—Robert Groves, 15 years old, Central High school student, was shot and seriously wounded last night by police who surprised him peeping in a window at the home of Harry Smith. Officers John Howard and Charles Borowski were watching the house after receiving complaints that a prowler had been seen in the neighborhood. They said Groves fled when they tried to question him. After being shot he continued running to his home.

GASOLINE TANK EXPLODES.

An empty gasoline tank exploded in a filling station at 62d street and Ashland avenue yesterday while being welded. There was no damage.

Has Gay Night Out

BILLY WHITE.

New York City, April 20 [Special].—Billy White had a gay old time in Brooklyn the other night. And that's why he got punished. For Billy is only 4 years old and that's a tender age to begin a round of the bars and night clubs. It was this way: Billy got lost. Pretty soon he met up with William Redline, 41, who was visiting a few of the night spots. He took Billy along. The revellers were not discovered by the police until the following morning.

CAREFUL STUDY FIXES SITE OF FORT DEARBORN

Plans Move Forward for Lasting Memorial.

After two months of research the Fort Dearborn memorial commission has fixed the actual location of the historic stockade and blockhouses of the original fort, it was announced yesterday by Col. Harry A. Musham, chairman. A project to honor the pioneer heroes of Chicago is under way.

If the fort were to arise from its ashes, Col. Musham said, it would cover the south approach of the Michigan avenue bridge, with the northwest blockhouse overhanging the river. The course of the river has changed since 1803 when the fort was built by 65 militiamen under Capt. John Whistler.

Old Maps, Records Used.

The commission found Capt. Whistler's map dated 1808. This showed the position of the fort in relation to the river. From an 1821 survey made by John Walsh for the federal land office and from records in the national archives in Washington, the commission determined the old course of the river and charted the spot the fort would occupy in modern Chicago.

To avoid traffic confusion the commission is suggesting that markers of the fort outlines be placed 60 feet south of the real location.

Flag of 1812 to Fly.

A replica of the Fort Dearborn flag—the American 1812 banner with 15 stars and 15 bars—is to fly from the safety island in Michigan avenue at Wacker drive if the commission's recommendations are carried out.

A companion proposal to name the bridge at Michigan avenue after Fort Dearborn has been taken under advisement by the park board.

It is hoped that the remaining points of the program can be carried out before Flag day, June 14, when ceremonies are planned to signalize the new recognition given the rôle of Fort Dearborn in Chicago history.

The city council has authorized addition of a fourth star to Chicago's own flag in honor of Fort Dearborn. It also has approved an annual Fort Dearborn day March 9.

16 CASES OF EGGS STOLEN.

Police yesterday were asked to look for 16 cases of eggs which were stolen from a truck owned by Levy Yarrock of Reedsburg, Wis. The truck was parked near 13th street and Wabash avenue.

5 KILLED, 15 HURT IN BRITISH ARMS FACTORY BLAST

LONDON, April 20 (AP).—Five men were killed and 15 injured in a munitions factory explosion in north London today. The blast shook the entire neighborhood. Plate glass windows were shattered as far as a mile away.

One witness said he saw "a huge mass of gray smoke come up in the shape of a balloon with the end tapering over the factory."

It was the sixth blast in munitions or powder works since the war broke out. The plants, however, are constructed to confine damage to the minimum by providing that high explosives be made in small, isolated buildings.

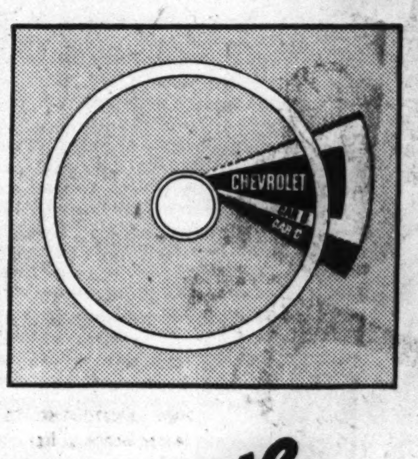
because ITS ACTION IS EASIEST!

When you shift in a Chevrolet, a vacuum booster (attached to the transmission housing) lends you a hand. You move the lever—and vacuum moves the gears. Tests prove Chevrolet's to be the easiest steering column gearshift to operate. Compared with the two cars next in sales, Chevrolet—the leader—requires only 2.8 foot-pounds of effort for a complete cycle of forward shifts, against 8.5 foot-pounds for Car B and 14.8 foot-pounds for Car C.

because ITS LEVER AND ITS "THROW" ARE SHORTER



Because Chevrolet's gearshift is not operated solely by main strength, but by vacuum power, it requires less leverage to enable the driver to operate it. Hence, the lever itself is the shortest of all, and its travel or "throw" is the least of all . . . and the shortest "throw" means the quickest shift. Lever Lengths: Chevrolet, 9½"; Car B, 11"; Car C, 11¼". Length of Throw: Chevrolet, 4¼"; Car B, 7½"; Car C, 10⅜".

because IT'S EFFORTLESS IN TRAFFIC

Stop and Go—Red and Green—Halt! Start! That's traffic. And that's where Chevrolet's easy action is most appreciated. The larger Tiptoe-Matic Clutch makes footwork easier, and Vacuum-Power Shift takes most of the effort out of shifting. Remember, vacuum power does 80% of the work, leaving only 20% of the shifting effort to be supplied by the driver. No tugging and shoving on a long, unwieldy lever—just a finger-flip—that's all there is to it!

RUSS BASES NEAR ALEUTIANS SPUR ALASKA DEFENSE

U. S. Army Finds Soviets Only 100 Miles Away.

Washington, D. C., April 20 (AP).—Reports that Russia has established naval and air bases near the Aleutian islands, congressional sources said today, are behind intensified army efforts to strengthen defenses in Alaska.

Informed legislators said they understood the army had confirmed that Russia has constructed bases on the Siberian coast less than 100 miles from American owned islands in the Aleutian chain which extends southwestward from Alaska.

The army's high command was said to take the attitude that the bases were designed primarily for defense against possible attack by Japan on Siberia, but to feel that the United States could not afford to assume that such establishments would never be used against it.

Marshall Faces Quiz.

It was indicated that Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, would be questioned on this point when he testifies before a senate committee, probably next week, on the army's request for $12,743,000 for construction of a strategic air base at Anchorage, Alaska. The house turned down the request. War department officials have made known, however, that they will ask the senate to restore at least $6,000,000 of the sum to the department supply bill.

The army already is building one air base in Alaska, near Fairbanks, but Gen. Marshall told a house military appropriations subcommittee in February that study "shows definitely that the most important strategic missions could be carried out effectively only when based in the area between the mountains and the sea, with the best location in the vicinity of Anchorage."

He said the Fairbanks base was necessary to provide the air corps with training essential for cold weather operations in the north.

Double Size of Cruisers.

Also bearing on national defense was a disclosure by Chairman Vinson [D., Ga.] of the house naval committee that the navy contemplates building 20,000 ton cruisers—twice the size of its present "treaty type"—as soon as the pending $655,000,000 fleet expansion bill becomes law and funds are available. Vinson mentioned this intention at a hearing on proposals for reorganization of the navy department.

The larger ships, it was explained, would have greatly increased cruising range which would make them more useful for misisons in the far Pacific or the South Atlantic. They also would be better suited for duty with the projected 45,000 ton battleships, designed to have greater speed and range than any now in the fleet.

HOSPITAL JOINS ARMY PROGRAM FOR BASE UNITS

Staffs Will Be Established for Emergency Duty.

The United States army has asked a number of hospitals thruout the country to organize medical units that would serve as army base hospitals in the event of a national emergency, it was learned yesterday. The program is similar to the procedure by which 50 base hospitals were organized by the army in 1917 and 1918 for overseas duty during the world war.

Asa Bacon, superintendent of the Presbyterian hospital in Chicago, confirmed reports that Maj. Gen. James C. Magee, surgeon general of the army in Washington, D. C., has asked the hospital to organize one of the army medical units. The unit would be inactive in peacetime but would be ready to mobilize on short notice for service in wartime or in other national emergency.

Board Approves Proposal.

Bacon said the hospital's board of managers approved the war department's proposal at a recent meeting and has communicated its acceptance to Maj. Gen. Magee. The Presbyterian hospital put army base hospital No. 13 into the field in the world war. Its record of service then is said to have prompted the war department to include it among the units now being set up.

In wartime each of the base hospitals would have a capacity of approximately 1,000 beds. The staff of each unit would be made up of about 40 officers, 120 nurses, and 400 enlisted men.

Except for the two commanding officers of each base, all officers of the base hospitals would be taken from private medical institutions. The commanding officers would be obtained from the regular army.

Bases to Be Partly Filled.

The staffs are not being fully organized at present. Only the officers' posts are to be filled, with the selection of nurses and enlisted men left until the national emergency, if any, arises. Bacon said the Presbyterian hospital is waiting for further instructions on how to organize and instruct its officers' unit.

Private hospitals which agree to affiliate base units with the army are not required to supply any equipment. Staff members selected to join the base hospitals are free to continue their professional work as civilians during peacetime.

St. Luke's hospital of Chicago put base hospital No. 14 into the field in the world war, and another Chicago base unit was recruited from the staffs of a number of hospitals. Information was not available yesterday whether the war department has asked Chicago medical institutions other than Presbyterian hospital to join in the present program.

AIR LINE PILOTS FIGHT SHIFT OF AVIATION RULE

Roosevelt Proposal Puts Lives in Peril, They Say.

President Roosevelt's fourth reorganization plan, which would put control of civil aeronautics back in the hands of the department of commerce, was assailed yesterday as a threat to safety in the air.

The men who hold that lives would be endangered by the President's proposal are the men who fly the nation's huge passenger ships—members of the Air Line Pilots' association. Under the leadership of their president, David L. Behncke, they began bombarding senators and congressmen with telegrams and messages opposing the change.

Pilots Indorse Campaign.

The campaign was indorsed by the pilots at a meeting here Friday night. National headquarters of the association, which has a membership of more than 350 of the 375 air line pilots in the country, is at 3145 West 63d street.

Mr. Roosevelt submitted the reorganization order to congress April 11. It would abolish the air safety board and place its functions in the Civil Aeronautics authority, which in turn would be put under the jurisdiction of the secretary of commerce.

The order touched off immediate opposition in both houses of congress. One of the most outspoken opponents was Senator Pat McCarran [D., Nev.], author of the bill which established the CAA in 1938. The act created the air safety board, which investigates accidents and makes recommendations designed to prevent recurrences.

Accidents Cut to Minimum.

"The pilots are pleading for the safety of their passengers as well as their own," said Behncke in outlining the association's stand. "Contrast the record before and after the CAA and air safety board took over in August, 1938.

"Under department of commerce regulation 473 persons, including 146 air line pilots, lost their lives in air crashes."

Behncke said that since the air safety board was established accidents have been cut to a minimum.

"A world air safety record has been set," he said. "There has not been a passenger death on our country's air lines in more than a year. There has not been a pilot fatality in 16 months."

TRACTION EXPERT DEFINES LIMITS OF STRAPHANGER

Twenty minutes of straphanging on a street car journey is not unreasonable, but any additional time spent standing calls for criticism of the service, Maj. R. F. Kelker, city traction expert, testified yesterday.

Maj. Kelker appeared at a hearing before Examiner Benjamin Morris of the Illinois Commerce commission on complaints against the Chicago Surface Lines. Overcrowding of cars on Western, Kedzie and Archer avenues was charged at a previous hearing by County Clerk Michael J. Flynn and Alds. James F. Kovarik [15th], Michael P. Hogan [13th] and Bryan Hartnett [12th]. They said patrons were forced to stand half an hour or more in packed cars.

Maj. Kelker recommended additional cars on the Western and Kedzie lines, the routing of some of them to the loop over Ogden and Blue Island avenues, and opening of an auxiliary bus line in Archer avenue. The next hearing was set for May 3.

OTT KING OF VALEEN DIES.

English, Ind., April 20 [Special].—Ott King, 50 years old, a farmer of Valeen, died today in hospital at Bedford. His widow, a daughter and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James H. King, Valeen, survive.

PUSH HUNT FOR PURDUE STUDENT, MISSING SINCE LAST WEDNESDAY

City and state police have been asked to search for Donald R. Moeller, 18 years old, who disappeared from his home at 5626 North Spaulding avenue early Wednesday. He left a note saying he was going, but gave no reason. The youth left Purdue university recently because of ill health. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Moeller, fear his illness may have made him despondent. He is nearly 6 feet tall, weighs 154 pounds, has blue eyes and dark hair, and was wearing a green campus coat, brown hat, tan army shoes, and dark gray trousers. His father is division service manager for the Mack-International Motor Truck corporation.

Train Hits a Landslide; 25 Passengers Shaken

Campbellsburg, Ky., April 20 (AP).—Twenty-five passengers on a southbound Louisville & Nashville railroad train were shaken up today when the train struck a landslide in a cut near here. The engine and first three cars were derailed. The passengers were brought here in school busses and later taken to Louisville.

EMPIRES' ORDER FOR TOMMY GUNS STIRS U. S. ARMY

Fire Power of Weapon 8 Times Old Rifle.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 20.—Recent British and French purchase of Thompson submachine guns as an infantry weapon has brought to light a controversy within the United States army as to the relative merits of the weapon, popularly known as the Tommy gun, and the Garand semi-automatic rifle with which American troops are being armed.

The British recently placed an initial order for 7,500 of the submachine guns with the Auto-Ordnance corporation of New York and the French have ordered 6,000.

The British order followed the appearance of a few of the weapons on the western front in the hands of a regular regiment, which had been ordered to the combat zone from Hongkong, where the weapons were part of regular equipment. A number of other Thompson submachine guns seized in Ireland during the stormy days which led to the establishment of the Free State, also are used by British troops.

More Fire Power Needed.

The French order came as a result of a general staff decision that the arming of infantry has been wrong for thirty years and that the rifle should be replaced with a light machine gun to give the individual soldier the proportionate increase in fire power which has been given to artillery in stepping up from the 75 mm. gun to the 105 mm. gun.

On the heels of these orders it was learned that for some years there has been agitation within the army for the adoption of the Thompson submachine gun or an army development of the weapon as the standar dinfantry arm. The adoption of the Garand semi-automatic rifle as the standard arm has intensified rather than silenced this movement. Only this week manufacturers were called upon to submit designs of a submachine gun by the war department.

A considerable number of officers hold that the submachine gun is as superior to the Garand as the Garand is to the Springfield rifle. They argue that the Garand is an untried weapon, never used in combat, where the Thompson submachine guns were carried into combat by the marines in Nicaragua in 1922 and have been in use satisfactorily thruout the world.

Test Proves Effectiveness.

Advocates of the Tommy gun recall a recent test of the weapon by the ordnance department as showing conclusively its superiority. The weapon fired 10,000 rounds without a single malfunction or broken part. The test was made last Feb. 27.

The weapon used in the test was picked at random from the company's stock. The shots were fired—150 rounds full automatic and 50 rounds singly until the 10,000 rounds were exhausted—in two hours and five minutes. The gun was fired without cooling, oiling, or cleaning in any way and still was serviceable at the end of the test, having worn only slightly.

The life of the Garand rifle barrel is from 8,000 to 10,000 rounds. Where the submachine gun can shoot 600 rounds a minute at full automatic fire and almost half that many at semi-automatic fire, the average rifleman can shoot only 50 aimed shots a minute with the Garand. The expert may get as many as 80 shots a minute at this range and 100 at a range of 50 yards. In a rapid fire test before experts at the Aberdeen, Md., proving grounds last fall, the Garand jammed after three shots.

The submachine gun has the advantage in that its drum contains 50 45-caliber bullets or a clip of 20 bullets as against 8 30-caliber bullets in the clip of the Garand. A soldier can fire the former in bursts of three or four bullets and with tracer bullets to tell him how his shots are going.

The submachine gun can be fired as the soldier runs and from the hip with accuracy. It also can be aimed up to 600 yards, which is considered the maximum of effectiveness for rifle fire. In actual combat fire would come in far lower ranges where the submachine gun is at its best.

One soldier with a submachine gun is the superior of eight armed with Garands in fire power just as one soldier armed with a Garand is the superior of three armed with the Springfield rifle.

Few Inches Shorter.

The two weapons weigh about the same—the Garand about 9 pounds and the Thompson about 10. The overall length of the Thompson is 33 inches, which can be reduced by removing the stock. The overall length of the Garand is 43 inches.

Length of weapon is a considerable factor, officers say, when it must be borne in mind that any land fighting that American troops may do, unless an expeditionary force is sent abroad, will come in Canadian woods or South American jungles, where a long barreled weapon would prove cumbersome.

The Garand rifle has 72 parts, some almost of watch precision. The Thompson has 38, all sturdy. Some weapons put in service in 1922 still are in use.

It is possible for a soldier to carry 400 to 500 rounds of the 45 caliber bullets in clips and drums. He can only carry about half as many rifle bullets. The 45 bullet will knock a man down no matter where it hits him, whereas men have been pierced by the rifle bullet and continued to charge.

Production Can Be Speeded.

Both weapons at present cost about the same. The submachine gun sells for about $200 and the rifle can be produced for slightly more. Millions have been spent in its development. Increased production can bring down the cost per rifle. However, the simpler submachine gun can be produced at the rate of 20,000 a month with present facilities, or almost double the number of Garands produced in three years.

At present the American army has 1,500 of the submachine guns in use by tank crews and cavalry combat and scout car crews. Failure of the gun to make more headway in the army has been attributed partly to the fact that it is the only privately produced weapon in the army—a tribute in itself—where all other weapons are produced by the government, or under government contract.

Those who complete the first course, lasting 12 weeks, will move on to Randolph Field, Tex., and thence to Kelly Field, Tex., for their final six months of training. The cadets upon graduation are eligible for commissions as second lieutenants in the air corps and regular assignments of from one to seven years at full pay.

Hunt Bandits Who Robbed Pair of Cash and Jewelry

Police yesterday sought two bandits who took cash and jewelry amounting to about $1,600 from Julius Roth, 3318 Sheridan road, and his wife, Eileen, in front of 2647 North Washtenaw avenue, Friday night. Roth, a bakery owner, lost $60. His wife lost $18 and two rings.

OHIO RIVER GOES ON A RAMPAGE; THOUSANDS FLEE

Towns Are Isolated; Many Roads Closed.

Cincinnati, O., April 20 [Special].—Thousands of persons were homeless tonight as a result of flood waters that gripped the upper half of the Ohio river valley. Southern Ohio was turned into a maze of lakes, and entire towns were isolated.

Streams also poured out of their banks in the lower Ohio watershed, closing 22 roads in southern Indiana and prompting warnings to all lowland residents to evacuate their homes. Four and a half inches of rain this week brought a fifive foot rise in the Wabash river at Mount Carmel, Ill., in the last 24 hours. However, it was not expected that extensive damage would be caused in Indiana and Illinois.

Ohioans Hard Hit.

Most of the homeless were in rural Ohio, nearly a third of which was inundated. Athens and Logan, O., were virtually isolated, and water swept into Marietta, O., a pioneer city of 15,000, whose merchants moved out their stocks. A general exodus was begun at Pomeroy, O., in expectation of five feet of water in the main street by morning.

Roads were closed at 83 places in Ohio as the Hocking river valley experienced its worst flood since 1913. Tracks of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad were washed out in several places in Ohio and West Virginia. A landslide covered Chesapeake and Ohio railroad tracks at Orton, W. Va.

Water rose menacingly around Pittsburgh's "Golden Triangle," famed downtown business district, for the second time in a month, but federal weather men predicted there would be no serious damage.

At Cincinnati the Ohio climbed steadily toward an expected crest of 58 feet, which is six feet above flood stage. Severe damage is not caused, however, unless the crests exceed flood stage by 10 or 15 feet.

Altho many families were in need after being forced from their homes, some being rescued in boats, only one death was reported. Bernard Wood, 4 years old, of Buck, W. Va., drowned when he tumbled into the swollen waters of Wolf creek.

The American Red Cross assigned ten members of its disaster relief staff to assist local chapters in evacuation, feeding, and housing at dangr spots along the flood front from Pittsburgh to Evansville, Ind.

GIVE THE MIDDLE WEST TRANSPORTATION EQUALITY.

The middle west is the great natural resource storehouse of the nation. The states in the Mississippi valley basin contain 92 per cent of the iron ore deposits, 80 per cent of the coal, 85 per cent of the sulphur, 76 per cent of the petroleum, and they produce 67 per cent of the nation's agricultural products. In addition, they produce large quantities of zinc, lead, copper, natural gas, and countless other raw materials.

With a vast network of railways, highways, and inland waterways crisscrossing the territory in all directions, it would seem that growth in manufacturing, merchandising, population, and prosperity would be a natural result, but census figures and other reliable statistics show that, in the 20 year period from 1910 to 1930, the "deep water rim" of the country, representing only 7 per cent of the land area and situated within 50 miles of the seacoast, had a population gain of twice that of the normal gain of the entire country. In manufactured goods the midcontinent area gained 11½ per cent less than the normal gain of the country as a whole. Undoubtedly, the census which is now being taken and a review of the statistics will show that this trend was even more pronounced during the last ten years.

The middle west paid its share of the cost of constructing the Panama canal, and by so doing created an artificial waterway which enabled industries along the seaboard to ship to competitive markets at much less cost than the same commodities could be moved from middle west points of origin. The fourth section of the Esch-Cummins act of 1920 effectively prevented the railroads from meeting the coastwise competition.

Motor transportation over the highways has also been seriously handicapped by the various so-called trade barriers established by the different states thru which truck transportation must pass in long haul traffic. The railroads also have been guilty of lending a hand to the exodus of manufacturing from the middle west. Generally speaking, the freight rates they have made on raw materials to the eastern seaboard are relatively low, and rates on manufactured articles thruout the middle west region are higher than rates along the seaboard, which are kept down by coastwise water competition.

The inland waterway extending from Chicago to New Orleans has been handicapped by the Taft decision limiting the diversion from Lake Michigan to an annual average of 1,500 cubic feet per second.

Until the representatives in congress from the midcontinent area become fully aware of the causes for the decline of prosperity in their home states and act effectively as a unit in doing something about it, there is every reason to believe that the decline will continue. If middle west industry and agriculture are to be revived and if they are to be allowed to grow as they should, they must be allowed to compete with other sections of the country by means of comparable transportation costs. The following legislative program would accomplish it:

[1] Defeat the Wheeler-Lea transportation bill, which would extend the blight of government regulation and management to all forms of transportation.

[2] Repeal the fourth section of the transportation act and permit railroads to compete with coastwise shipping.

[3] Take away from the Interstate Commerce commission the power to fix minimum rates and give transportation management a chance again to show that competition is the life of trade.

[4] Pass legislation permitting an increase in the annual average diversion from Lake Michigan to at least 5,000 cubic feet per second.

[5] Lift those trade barriers which handicap a free flow of interstate commerce.

THE NORSE CITADEL.

When King Haakon, rallying his people against the Germans, termed the invasion the worst visitation in more than a century, he understated the facts, if anything. Norway had bloody civil wars in medieval times and thru royal marriages was ruled for centuries by its Scandinavian neighbors, but non-Scandinavian peoples have never waged war on Norwegian soil.

In the middle ages the people to the south had no thought of invading Norway for the very good reason that they were too busy keeping the Norse away from their own doors. Norway was finally pacified by the cross and not the sword, and the last great voyage of the Vikings was that of King Sigurd the Jerusalem-farer, who led sixty dragon ships out of Bergen and after a 10 year voyage took from the Moslems the fortress city of Sidon that had defied the mailed knights and war machines of the Crusaders.

Thereafter the Norwegian fighting men stayed at home, and there was little temptation to disturb them. The risk of invasion outweighed any prospective gains, for Norway's sparse fields have always raised better men than crops, while the whole country, with its mountains and rocky coast, was a great fortress.

By surprise, aided by treachery within, the Nazis now hold the gates of the fortress. So soon as the Norwegians recover from their surprise and rally their forces it seems improbable that the German forces will be able to push much farther than they have gone already. But it will be equally hard for the Norwegians and British to retake the territory already seized. Fighting in the Norwegian valleys seems much like fighting in the streets of a town. The defenders, forced from one position, find another one waiting at their backs. Even if the British make the most strenuous efforts, it may well be fall before the last of the invaders is expelled from the citadel.

WHY THEY ARE FOR THE THIRD TERM.

The Illinois Democratic party organization comes into the political campaign with the vilest objective a political management ever had. These organization politicians are by pretense and clamor the most subservient New Dealers in the land. In practice and by principle they have no use for any deal that isn't concerned with the rake-off, the political slice on public services and expenditures. Their hymns of praise to Mr. Roosevelt sound strangely in the ears of the people of Illinois who are conversant with their works. The odor of the incense they burn would be too strong for the nose of any person who had not been immunized by a dosage of overpowering egotism.

The Illinois Democratic politicians are covering up. They are seeking to avoid the consequences of exposed corruption and crime, including, it may be, the strange death of the principal witness against them. They did not hesitate to accept the verdict that F. Lynden Smith, the director of public works, took his own life. Pathologists who made the last examination said he died a natural death.

That finding was rejected and the Democratic politicians who were in dread of what he might disclose take refuge in a verdict which said he killed himself, it implying that it was he who had reason to fear exposure and not they. Thereby they keep alive the suspicion that if he died of violence it was not self-inflicted to avoid disgrace he feared for himself but was used to keep him from disgracing others. The suicide verdict is full of such intimations which would have been dispelled by the confirmed truth that death was from natural causes.

From time to time things the dead man had disclosed and might have enlarged are revealed or hinted at. He now seems to have been instrumental, by giving information, in preventing the signing of road construction contracts which would have contained nearly half a million dollars of graft to be divided by gangsters and politicians.

If Smith had lived, a story of corruption greater than this state has ever known might have been unfolded. It may break out yet. The Democratic organization which wears the false face of the New Deal is taking no chances. Federal agents are in the state. Contracts, and incomes, and the gangster connection with public services and public works are being investigated.

The maskers have every reason to fear that if they lose influence and control they will be sent to the penitentiary to join the corruptionists of Louisiana and Missouri. They must retain the favor of Washington and they must remain in the key political positions in the state. They hope to gain immunity from federal prosecution by delivering themselves and all their vote getting organization to the third term. They hope that Mr. Roosevelt's popularity is still a vote-getter and that they can save their skins.

For this security and this protection they are willing to turn the country over to the New Deal, reinforced in its dictatorial ambitions by a third term, and such is their desperation that they would accept the establishment of a Nazi dictatorship in Washington to make sure of their own salvation. This is the vilest objective a political organization ever had.

ONLY HALF THE STORY.

Philip F. W. Peck, president of the Greater Central District association, urges its members to work for amendment of Chicago's zoning code in order to reclaim the city's blighted areas.

He lists as blighted 44 of the 51 square miles bounded by Belmont and Kedzie avenues, 63d street and Lake Michigan, with a population of 1,300,000. The zoning code has contributed to the blight by allotting too much land for commercial, large apartment, and hotel use, and too little for small homes, says Mr. Peck.

Mr. Peck is right, but he tells only half the story. Revision of the zoning code is necessary if the blighted areas are to be redeemed. It is even more necessary if the blight is to be prevented from spreading to the good residential sections of the city.

The weaknesses of the present antiquated, castles-in-the-sky zoning code are apparent by now to every one, it seems, except the members of the city council, who alone may amend the code. Those gentlemen appear to be too busy thumping the tub for Roosevelt and Humanity to embark on any such prosaic undertaking as protecting the home owners of Chicago against the encroachment of slums on their property.

DRUGGED ATHLETES.

[Indianapolis News.]

Dr. Thurman B. Rice says in the Indiana University Alumni magazine that a powerful drug is being used "by certain athletic coaches for the purpose of getting the last mite of strength from their protégés. This is an extremely serious matter." The drug may be bought without a prescription.

Dr. Rice absolves the athletic departments of "the better schools" of blame, but believes that it should be a criminal offense for a coach to drug an athlete. There will be no dissent from that view if the stimulant is harmful.

The charges made by Dr. Rice, who has had much to say in the past about the possibility of over emphasizing school athletics in Indiana, are serious. He makes the specific assertion that certain coaches are guilty of a practice that may work permanent injury to school athletes. Presumably the statement is backed by ample evidence. If so, the facts should be submitted to the people, and officially to the Indiana State High School Athletic association without delay.

HAVE NO FEAR.

It was a small town in Scotland, and the Englishman was paying his first visit there. He stopped to make a few inquiries of a native of the place. After a few remarks he said to him:

"I suppose you have a provost here?"

"Ay," said the man.

The man looked at him in amazement.

"Insignia?" he inquired.

"Well," said the other, "does he wear a chain?"

"Na, na," was the reply. "He gangs loose; but dinna be feared, he's quite harmless."

A VISIT TO HADES

BY KIMPEI SHEBA.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BEPPU, Kyushu Island, Japan.—Beppu is one of the few cities you can call a "hell of a place" and offend nobody. The 50,000 ruddy inhabitants of this resort are so proud of the resemblance of parts of Beppu to the universal conception of Hades that they advertise a sightseeing tour of the environs as a "trip thru hell."

About the first thing you are asked as you arrive here is whether you have been to Hades. If not—and who has?—you are persuaded to make a trip there by modern American sightseeing buses. Well upholstered cars seating 24 passengers leave here for what is advertised as Hades every 30 minutes on week days and every 15 minutes on Sundays and holidays. You soon learn that an amazing number of people want to see the infernal regions. The buses are packed and tiny folding canvas chairs are often passed to those standing in the aisle.

A ride of about 30 minutes brings you to hell's gate. You get off and head for the entrance, then discover that you can't get into hell for nothing. There is an admission charge of 60 sen [about 15 cents.

"What the hell!" you say, perhaps, but you pay. Then the Japanese conception of purgatory begins to unfold.

It is not without good reason that this place has been named Hades. Thick clouds of vapor rise from bubbling ponds, some blood red, others yellowish, and still others grayish. Some of the crevices give out loud detonations and eject lava and mud. To make the scene more realistic, masks of horned demons and other frightful objects adorn the walls. The mythological Stygian creek and the pit of Acheron could hardly have been more devilish.

It is explained that this natural phenomenon is due to the volcanic earth strata. Beppu is located in the center of one of the most potent volcanic chains in the world. The streams of water running under the earth are heated by live lava and shot to the surface in hundreds of places. At some the water is muddy, at others crystal clear.

The clear thermal waters are piped and used in the natural hot springs, which are claimed to have healing powers for ailments ranging from indigestion to lovesickness.

The Japanese have a reputation for being poor propagandists. They did not get it in Beppu. Clear voiced conductresses on the sightseeing buses advertise the charms of this resort in enchanting prose and poetry. In between these they sing songs praising the scenery as well as the therapeutic virtues of the hot springs. On the side they are likely to offer to sell you anything from medicinal preparations, made from the mud in Hades, to real estate.

Not only the bus girls, but the whole town goes in for advertising and salesmanship. That they are successful is attested by the thriving industry that has been built up in medicinal preparations obtained from the thermal springs, as well as by the fact that two million cash customers visit Beppu each year.

The natives, however, apparently do not put unfounded faith in the curative powers of their products. There are as many drug stores and physicians in Beppu as in any city of equal size in this country.

Beppu is linked to the main island by a 15 minute ferry boat service between Moji and Shimonoseki, by a three hour plane service to Osaka, and by an overnight boat trip to Kobe. The asphalt-concrete highway along the coast from Beppu to Oita, about 10 miles to the south, puts any motor road in the far east to shame.

Recently the inhabitants began utilizing the thermal springs for many new purposes. The hot water is piped to steam heat houses. It is run thru hothouses where tomatoes, lettuce, melons, and other vegetables and fruits are grown out of season. Last year Beppu sold about $120,000 worth of hothouse products.

A unique experiment is the raising of alligators. Alligator skin is used for handbags and women's slippers and fetches good prices. Four years ago a hotel owner bought 100 baby alligators from Florida and placed them in lukewarm spring water. The creatures thrived and are fullgrown now. The experiment, however, cannot be called a success because the alligators do not reproduce.

YOSHIDA, Shikoku Island, Japan.—This lonely hamlet, far from any of Japan's smoky cities, is an example of what is happening to countless similar towns in Japan. To fishing and farming, industry is being added as a leading pursuit of the inhabitants.

Most of the young people in this village are girls. They get what they regard as boom wages in the newly established canning industry—about 20 cents a day. You wonder whether the absence of young men is due entirely to the war in China, but soon discover that this is not always true. Many young men go to the cities, where wages are higher and work plentiful. There is practically no need for skilled laborers in hamlets like Yoshida, you are informed.

An aged artisan told me his sons all left him, saying they would rather die than rot in such a place. This, however, is not a recent trend. Yoshida's young men have been looking for opportunities elsewhere ever since Japan's doors were opened to the world by Commodore Perry 85 years ago.

Many of the first emigrants to California and Hawaii went from Yoshida and some have prospered and returned with fortunes, but not to live in their native town. Others have set themselves up in business and industries in the big cities. Kamesaburo Yamashita, one of the country's shipping magnates, came from this town. He recently gave it its first industrial high school.

A thing that amazes visitors is the grasp of national and international affairs that these villager possess. They are tremendously interested in the European war. They get most of their information from the newspapers and the radio. The first question an 80 year old town headman asked me was whether President Roosevelt would run for a third term.

You discover that the reason for this interest in world affairs is due not merely to curiosity. With the dependence of the towns more and more on the export trade, changes in the international situation greatly affect the lives of people who until a few years ago paid little attention to world affairs.

Because of poor transportation facilities the fishermen of Yoshida until comparatively recently sold their catches to neighboring towns and virtually gave away what they could not sell. Farmers used the surplus for fertilizer. Today the fishermen are canning their surplus and enjoying a new prosperity.

The farmers grow oranges and tangerines and rice and vegetables. They sell their fruits to the big cities, but usually have a surplus. They are now canning tangerines and selling them not only in Japanese cities, but in the United States.

Two big canneries employ several hundred girls. Three months of the year the factories can tangerines. The rest of the time they can marmalade, peaches, strawberry jam, sardines, and tuna. Recently they began experimenting with tomatoes.

The inhabitants are making more money than ever before. Wages are skyrocketing. But one sees few signs of prosperity in the main street. About the only impressive thing is a new motion picture theater, the largest building in town. The townspeople dress shabbily compared with those in the cities.

There are virtually no new houses. Some of the structures have been standing for two or three generations. The villagers say they do not like to tear down their ancestral homes.

THE HOSPITAL AND THE PATIENT.

No one enters a hospital from pure choice. The journey is usually a matter of necessity. While there may be nothing seriously wrong, nevertheless most of us will pass over the threshold with a goodly amount of trepidation. Altho we differ widely in temperament—outward courage—a show of bravado may not in any sense portray one's internal apprehension. The hypersensitive person may be so disturbed by the episode that considerable allowance will need to be made for symptoms that should be meaningless.

Now, all of this demands that every one about the institution should be alert always to the emotional reactions of those who are ill. There is far more to medicine than mere diagnosis and treatment. The human being as a whole—body and soul—will require sympathetic management.

Take, for example, the harassed, worried mother who has left several children and an anxious husband at home. She requires some relatively minor surgical procedure, but all too often her nervousness works against recovery and spoils her convalescence completely. Perhaps an economic situation intrudes itself which only adds to her burdens. The head of the house—the breadwinner—who comes in for a heart ailment and who doubts that he will ever be able to return to work, fusses constantly about what will happen to his family. In all such cases the mental outlook militates against well being in marked degree.

To these—and to thousands of others—the hospital must stand as a bulwark of confidence and trust. At the same time it must epitomize the highest medical and surgical skill. The attitude of every patient will depend upon the personnel—including nurses, physicians, interns, and employés of all grades. The timid, diffident woman may be made so comfortable, so conscious that everything is being done for her safety, that improvement will be forthcoming.

As we all know, the vital forces of repair may be defeated by pain, fear, or anger. A fast pulse, sleeplessness, even alterations in body secretions will accompany terror in any form. We have all observed those "jittery" unfortunates who lose appetite, finally falling into a type of indifference toward recovery that is serious.

One reason why it is desirable to spend two or three days in a well equipped hospital before an operation is performed is that the brief period of getting acquainted may bring a sense of relaxation that will not only build reserve but develop a stronger physique against the surgical ordeal. Surrounded with interesting and helpful attendants—the dread of an unfavorable outcome will vanish, the anesthetic be taken easily, and the patient returned to his room scarcely aware that anything has happened.

Encouragement then must be a watchword. Not a false kind of reassurance that cannot be truthfully substantiated but, with a knowledge of the facts—as they present themselves—much hope can be given honestly. This attitude has changed the outlook of many a victim—lifting him from despair to a forward looking state of mind. There can be just as much frankness as circumstances permit. With the suspicious individual, it is always well to explain each maneuver in detail. Most persons are sufficiently intelligent to understand that nothing will be undertaken that is not necessary.

The hospital that is as cold as a tomb, as nerveless as an icicle, does not deserve the name. Kindness must be the foundation stone upon which the entire organization is built. Furthermore, the senses should not be offended. The air of the corridors should not remind one of a morgue. There is no virtue in odoriferous antiseptics that cannot be surpassed by soap and water and a vigorously wielded scrub brush. Color, too, is essential, as white walls can be no cleaner than those tinted, with pastel shades—and what a difference in cheer!

Houses of healing must personify the high purposes to which they are dedicated. But those within count far more than stone and mortar. There are good and sincere people in the world and when we leave—after a sojourn of weeks or months—may we be glad that we have known some of them and that we can count them friends.

SACROILIAC JOINT.

A. B. writes: What is a sacroiliac condition?

REPLY.

Some displacement, irritation, or injury to the fixed joint [sacroiliac] where the sacrum [lower end of the spinal column] and the ilium meet. These two bones help to form the pelvis.

FRECKLES.

R. M. writes: Can freckles be removed?

REPLY.

True freckles cannot be removed without injury to the skin. The deposits of pigment lie well beneath the outer layers. Avoid the "bright lights" [ultraviolet] and they will fade.

MEASUREMENT.

S. B. writes: What kind of medicine is a milligram?

REPLY.

Not a medicine at all—merely a measure of weight. A milligram is 1/1000th of a gram.

TODAY IN HISTORY

April 21, 1782

Birthday of Friederich Froebel, German educational reformer and originator of the kindergarten system. He was the son of poor parents, was considered a dunce in school, and as a youth was apprenticed to a forester. Later he studied for a time at Jena, came under the influence of Pestalozzi, served in the Prussian army, and settled in an educational community at Keilhau. He discovered that schools were suffering because of the lack of training of children of preschool age, and founded his first kindergarten [garden of children] in 1837. He died broken hearted in 1852 after the Prussian government had ordered his schools closed for supposedly socialistic beliefs.

MOVIES FOR THE CHILDREN.

Chicago, April 14.—I live in Englewood and as a mother I want to protest against the moving pictures shown to children on Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Why must theater managers insist on showing such horror pictures as "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "Green Hell," and "Jamaica Inn," to name but a few, for the entertainment of our children when they must know 95% of the patrons are children on Saturday? Why can't they show pictures that won't fill their minds with cruelty and cunning in various forms? Do they imagine these pictures will leave no mark on their impressionable minds?

I know of only one theater on the south side that caters to young patrons in this respect and it is much too far away to send my children. If one theater can do it others can, too. I wonder if a change of program is too expensive for some of them and if they consider this when it concerns their own children? At least the pictures could be in a lighter vein and leave the horror pictures for adults who enjoy them and take them for what they are; just a picture.

Do our children have to view twisted and mangled bodies, distorted figures and faces, gang murders, brutal beatings, wars, and mistreated children every week-end? I protest.

MRS. J. SCHNELLER JR.

LOANS TO ENGLAND AND FRANCE.

Chicago, April 12.—While we are greater than Norway in every respect, man power, wealth and resources, why do we think that eventually, in the event of defeat of the allies, we, too, will not be menaced by a coalition of all the aggressor nations.

The least we can do is repeal the Johnson act and let the allies raise by borrowing and for spending in this country only an amount equal to [but not to exceed] their actual cash expenditures. Perhaps the allies would be willing to secure such loans by a pledge of their interest in their present island possessions in the West Indies which might at some future date prove to be a menace to our security. For the benefit of those who might accuse us of becoming empire minded part of the deal could include a real plebiscite in such islands, whether, in the case of the allies relinquishing their claim, they should become independent or come under our flag.

The one or two billions that we thus might lose would supply work to our unemployed in just as sensible a manner as our present governmental alphabetical agencies such as WPA, and in any event it would be a worth while donation to the support of our own ideology.

FRANK L. CARROLL.

THE LESSON OF APRIL 6.

Chicago, April 4.—Twenty-three years ago on April 6, 1917, America was plunged into the turmoil of Europe.

In 1916 Woodrow Wilson told the American people that he had kept them out of war. So in November, 1916, Woodrow Wilson was reëlected President, and a month and two days after his inauguration America declared war on Germany. An ambassador of Woodrow Wilson had been in Europe preparing war with the allies.

Today the Roosevelt ambassadors are over in Europe on a secret mission, probably getting ready to plunge into another great war. The national election is only seven months away.

People were fooled once by a Democratic President, but you can't fool the people the second time. Vote for a Republican President and you can really be sure of staying out of another European war.

20 BILLIONS IN THE SOCK.

Benton Harbor, Mich., April 7.—My understanding is that the national government is in debt nearly to the legal limit of $45,000,000,000 and that both high taxes and big deficits must continue for some time. While this is true, the national treasury has a cash working balance on hand of about a billion and a half; there is 17 billions' worth of gold buried in Kentucky; an unknown amount of silver somewhere in New York state; also there is a so-called stabilization fund of somewhere around two billion dollars to protect English and French currency. In all there must be a total of over 20 billion dollars on which the United States treasury can lay its hands at any time.

If the gold and silver is too fragile to be put in direct circulation why can it not be used as collateral and certificates be issued against it, the funds so derived to be used either in reducing the national debt or in paying the current running expenses of the government? If it cannot be used for either of these purposes what good is it?

PAPER BOTTLES.

Chicago, April 6.—Having moved here last October from a southern California city, where we have sunshine, rain, and paper milk containers, I was rather disappointed to find none of them here, especially the milk containers. I was surprised at myself that I could be so irked about it. Well, we have been having sunshine and rain of late, and I have just read an article in THE TRIBUNE about paper milk containers, and I do hope this great city can have them soon. Your housewives have no idea how convenient they are; you can stack 6 or 8 quarts, or more lying on their side, in a good sized icebox. They are sanitary and safe and nice for children to handle, especially the four-sided containers.

MRS. CAROL J. SHAW.

WHEN CHICAGO WAS YOUNG.

Chicago, April 7.—I was agreeably surprised and very happy to read in your newspaper today the letter under the heading "When Chicago Was Young." My grandfather was one of the original members of Holy Trinity Evangelical Lutheran church and was a very God-fearing, Christian man. His first home was a little cabin on the bank of the Chicago river at Halsted stret near Archer avenue.

In this letter the writer mentions there were about 25 Lutheran churches in Chicago at that time. Today we have about 130 Lutheran churches in metropolitan Chicago of the same synod to which the one at 19th and Peoria streets belongs.

AGNES KLEBENOW.

THE LINE-UP.

Chicago, April 8.—With government pay rollers, by the hundreds of thousands, communists both red and pink, city and state machines of disrepute, reliefers who never worked anyway before the advent of the New Deal, all whooping it up for a third term for F. D. R. can there be any question as to how the thinking man will mark his ballot?

ESTATE PROBATE.

Chicago, April 11 [Legal Friend of the People].—Two years ago this coming May my father passed away, leaving an estate of personal property and real estate. I would like to know:

1. What steps should be taken to have this property probated, if it can be. The widow [who is not our mother], my sister, and I are the three heirs. The widow was made administratrix of the estate.

2. I wrote the probate clerk two years ago this coming May and he answered that an inventory had not been filed at that time, but that the petition showed the amount of the estate. According to information received, no will was made.

3. How can we verify this?

4. Who is supposed to file the inventory and [5] how soon is it to be filed?

6. Has the administratrix all powers over the estate as to its being probated, sold or otherwise?

7. The administratrix in this case has hired a lawyer to represent the estate.

8. We have never been asked anything in regard to the estate handling, or been told of its condition.

9. How can we go about clearing up this condition, and have the estate brought to a final climax?

1. Ordinarily the first step is to employ an attorney and leave subsequent steps to him.
2. You can ask the clerk of the Probate court to bring pressure to bear on the administratrix to proceed with the probate.
3. The court clerk should be willing to tell you whether a will has been filed in the probate proceedings. The fact that the personal representative is called an administratrix implies that there is no will.
4. The administratrix.
5. It should have been filed before this.
6. She has no arbitrary power to sell assets, if that is what you mean to ask.
7. This is a routine procedure.
8. You are not in a position to complain of this. She should account to the court rather than to you.

MORTGAGE RENEWAL.

Berwyn, Ill., April 10 [Legal Friend of the People].—Our matter concerns a mortgage on our home. A certain insurance company refused to renew it so we applied to F. H. A. Now we are able to get a loan and in looking over the papers we find there are some canceled notes and coupons missing. The Title and Trust company insists for us to post a bond for the amount of missing notes.

1. Since we did not make the original loan can we be responsible for these missing papers? The insurance company says the notes were turned over to their representatives for collection, but were not turned over to proper party when paid.

2. What can you advise us to do in this case?

A. P.

1. Presumably you purchased subject to the mortgage and you should have seen to it at that time that you obtained from your vendor canceled notes representing the payments that the vendor claimed to have made. Obviously the title company is under no legal obligation to issue a guaranty policy ignoring the risk that the notes may be outstanding in the hands of parties entitled to enforce them.

2. Depends largely on a comparison between the proposed charge for the indemnity bond and the fee that your attorney would charge for trying to work the matter out without a bond.

Police said Howard Williams, 25, of 6218 Woodlawn avenue, drove onto the tracks just as the last car of a northbound freight train passed. He pulled directly in front of the speeding southbound passenger train. Williams' car struck Batka and also hit another car. Williams was injured critically. Ernest Bourhois, 33, of 1324 West 111th street, the driver of the other car, was injured slightly.

CITY EMPLOYES FILL OUT SURVEY ON DAILY WORK

Sixteen thousand city workers filled out questionnaires last week in an efficiency survey which will provide detailed information of the daily work performed by each employé.

Results of the study will be used by the council finance comittee in preparing the 1941 city budget. The survey will form a basis for eliminating overlapping duties.

A joint committee of city officials and representatives of the Association of Commerce and the Civic federation is conducting the survey.

PRESIDENT CALLS ON DEMOCRATS TO SELECT LIBERALS

Lambasts G. O. P., Takes a Crack at Dewey.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Warm Springs, Ga., April 20.—President Roosevelt tonight called upon the nation to avoid the "sticky flypaper" of Republican conservatism and support the "good old fashioned American commonsense of Democratic liberalism in the summer and fall Presidential campaign."

Speaking by radio to a series of dinners in belated observance of the birthday of Thomas Jefferson, the President told young Democratic clubs of America:

"It seems to me very obvious that if the Democratic party is to defeat the Republican party next November, we must nominate a liberal pair of candidates, running on a liberal and forward looking platform."

But he gave no hint as to whether he expects to be one of the candidates.

Takes Crack at Dewey.

Mr. Roosevelt devoted most of his speech to lambasting the Republican party and took a dig at one of its leading contenders for the nomination, Thomas E. Dewey of New York. Many Republican leaders interpreted this action as evidence of his concern at the huge gains made by the Republican party in recent primary elections.

As the President analyzed the Republican preconvention campaign to date, he said it did not appeal greatly to his intelligence. He divided the campaign into three parts, saying:

"First, the Republicans are seeking to frighten the country by telling people the present administration is trying to put this nation into war or that it inevitably is drifting into war.

"You know better than that.

Lays Scandals to G. O. P.

"Second, the Republicans are saying that the measures of the last seven years are good, but could have been carried out with greater efficiency if they had been in power.

"I do not think we can swallow this assertion, because virtually every serious government scandal since the civil war has occurred under Republican leadership. The groups and cliques which always have owned the Republican party are just as much in the saddle of ownership as they were in the old days.

"Third, the Republicans are saying they will perform 'an amazing miracle,' that they will give everybody jobs, maintain relief, give work to the unemployed, meet needs of national defense, reduce taxes and with all that reduce the cost of government.

"And you and I know, from long experience, when we ask them how they are going to do it, that their only answer is the vague assertion that they will repeal all the horrid and nerve racking restrictions on private business and let private business do the rest."

Assails Dewey's Philosophy.

Mr. Roosevelt took indirect cognizance of the heavy artillery Dewey was unlimbering against the New Deal by striking at the youthful prosecutor without mentioning his name.

"We are keeping out of the wars in Europe and Asia," he said, "but I do not subscribe to the preachment of a Republican aspirant for the presidency who tells you, in effect, that the United States and the people of the United States should do nothing to try to bring about a better order, a more secure order, of world peace when the time comes."

Dewey has been preaching that the United States has no part in Europe's quarrel and should not be maneuvered into the position of umpiring her wars.

Mr. Roosevelt made an impassioned plea for Democrats to stay in the party ranks.

All of us know what sticky flypaper looks like," he closed. "We will be most careful to keep our feet and heads away from the flypaper, all this summer and fall, because we are possessed of good old-fashioned average American common sense."

Quotes from Early Speeches.

In the early part of his address Mr. Roosevelt pointed to speeches made by him in 1935, 1936, and 1938 in what he said was proof of his consistency thru recent years in urging the maintenance of the liberal spirit in the Democratic party. He did not quote from his last two speeches to the young Democrats to prove his consistency upon the same point.

In a speech to the organizations last April he urged them to support the party, its principles, and candidates even if they were not in complete harmony on all fronts. In a speech to the young Democrats last August he virtually called upon them to leave the party at his command if candidates unfavorable to him should be selected on a platform to which he could not subscribe.

The radio address was the only event in a quiet day for Mr. Roosevelt. Dull skies and intermittent rains kept him indoors except for the brief ride to a private dining hall in the administration building of the Warm Springs Foundation—the infantile paralysis resort he founded here—where he spoke ino a microphone.

Wins Tribune Award

Miss Aline Edwards after her victory.

Miss Aline Edwards was awarded first prize last night in the annual feature story contest sponsored by the Medill Gridiron, journalism club of Northwestern university's Chicago campus. The award of $25 was donated by THE TRIBUNE. Harold Wallace was second and Beryl Shapiro, third. In the short story contest Elsie Thornberg was first, Elizabeth Sheffield second, and Sidney M. Cohen third. All the winners are students at Northwestern. The decisions were announced at a dinner held at 115 East Chicago avenue.

A LAUNDRY MAN TRIES HARD TO BAG ROBBERS, BUT IT'S JUST NO SOAP

William Keefer was counting receipts last night in the Nordic laundry, 3531 Elston avenue, where he is office manager, when two bandits walked in. Keefer picked up the nearest object and hurled it at the robbers, hitting one. But that didn't bother the bandits. They picked up $460, slugged Keefer, and fled. Keefer said later he wished he'd had something heavier to throw. What he did throw was a bundle of soft laundry.

CROMWELL WILL KEEP ENVOY JOB DURING PRIMARY

Then Will Quit, Whether or Not He's Nominated.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington D. C., April 20.—James H. R. Cromwell will retain his post as minister to Canada until after the New Jersey primary in which he is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States senator, Secretary of State Cordell Hull announced today. He will resign immediately after the primary on May 21, regardless of its outcome.

Cromwell, who is 43 years old and is the husband of Doris Duke, known as the richest girl in the world, thus will have terminated his diplomatic career in about four months.

Receives Public Reprimand.

During that period, however, he received more publicity than many a man who has spent a lifetime with the state department. He was reprimanded publicly by Secretary Hull and received nation-wide criticism for a speech he made before a Canadian audience. In the address he expressed sympathy for the French-British cause and criticized Germany.

Cromwell's decision to retain his post during the primary campaign was based upon his insistence that there is no law to prevent his running for the senate and keeping his job as minister to Canada.

Hatch Act Forbids Politics

The Hatch clean politics act forbids all federal employés and officials below the rank of assistant cabinet officers—that is, all who are not policy makers—to take an active part in politics.

Cromwell does not believe he is included in this class. His speech in Canada certainly was an attempt to shape American policy, it has been remarked, and despite his reprimand, Cromwell apparently still thinks of himself as a policy maker.

WOMAN, 30, STABBED TO DEATH.

Miss Bessie Martin, 30 years old, colored, was stabbed to death yesterday in her home at 1228 13th street. Police are searching for a man with whom she had been living.

WHAT THE REDS DID TO POLAND

the inside story of conditions under soviet rule

What happens to the citizens of a community taken over by the Red Army? What happens to business, religion, money, food and all the other aspects of normal life when Stalin's troops move in?

You can read the factual story beginning tomorrow in The Chicago Tribune. In contrast with the vague rumors from Poland since Russia clamped down absolute censorship, The Tribune now is able to present the authentic, eyewitness account, told by a business man of Lvov who escaped only recently.

With remarkable vividness, he has set down his experiences in five articles. Don't miss them.

JOHNSON ORDERS MODERNIZING OF SCHOOL COURSES

Hits Hidebound Methods of Education.

Sweeping changes in the English curriculum in Chicago high schools and in the treatment accorded unusually brilliant pupils and the "slow learners" may go into effect in the 1940-'41 school year as the result of action taken yesterday by Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools.

Johnson, speaking at the first meeting of principals he has called since his reappointment April 10 to a second four year term as superintendent, designated George F. Cassell, assistant superintendent of schools, to organize several committees to formulate plans for changes which may be needed. The meeting was in Fullerton hall in the Art institute.

Sees Need for Overhauling.

"The high school English curriculum," Dr. Johnson said, "requires a vigorous overhauling. The time must come when the 'Idylls of the King' will not be forced upon pupils who are interested neither in the king nor his idylls.

"I am also tired of lip service to democracy. I want to see it in action in our schools, exemplified by our English courses. We can pioneer in this job here in Chicago."

Dr. Johnson told Cassell that he wants an entire new English curriculum ready for introduction by February of next year. The vocational aspects of English courses and the use of remedial English studies for handicapped pupils are among the problems to be considered.

Commercial courses, such as stenography and bookkeeping, also need an overhauling, Dr. Johnson said. The importance of these courses has been minimized in the past, he avered, when it was the rule to encourage pupils to study commercial and technical courses if their traditional academic work was not up to par.

Cites Unfairness of System.

Dr. Johnson said it is unfair to both the school and the pupil in either case, to keep the brilliant pupil in a class with average students.

He directed the committees to ignore the intelligence quotient as the sale measure of a student's brilliance or lack of it.

"The IQ to me is frequently a lot of nonsense," he said.

Special attention to retarded pupils in many cases helps them to avoid delinquency and criminal tendencies by keeping them in the healthy school atmosphere, Dr. Johnson said.

"It is better to have the slow learner in high school if he learns nothing at all, than to have him on the streets," he said. In this connection he assailed the "iron clad technique of colleges, which lose half their freshmen enrollment during the first year." He said colleges have stood on their pedestal long enough and soon they, too, will have to consider the slow learners.

Plan Experiment in Fall.

Dr. Johnson instructed the various committees to assemble enough data to permit the inauguration of experimental courses next September. Among other problems to be considered are open air classes for undernourished and anemic children, epileptic children, expansion of the physical education curriculum, teacher welfare, vocational schools, and the student placement service. Suggestions from civic groups, educators, and others will be welcomed, he said.

Horner Signs Extradition Request for Oil Operator

Papers requesting the extradition to Illinois of Leslie C. Hickox, Kansas City, Mo., oil operator, were signed by Gov. Horner yesterday, according to Assistant State's Attorney Walter L. McCoy. Hickox is under arrest in Kansas City on a warrant obtained by Mrs. Marie Archambault Wiley, 300 Sheridan road, Kenilworth. She charges Hickox swindled her out of $25,000 in a stock deal.

GEORGE SIMONS DIES OF INJURIES.

Newark, O., April 20 [Special].—George Simons, 71 years old, died today of injuries suffered when struck by an automobile driven by Robert Mix.

SEEK REHEARING ON APPEAL FROM DEBT SENTENCE

A petition for a rehearing on an appellate court decision ordering William French, Evanston building contractor, to return to jail for failure to pay a judgment was filed yesterday by attorneys for French.

An $11,025 judgment containing a malice count was obtained against French by Nicholas Peiffer, 1653 Winona avenue, as the outgrowth of an automobile accident near Lake Zurich in 1936. Peiffer and his wife were injured.

French was freed Sept. 29, 1938, on a writ of habeas corpus, when the plaintiffs were a day late paying his board. The court ruled on April 10 that the sheriff should not have Freed French until he was certain the board would not be paid.

WISCONSIN HAS A HUNCH ABOUT MR. LA FOLLETTE

Thinks He May Be New Deal Pick for President.

BY THORNTON SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., April 20.—There is a growing presentiment in Wisconsin that the Democratic candidate for President, if Mr. Roosevelt does not seek a third term, is likely to be the United States senator from Wisconsin, Robert M. La Follette. The feeling is not yet well defined enough to be called a prophesy or a forecast, but is half way between a hunch and an apprehension.

It was expressed today by Arthur B. Fontaine, Green Bay attorney, former Republican national committeeman and one of the state's most careful observers of political trends. In his opinion, Mr. Fontaine said, Mr. Roosevelt has been killing off either by sarcasm, sneers or direct action every Democrat whose name has been suggested or who has made an open bid for delegates to the convention. Included are Postmaster General James A. Farley, Vice President John N. Garner, Secretary of State Cordell Hull, and other minor prophets, Fontaine asserted.

Not Rebuilding Fences.

There is a variety of reasons why Wisconsin observers believe Senator La Follette is being kept under cover to be presented at the convention as the ultimate choice of the President. La Follette has not announced himself definitely as a candidate for reelection. If he runs for the senate it is conceded he faces the toughest fight he ever has had. He has made a few speeches in Wisconsin, but is not out rebuilding his fences and making the type of campaign for election that is his usual custom and which the state recognizes as a La Follette campaign.

He is personally close to President Roosevelt. During the six years that F. Ryan Duffy, a Democrat, was in the United States senate, La Follette enjoyed more evidences of the President's favor than Duffy.

Senator La Follette is satisfactory, Mr. Fontaine said, to the left wingers who have helped form the policies of the New Deal and would fit in with their methods better than any other candidate who has been mentioned.

Try to Woo La Follette.

"Roosevelt and La Follette think alike and they are alike," the former Republican committeeman said.

The Democratic party organization of Wisconsin has tried openly to woo Senator La Follette into becoming the Democratic candidate for the senate. He has made no public response to their invitations and, in the opinion of Fontaine, acts generally more like a man who is waiting for something he expects to get than a man who is a candidate for reëlection to the office he now holds.

It was commonly discussed here and in Washington three years ago that William Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, had said he would raise three million dollars from his organization to elect La Follette President. The story was attributed here to Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit corporation, altho Crowley never confirmed it.

Crowley has been the chief contact between Wisconsin and the New Deal.

Hint at New Bloc.

If La Follette were the nominee, the hope would be that he might be able to swing the Scandinavian voters back of his candidacy to bolster up the radical vote. The Norwegians in Wisconsin, the third largest nationality group in numbers, have been identified with the La Follettes since the first Gov. La Follette campaigned among them.

Since the German occupation of Denmark and invasion of Norway, there apparently is a movement on foot here to amalgamate all the Scandinavians in the Badger state into an articulate political unit. The purpose, it is reported, is to try to elect a Scandinavian to the senate or to some of the 10 congressional offices. The movement generally is rumored, but has not yet come to the surface. Alexander Wiley, the present Republican senator, is of Norwegian descent and has made speeches in Norwegian when he campaigned in Norwegian communities.

Mead Decides Not to Run.

Fred H. Clausen, Horicon manufacturer who is being urged to seek the Republican nomination for the senate, also is a Scandinavian.

An effort by friends to induce George Mead, wealthy lumberman of Wisconsin Rapids, to try for the Republican nomination for the senate, came to an end last week, it was said, with Mead's definite decision not to run. Gov. Julius P. Heil left the way open this week for himself to try for the senate. In an interview he said he would serve wherever the people wanted him.

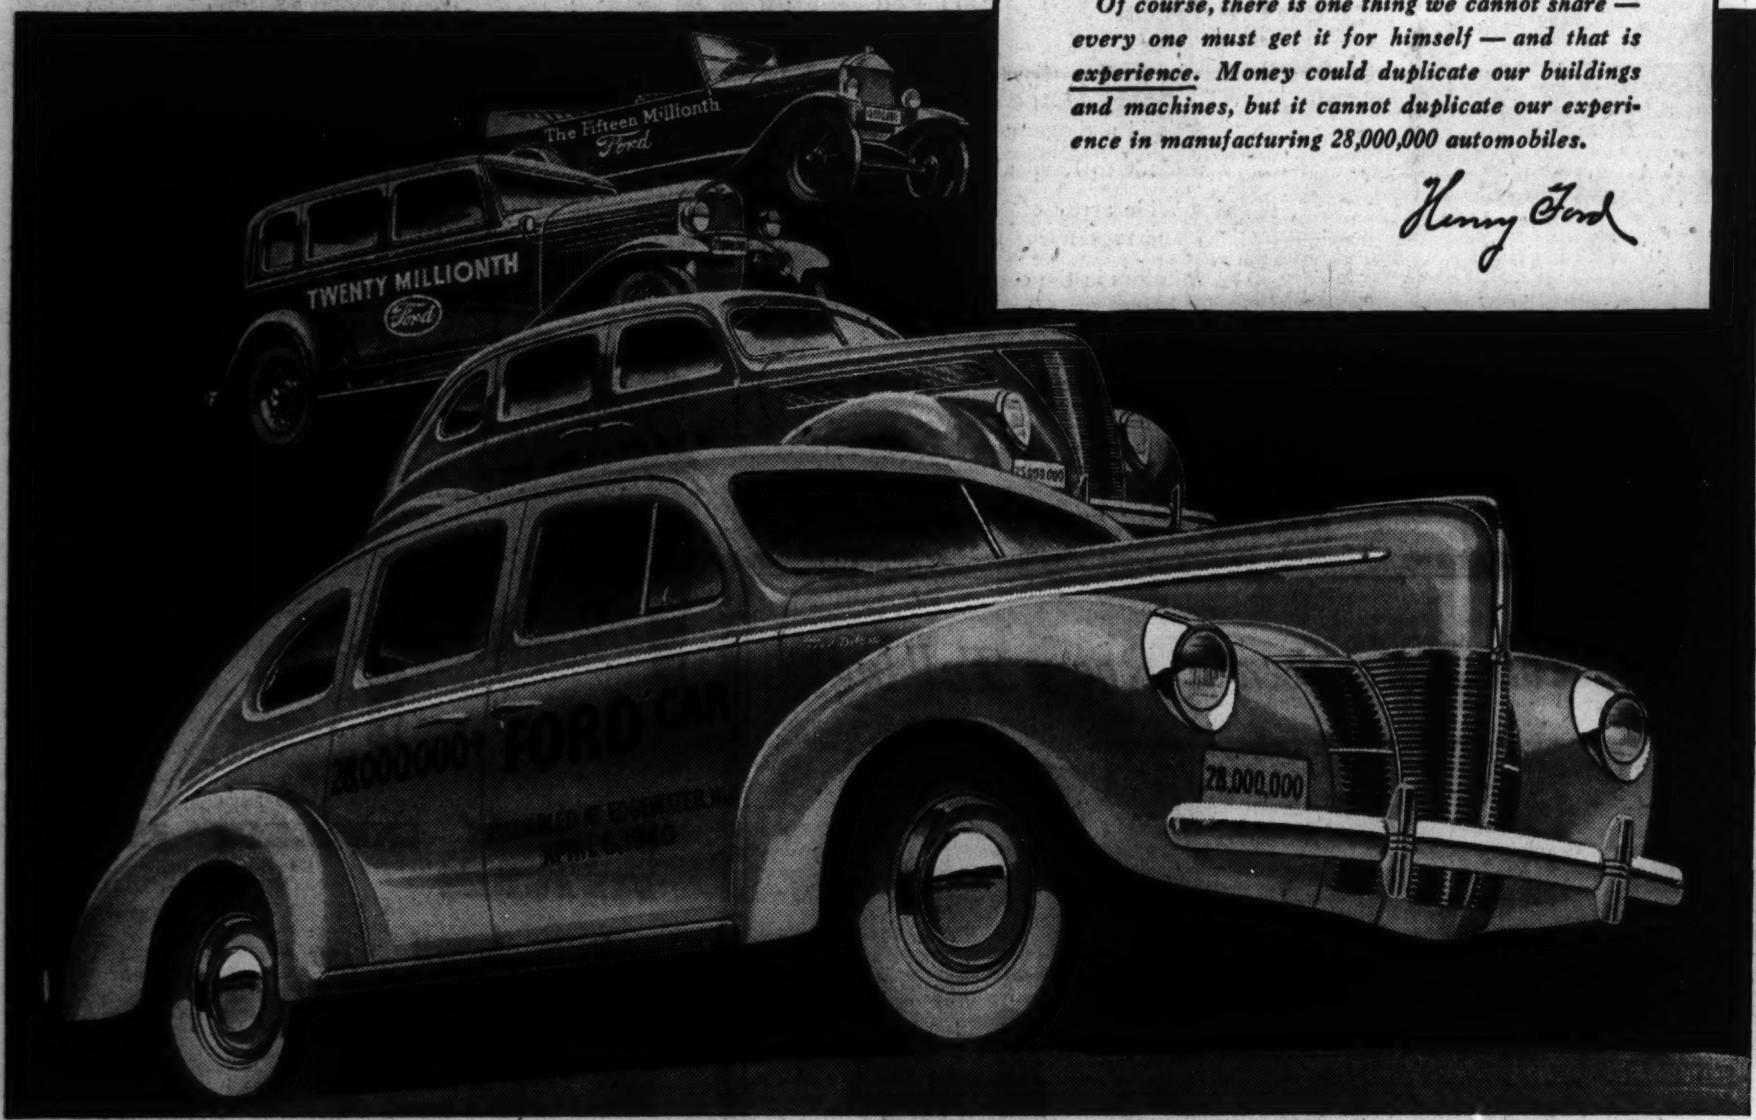
AUREX CHICAGO COMPANY

THE TWENTY-EIGHT MILLIONTH FORD CAR

We have always believed that before business could be good for one, it must be good for all. Our discoveries and improvements have always been open for other manufacturers without patent restrictions.

Of course, there is one thing we cannot share — every one must get it for himself — and that is experience. Money could duplicate our buildings and machines, but it cannot duplicate our experience in manufacturing 28,000,000 automobiles.

Henry Ford



Behind the 28 millionth Ford car, which came off the line April 8, 1940, are other famous Ford "millionth cars": the 25 millionth, produced Jan. 18, 1937; the 20 millionth, April 14, 1931; and the 15 millionth Model T, May 6, 1927. THIRTEEN MILLION CARS IN THIRTEEN YEARS!

Under one management, the Ford Motor Company has built and sold 28,000,000 Ford cars.

No other maker even approaches this total. No other has so many cars on the road today.

How has it been done?

Not by squeezing workers to achieve a low price. The Ford Motor Company took the lead years ago in paying higher wages, shortening hours and improving working conditions.

Not by monopolistic methods. Henry Ford has always encouraged competition. He has made his company's inventions and technical advances available without charge to any one who wanted to adopt them.

Free competition in the industry has presented a constant challenge to find ways of offering better and better value to the public.

The Ford Motor Company holds the lead in total number of cars built and sold because it has met this challenge with more than ordinary vision and skill—backed by a set of business principles which the American people respect and approve.

As these 28,000,000 cars have been produced, the company's experience has continued to accumulate. Its facilities have continued to increase. Profits have been consistently turned back into the business to provide the means for offering still greater value.

The Ford Motor Company today knows how to build a better car than it has ever built—it has the resources to build it—and it is building it. In the few moments it takes you to read this advertisement, half a dozen of the finest Ford cars that have yet been built—part of the twenty-ninth million—will come off the assembly lines.

Would you like to be confident that the apartment you select will be the best available in point of size, location, and rent?

If so, select it from the Apartments to Rent columns in the Tribune want ad section—Chicago's all-price-range apartment directory.

Listing more apartments than all other Chicago newspapers combined, the Tribune rental columns offer a large selection of apartments at all rents, from the lowest to the highest.

Before you begin your search, make up a list of addresses at which are located available apartments of the size and at the rent you want. In this way you will climb no stairs to see something which could not possibly interest you. You will waste no time searching thru neighborhoods hoping by chance to find what you want.

To simplify your search, the Tribune classifies Apartments to Rent want ads by locations in the city and suburbs, and by numbers of rooms. This permits you to turn immediately to the group which offers apartments of the size and in the locality you prefer.

Because they get better results, apartment owners and rental agents place more Apartments to Rent want advertising in the Tribune than in all other Chicago newspapers combined. To advertise your apartments to Chicago's largest constant audience, call Superior 0100, and ask for a Want Ad-Viser.

Contests Are Held at Six Recreation Centers.

The elite among Chicago's thousands of kite flyers were chosen in six big elimination contests yesterday. Next Saturday morning, in Grant park, they will compete in the finals of the annual kite flying contest sponsored by THE TRIBUNE and the parks district. THE TRIBUNE will present silver loving cups to the winners in eight divisions.

Originally more than 5,000 contestants were out for the titles. This field was cut down to 1,700 in eliminations held on April 13 at 85 locations in the city. Yesterday's contests, in park district recreation centers, were the semifinals. These reduced the number of finalists to approximately 350 flyers.

Fight Strong Winds.

The strong winds during the sunny afternoon caused trouble for some contestants, making it difficult for them to get their kites into the air and keep them there.

The semi-finals were held at Tuley park, Washington Park meadows, Douglas park baseball diamond, Riis park, Gompers park, and Waveland fieldhouse in Lincoln park. Victor K. Brown, chief of the park district recreation department, and Fabian E. Kardes, supervisor of crafts, conducted the contests.

Results of Semifinals.

Nature provides the Kidneys to clean and purify your blood and to remove excess Acids. The Kidneys contain about nine million tiny tubes or filters and the heart pumps blood through them about 200 times an hour, night and day. No man has ever made a machine that would stand up under the work that the Kidneys are asked to do, so it's easy to see that they may get tired and slow down as you grow older.

Fourteen years ago a practicing physician's prescription called Cystex was made available to the public through drug stores, making it easy and inexpensive to help thousands suffering from non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles in these three natural ways: 1. Help the Kidneys remove excess acids which may become poisoning and irritating. 2. To palliate burning and smarting of the urinary passages, and bladder irritation. 3. Help the Kidneys flush out wastes which may become poisonous if allowed to accumulate, thus aiding nature in stimulating an increase of energy, aliveness and enthusiasm which may easily make you feel years younger.

Money Back Guarantee

Usually, in non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder disorders the very first dose of Cystex goes right to work helping the Kidneys flush out excess Acids, poisons and wastes. And this cleansing, purifying Kidney action, in just a day or so, may easily make you feel younger, stronger and better than in years. A printed guarantee with each package of Cystex insures an immediate refund of all your money unless you are completely satisfied. COUNCIL TO PROBE BOSS CARROZZO'S RULE OF STREETS

Charge Systematic Ruin of Paving Jobs.

(See today's Graphic Section for an article on "Gang Rule in New York," disclosing the alliance of crime and politics.)

BY LLOYD WENDT.

When Mike Carrozzo, rich boss of the Street Laborers' union, appears before the city council finance committee Tuesday to argue for more money for the workers, he will be asked about charges that he systematically ruins city asphalt jobs. Members of the committee said yesterday they believe the taxpayers will be interested. They added that they want a complete airing of reports that Carrozzo dominates city street work and dictates materials purchased thru his rule of 25 Chicago unions.

In particular, the aldermen want details on the firing of 18 Carrozzo asphalt rakers last October. These men were discharged for holding up several asphalt resurfacing projects. The city, in firing them, said the men knew nothing whatever about asphalt raking. It was charged that Carrozzo deliberately sent inexperienced men to jobs that require experts. The aldermen want to know how extensively such tactics are being used.

Complain of Sabotage.

For some time, it is said, there have been complaints that Carrozzo has been sabotaging street construction. He was caught last October, informants said, and the city made the charges stick by firing Carrozzo's men.

Last October the city required 18 expert rakers for nine crews of 33 men each who were resurfacing with asphalt. Carrozzo sent over men who had no experience in the work.

Carrozzo's plot was discovered when Oscar E. Hewitt, commissioner of public works, found the particular crews were laying only 100 tons of asphalt a day. The city requires its crews to lay 160 tons, altho private contractors, who pay $1 a day more scale, demand almost twice this much.

Hewitt, it is said, demanded to know why the asphalt work was held up, increasing the costs to the taxpayers. He was told that the 18 rakers knew nothing about the work, and were doing a bad job. An experienced raker knows the proper amount of asphalt to spread for rolling. Green men laid the asphalt too thick or too thin, forcing a slow up of the project as their work was corrected.

Order Men Discharged.

The city ordered the men discharged. Carrozzo protested and offered to compromise, according to the information, by sending 18 good rakers to work with the 18 bad ones. The city refused and fired the men. Carrozzo gave in without one of his usual "mystery" strikes.

Hewitt declined to comment yesterday about the October incident. "What happened in 1939 is water over the dam," he said.

Street bureau officials say Carrozzo gave up because he was caught openly.

Thieves who broke into the grocery of Thomas Murray at 1742 West 79th street early yesterday used a truck to haul away their loot. Murray counted up his losses as: 800 pounds of beef, a cash register [empty], a pair of scales, and hundreds of cans of edibles.

Embezzles for Son

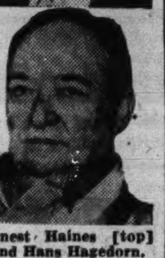
MRS. LORETTA ROBSON.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 20 [Special].—Mrs. Loretta Robson, mother of a son for whom she said she embezzled $12,000, has just begun serving a sentence of one to three years in jail. Mrs. Robson told the court her son was wayward and that she stole the money to "get him out of jams."

GRABS ROBBER'S WOODEN GUN AND THROTTLES HIM

Police were called yesterday to the aid of a robber who tried to hold up Hans Hagedorn, 63 years old, in his grocery at 1332 East 54th street. They found that Hagedorn had taken a wooden gun from the bandit and was sitting on top of him, choking him.



Ernest Haines [top] and Hans Hagedorn.

Hagedorn explained that the gun didn't look like a real weapon and when the robber ordered him and his wife, Anne, into the rear room, he tackled the robber and told his wife to call police. A passing police squad responded to Mrs. Hagedorn's cries. Hagedorn was treated for slight cuts inflicted in the struggle.

The bandit identified himself as Ernest Haines, 35, of no address. He said he got $2.25 in a holdup of a cleaning shop at 1001 East 55th street Friday, using the wooden gun.

ACCUSED STORE THIEF SHOT IN ESCAPE ATTEMPT

Tony Starcevich, 28 years old, was shot in the hip last night when he tried to escape from Joseph Truhler, store detective in the Goldblatt Bros. store at 9100 Commercial avenue.

Truhler accused Starcevich of stealing a length of sausage and a $30 spring suit. The detective notified South Chicago police and took his prisoner to the rear loading platform to wait for the patrol wagon. Starcevich broke away and darted down the alley. Truhler shot twice and one bullet hit Starcevich.

When the patrol wagon arrived it was used to take Starcevich to South Chicago hospital and later to the Bridewell. Starcevich, a former steel welder, lives at 10400 Avenue N. Police said he has a minor criminal record.

GRANDMOTHER'S ATTACKER, 13, TO FACE CHARGES

Ottawa, Ill., April 20 [Special].—William Jackson IV., 13 year old Deer Park boy who shot and beat his grandmother, Mrs. William Jackson II., while listening to a radio thrill program, will be charged with assault with a deadly weapon, Sherif E. J. Welter said today.

At the county jail the boy's mental and physical condition is reported as good, altho he complained of a restless night and expressed regret and shame over his act. He insists his mind went blank.

Welter has asked Dr. Paul L. Schroeder, state criminologist, to examine the boy. Welter said William told him he has been suffering from severe headaches about once a week. William told the sherif he loved his grandmother and other members of his family, and that he had no ill feeling toward any of them. "They never did anything to cause me to do this. I never had any trouble before," he said.

It is believed the grandmother will recover.

THREE CONFESS CASHING $3,500 IN FAKE CHECKS

Three young men arrested yesterday by Chicago avenue police admitted they had cashed worthless checks for a total of nearly $3,500. They are Anthony Rizzo, 20 years old, 2325 Ohio street; Frank Lamatino, 25, of 1314 Larrabee street, and Frank Bovelli, 23, of 727 Goethe street.

The arrests were made in the Merchants currency exchange at 547 North Wabash avenue. The police were summoned by M. D. Miller, the manager, when one of the men offered a fraudulent check. All the fake vouchers were written against the account of the Arthur Harris company, copper dealers at 212 Aberdeen street. Complaints were signed charging the men with obtaining money under false pretenses.

STATE PREPARES FOR 2D TRIAL OF HIT-RUN KILLER

The state's attorney's office made plans yesterday to prosecute Walter Bradshaw, a north side butcher, on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident. On Friday a Criminal court jury found him not guilty of a charge of concealing an infant.

Testimony at the new trial, which will begin May 8 before Judge William J. Lindsay, is expected to be similar to that offered last week. Bradshaw's car struck Beverly Joan Frank, 5 years old, last Feb. 29 near her home at 1402 George street. The girl was found dead in the garage behind Bradshaw's home at 3644 North Oakley avenue.

"The verdict was understandable," said Wilbert F. Crowley, first assistant state's attorney. "Members of the jury believed the child was dead when Bradshaw placed her in the garage. They also felt that Bradshaw was not a man of the criminal type, therefore they did not convict him."

Bradshaw's bond on the second charge was fixed at $2,500. He remained in the county jail yesterday.

THE combined experience of the physicians who compose the medical staff of a United Medical Service amounts to more than 250 years. There are three physicians with more than thirty years of medical experience; six with more than twenty years; twelve with more than ten years, and two with more than six years. All are graduates of prominent medical schools, served internship in leading hospitals and registered by the State of Illinois. In addition, all have taken post-graduate courses—many in London, Berlin, Paris, Vienna, and other great centers of learning, in search of special knowledge and techniques in their particular fields of medicine. They have practiced their profession as private physicians, staff physicians and as members of medical organizations. Their knowledge and skill have been awarded special recognition through appointments, professorships and memberships in various medical groups and societies. They are members of a United Medical Service staff because they feel that this form of group practice is fundamentally sound and not only offers more accessible and adequate medical protection for the masses but a wider and more interesting field for the physician. MARDO PATTOU IS MARRIED TO J. C. BELDEN JR.

Reception Follows Rites at Lake Forest.

BY JUDITH CASS.

Looking like the first tender buttercups of spring, were the five pretty young women who attended Miss Mardo Pattou yesterday afternoon when she became the bride of Joseph C. Belden Jr. in the green and white filled Church of the Holy Spirit at Lake Forest. The ivory lace and tulle gown worn by Miss Pattou, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Pattou of Lake Forest, faintly echoed the yellow of her bridesmaids' gowns.

The dress was made with a heart shaped, puffed sleeved bodice of lace and a full, bouffant skirt of tulle. Yellowed with age was the handsome lace veil, worn previously by her mother and great-aunt, which was fastened to her head with orange blossoms. She carried lilies of the valley and roses.

Attendants All Debutantes.

The attendants, all debutantes of last fall, wore full skirted frocks of marquisette trimmed with large bowknots of lace on the skirts. Their hats were halos of starched brown horsehair, tied under their chins with brown velvet streamers that fell to their waists. They carried yellow snapdragons and tulips. The maid of honor, Miss Grace Shumway, carried a similar sheaf bouquet that shaded into bronze colors.

Bowls of spring flowers filled the Onwentsia club, where a reception was held. Mr. Belden, the son of Mrs. Joseph C. Belden of Lake Forest and Chicago, and his bride will sail next Friday for a six weeks' trip to Honolulu. They will be at home in Lake Forest for the next year.

Barbara Anne Crowe Weds.

The Church of the Holy Comforter in Kenilworth was illuminated entirely by candlelight yesterday evening for the marriage of Miss Barbara Anne Crowe and Frederick Loomis Aydelotte, son of Wade Van Hise Aydelotte of Akron, O. The ceremony was performed at 8:30 p. m. by the Rev. Leland H. Danforth, and was followed by a reception in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Burt Allan Crowe of Rawleigh road.

The bride, whose white satin dress was beaded with pearls and rhinestones in a bow knot design, had her sister, Mrs. Laurence Thompson Knott, as matron of honor, and Miss Ruth Johnson as maid of honor. The bridegroom's sister, Miss Barbara Aydelotte was the bridesmaid, and little Susanne Knott was the flower girl. The attendants wore elaborately flowered taffeta gowns made with long trains.

Mr. Aydelotte was his son's best man. Ushering were Mr. Knott; the bride's brother, Roger Allan Crowe, and Stanley Akers and Louis W. Camp Jr., both of Akron.

Other Out of Town Guests.

Others who came from out of town for the wedding were Mrs. Crowe's sister, Mrs. Frederick Byron Woodard of Owosso, Mich., accompanied by her son and daughter-in-law, the Dean Campbell Woodards, and Mrs. Crowe's sister, Miss Addie Mae Crowe. The bride's other cousins, the Robert Pier Woodards, of Lakewood, O., and the Milton Openos of Midland, Mich., also were present.

Others from Akron were the bridegroom's grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Samuel F. Ziliox. Mrs. Marshall E. Morris, the bridegroom's aunt, came from Montclair, N. J., with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Munoz.

After a month's wedding trip in Florida, Mr. Aydelotte and his bride will live in Akron

Lavinia Howells Weds.

For her marriage to Dr. Everett Lee Strohl last night Miss Lavinia Morgan Howells, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hasell Heywood Howells of Blackstone avenue, wore her mother's ivory satin wedding gown and a lace Juliet cap which has been worn by two of her cousins. The ceremony took place at 8:30 p. m. in the First Unitarian church and was followed by a reception in the home of the bride's parents.

Miss Marion Morgan Howells was her sister's maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Storm Bull, Miss Eleanor Sulcer, Miss Alice Slingluff of Oak Park, Miss Marcia Tinker of New York City, and Miss Barbara Kohlsaat of St. Paul, Minn.

Alfred T. Blomquist of Highland Park was the best man for Dr. Strohl, the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. Lee Strohl of Paris, Ill. The ushers were Dr. Edward M. Dorr, Dr. John Waugh of Rochester, Minn.; Albert T. Belshé of Wilmette, Dr. Warren Herbert of New Orleans, La.; Charles MacClintock, and Dr. Paul Olson of Dubuque, Ia.

Dr. Strohl and his bride flew to Mexico on a wedding trip. They will return in three weeks to make their home on the near north side.

ANGELS OF MERCY CELEBRATE FIFTY YEARS OF SERVICE

Visiting Nurses Carry On Ideals of Founders.

For many years navy blue clad women have been walking briskly along the streets of Chicago with their black bags. They are placid faced women who waste no time getting to their destinations and waste no time when they arrive. They are called the Visiting Nurses of Chicago.

This year marks the golden jubilee of the Visiting Nurses' association. The anniversary reflects an important stage in Chicago's medical history for the association is the parent of the Chicago Tuberculosis institute, the Infant Welfare society, the city's contagious disease hospitals, the first infantile paralysis campaign, and the establishment of school and industrial nurses.

Start 50 Years Ago.

The association was begun in November of 1889 when a small group of Chicago women gathered together resolved to organize a service "for the benefit and assistance of those otherwise unable to obtain skilled assistance in time of illness."

Starting with two nurses, the association has progressed each year in home nursing care, at the same time pioneering in every direction in the field of public health. Today at the end of its fifth decade, according to Miss Mary Westphal, superintendent, there is a staff of 141 nurses who made 397,507 visits to 47,222 patients during the last year.

Of these visits, 17,805 were to patients under 16 years old. Calls to mothers with new born babies totaled 73,585, there were 19,818 to patients with cardiac diseases and 19,792 to cancerous patients.

Aided in Disasters.

The first public service of the association was the staffing of a smallpox hospital. Since that time its nurses have helped in epidemics of typhoid fever, scarlet fever and influenza. Great aid was given in the Iroquois fire, the Cherry Mine and the Eastland disasters. Nurses were sent to Dayton, O., and to southern Illinois and Kentucky in time of the flood, as well as to Miami during the hurricane in 1926. During the world war 43 nurses were released to the army and the American Red Cross.

Since 1922, the association has taken 1,517 student nurses from 23 of Chicago's leading hospitals and given them practical experience in visiting nursing. From these students 223 were added to the staff.

Eleven Substations in City.

At present there are 11 substations thruout the city. Here groups of nurses meet at noon daily to discuss problems with their supervisors and to receive their calls. Reference libraries are available in the stations. In the main office, 104 South Michigan avenue, there are 550 volumes. Nurses may also attend special lectures on subjects pertaining to public health at headquarters.

Visiting nurses' associations in the United States have studied the methods of Chicago's organization. They have copied its system, including an unbreakable rule that after the first visit, a patient must be under a physician's care.

ANCIENT JEWISH PASSOVER RITES OPEN TOMORROW

The most ancient observance devoted to human freedom, the Jewish Passover, begins at sundown tomorrow night. It is the independence day of the Jewish race, and carries religious symbolism and an emphasis on the integrity of the home as the basic social unit. The celebration lasts seven days.

Thru all dark ages of tyranny and despotism of ancient or modern times, the Passover, with its sacred meal of unleavened bread and bitter herbs, has kept ideals of liberty alive. Specifically, the celebration refers to the flight of enslaved Hebrews from Pharaoh's bondage about the year 1200 B. C.

Thousands of homes tomorrow and Tuesday night will be scenes of the Pesach Seder, or ordered Passover meal. Seder means order and refers to the order of service arranged for the occasion. Passover services and public Seders also will be held in synagogues.

"We took demonstrations in 4 other cars, but the whole family voted for the 1940 Packard. None of my previous cars — large and small — gave the performance, riding comfort, ease of handling and gas and oil mileage this new Packard does. I've driven 15,876 miles and it's as cheap to run as smaller cars I've owned . . . only $7.00 for repairs and averaging 17.1 miles per gallon."

Wm W Johnstone Jr

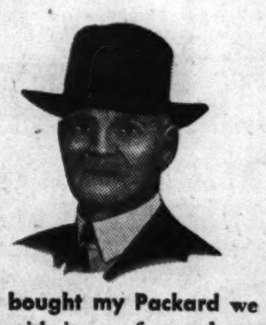
"My speedometer clocks 17,124 miles and I've enjoyed sparkling performance, big-car comfort and low-cost operation from the start . . . averaging 16½ miles per gallon." C. E. Poos, Kansas City, Mo.



"When I bought my Packard we were all delighted with its comfort and extra roominess. It's a Big car! I've driven 10,000 miles and have yet to pay a repair bill." H. H. Dopplmaier, Portland, Ore.

"At its amazingly low price, the new Packard is an even greater value than I expected. Upkeep is very low. In 15,046 miles, in four months, I've spent only $2.00 for repairs." F. W. Miller, Jacksonville, Fla.

Owners acclaim Packard thrift!

FROM ALL OVER AMERICA comes added proof that Packard is thrifty to buy, thrifty to run! And how new owners enthuse over Packard's stunning new style, arm-chair comfort, and fiery performance! Can any other smart car give you as much for your money this Spring? We doubt it.

G. Winthrop Sands, one of two sons by her first husband, was killed in an automobile accident in 1908 at the Vanderbilt estate near Paris. Vanderbilt himself died in Paris in 1920.

She was bequeathed only $109,196 by Vanderbilt but three years after his death it was disclosed a trust fund of $8,250,000 had been set up for her. When she moved from Fifth avenue to exclusive Sutton place she sold the mansion to a bank for $3,000,000.

As late as 1935, Mrs. Vanderbilt was listed by Paris dressmakers as one of the world's 20 best dressed women.

MOTHER MARIE FUNERAL MASS IS TOMORROW

Founder of St. Casimir Sisterhood Dies at 60.

Solemn requiem high mass for the Rev. Mother Marie, founder of the Sisters of St. Casimer, will be held at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow in the chapel of St. Casimer convent, 2601 Marquette road.

Mother Marie.

Mother Marie died Wednesday night in the convent from which, for 32 years, she had administered the community of nuns which now number 342 members. In those years the sisterhood extended its ministrations to 29 parochial schols, 3 high schools, and two hospitals.

Attending the funeral will be Catholic dignitaries, including Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch and Bishop Edward F. Hoban of Rockford; monsignori, priests, heads of convents, and many friends with whom Mother Marie associated in her early years. The mass will be celebrated by the Rev. B. J. Urba, chaplain of the convent. Msgr. M. L. Kruszas of St. George's church will deliver the funeral eulogy.

Receives Message from Pope.

Mother Marie, who was 60 years old, had been in ill health for several years. Before her death she received a Vatican cablegram with the blessing of Pope Pius XII. At her bedside Wednesday Archbishop Stritch administered extreme unction.

Present also were the Rev. Mother Cyril and Sister Immaculata, who had come from Marywood, motherhouse of the Servants of the Immaculate Heart of Mary in Scranton, Pa. Mother Cyril was superior general at Marywood when, as a student, Mother Marie was there preparing to organize the St. Casimir congregation. Mother Marie became a nun there in 1907.

Before she entered the convent Mother Marie was Casimira Kaupas. She was born in Lithuania. In the closing years of the last and in the first decade of this century the Lithuanian immigrant population was growing rapidly in the United States.

Answers Plea for Service.

Priests here sent a plea to Lithuania for nuns to assist in the educational field. This plea determined her, as she told the story later, to found a religious order in America.

By special papal dispensation she and two companions entered the novitiate of the Sisters of the Holy Cross in Ingenbohl, Switzerland. Then they came to America and entered Marywood. The young order remained under the wing of the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart of Mary for six years. During that period a novitiate and motherhouse was established in Chicago. A province of the St. Casimir order was founded in 1920 in Pazaislis, Lithuania.

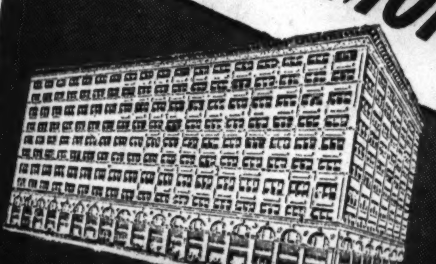
STATE STREET STORE ONLY
OPEN MONDAY 'TIL 9 P.M.



. . . yes, and many other guys like Butch's pal will be here with their Moms! And there's a mighty good reason why! Ever since we started this big sale, over 12 months ago, more and more people like Butch's Mom have come to realize that State Street Day is the right time to buy! We have a pretty good idea of what Mom wants in the way of home needs for Spring redecorating. We also know what the other members of the family need in new Spring clothes. And the past State Street Days have proven to Mom that she can save plenty during this famous Goldblatt event. May we also suggest to Mom that it might be a good idea to take advantage of our new Time Payment Plan in making her many purchases throughout the store.

ROMAN WINS BY 6 LENGTHS; DERBY STOCK UP

Time Is Brilliant on Muddy Track.

BY HOWARD BARRY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Lexington, Ky., April 20.—Joseph E. Widener's Roman demonstrated this afternoon that he may be a mighty tough horse to beat on Derby day. Making his first start of the year, he performed so brilliantly in winning the Elmendorf purse at Keeneland that he made many of the Kentuckians wonder if perhaps they'd been just a bit premature in their refusal to consider the Derby chances of any candidate except E. R. Bradley's Bimelech.

Roman went to the post at 2 to 5 odds and came home six lengths ahead of Calumet Farm's Bay Carse, with Hal Price Headley's Ramases third and Mrs. Ethel V. Mar's Chatted last in the field of four. There was nothing remarkable about the fact that Roman won in that company, but the manner in which he did it was what drew cheers from the crowd that shivered thru an afternoon of rain and snow flurries.

Turns Distance in 1:13 1-5.

Over a track that had been drenched continuously for five days, Roman ran the six furlongs in 1:13 1-5. Continuing in splendid stride after crossing the finish line, he worked out to a mile in 1:42 3-5. His fractional time was remarkable considering the conditions under which he was operating. He was at the quarter in :22 1-5, the three-eighths in :34, and the half in :46 4-5.

Thruout the performance, Jockey Ken McCombs sat tight, never making a motion to shake up his mount, There was no need for him to do so, for Roman was clearly the master at every stage.

As they broke from the starting gate at the head of the back stretch, Roman went right out with the alertness that distinguished him last season. Ramases tried to run with him for the first quarter, but the Widener horse soon drew clear. As they went into the far turn, Roman was leading by two lengths. Bay Carse had closed up with Ramases and Chatted was running last.

Roman Keeps at Task.

Approaching the stretch Jockey F. A. Smith shook up Bay Carse and Paul Roberts did the same with Rameses, but Roman continued to move easily. Without urging, McCombs kept him at his task. The Widener color bearer was going well in hand as he crossed the finish six lengths ahead of his nearest pursuers. Bay Carse's margin over Ramases was a head.

Roman's lifetime record now reads 10 starts, 7 victories, 2 seconds, and a fourth—and this was made in competition with high class horses.

By his performance today he dispelled all doubts that he has his old time speed. He showed no evidence of the knee trouble that cut short his campaign last season. The way in which he ran under the difficult track conditions showed that he is a master mudder. If that kind of going prevails on Derby day, all agree that he will be dangerous.

May Get Mud Test Thursday.

Bimelech has never yet gone to the post in the mud, but if the present weather continues he will get a chance to do so on Thursday in the $2,500 Blue Grass stakes which will climax the Keeneland meeting. Trainer William Hurley made a definite announcement today that Bimelech will start in the Blue Grass if he continues to progress as he has been going.

The date of Bimelech's 1940 debut had been a matter of protracted speculation. There had been rumors that he might not run until the Churchill Downs meeting. Yesterday Bradley issued a prepared statement that even he didn't know what Hurley would choose to do about the colt's program. The trainer's declaration of his intentions today was the first

IT ALL GOES TO MAKE UP SECOND STRAIGHT FOR CUBS

Lon Warneke, former Cubs' pitcher, helps Augie Galan get safely to first as he drops the ball on throw from Johnny Mize, Cardinals' first baseman, in first inning of yesterday's game in Wrigley field. Galan had hit a slow roller to Mize. He later stole second and scored on Hank Leiber's single. The Cubs won the game, 4 to 3, for their second straight over the St. Louis Cardinals. MICHIGAN WINS INDIANA RELAYS; IRISH TAKE MILE

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Bloomington, Ind., April 20.—Michigan, Western conference indoor and outdoor track and field champion, won the Hoosier relays this afternoon after a spirited fight with Indiana. The Wolverines scored 81⅗ points to Indiana's 70 1-10.

Notre Dame and Illinois, other competitors in the invitational quadrangular meet, finished in that order. The Irish had 49 5-6 points, including a victory in the mile relay over Michigan's team, holder of the Big Ten championship. Illinois, scoring 28 2-5 points, won the shuttle hurdle relay, but was shut out in the eight individual events.

Meet Held in Fieldhouse.

The relays were held in Indiana's fieldhouse with the exception of the discus and javelin throws. Yesterday's torrential rains, followed by a chill wind today, convinced the coaches their athletes should take no chances in the tests which were intended to serve as preliminary competition to the 31st Drake relays next week-end. As a result several events were substituted, such as the 60 yard dash and 70 yard low hurdles, and the distance for the shuttle hurdle race was shortened to 70 yards.

Roy Cochran, Indiana's conference quarter mile champion, who broke the world's indoor record in the University of Chicago fieldhouse last month, was the individual star of the games. Cochran won the 70 yard low hurdles and the broad jump. He anchored in the four lap relay, the event substituted for the half mile relay, and also in the mile relay.

Michigan won the four lap relay, the one mile team race which was contested instead of the four mile relay, and and the sprint medley. Indiana took the two mile relay, opening event, and the distance medley. Bob Saggau won the 60 ward dash for Notre Dame and Dean of Notre Dame, shared the pole vault title with Cushing and Decker of Michigan.

Two Mile Relay Brilliant.

With the possible exception of Storring of Notre Dame's triumph in the mile relay, the two mile was the most brilliantly contested. Indiana's winning time was 7:46, a bit better than the time made by Notre Dame in last year's Drake relays. That team was anchored by the great Greg Rice. The Hoosiers took the lead this afternoon for the first and second half miles, but Ralph Schwarzkopf, running third for the Wolverines, gained a 15 yard lead over Ed Hedges of Indiana.

Then Campbell Kane took up the pursuit of Dye Hogan and finally passed him in the back stretch to win by two yards.

Hogan had his revenge later in the sprint medley. Running the anchor half mile against Kane, Hogan safeguarded a 15 yard lead despite the Hoosier's furious attempt to catch him. Michigan won in 3:33.2.

The four lap relay probably should not have been held, because it bunched all runners with chance of injury. Jenkins, Indiana's second runner, tripped, fell, and recovered, and then he and Boyle dropped the

Platak Takes 6th National Handball Title

Detroit, Mich., April 20 (AP).—Joe Platak, handball's greatest star in a decade, won his sixth consecutive National A. A. U. championship today defeating Jack Clements of San Francisco, 21-15, 21-3, in the tourney finals.

The big Lithuanian southpaw from Chicago handled Clements as he has done most of his foes for a half dozen years—overpowering him with position play and kill shots.

Second Is All Platak.

Clements, exceling with placements and passing shots, made a fight of it in the first game but was at Platak's mercy in the second. At one time in the latter Joe, coldy efficient and in full command of the court, led 19-1.

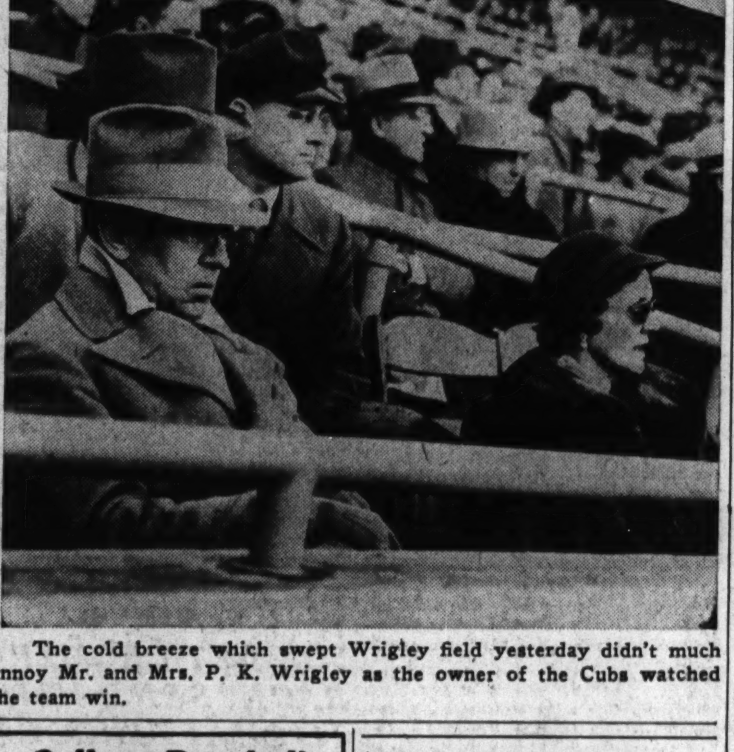
Held to 14-13 in the opener, Platak suddenly took charge and ran six straight points before Clements could halt him for the moment. Then it was over, and Platak put on a machine-like exhibition to make the second game easy with his astonishing precision.

Rally to Win First.

New doubles champions were crowned when Joe Goldsmith and Joe Gordon of Long Beach, Cal., fought down the defending titleholders, Frank [Lefty] Coyle and Ed Linz of New York, 21-18, 21-13.

In superb condition, the Long Beach pair rallied to take the first game after having fallen behind 6-4 and wore down their rivals in the second.

The Californians came up to 16-12 in the opener. There Goldsmith took off his gloves, ran three straight service aces and soon they finished it off.



The cold breeze which swept Wrigley field yesterday didn't much annoy Mr. and Mrs. P. K. Wrigley as the owner of the Cubs watched the team win.

SIMMS INJURED; FRANKLIN BOUT IS CALLED OFF

The 10 round bout between Eddie Simms, Cleveland heavyweight, and Lem Franklin, former Golden Gloves champion, scheduled for Friday night in the Coliseum, was postponed indefinitely yesterday by Promoter Irving Schoenwald. A blood vessel in Simms' leg was ruptured yesterday as he trained for the match. Physicians said it probably will be several weeks before Simms can resume his ring activities.

Cardinal Pro Team Moves to Comiskey Park

BY GEORGE STRICKLER.

The Chicago Cardinals, those prodigal gypsies of the National Football league, will return home to the south side next fall. Owner Charles Bidwill yesterday signed the lease that sends the Cardinals and their new coach, Jimmy Conzelman, back to Comiskey park, where more than a decade ago they climaxed a rise from amateur leadership with a professional championship.

Bidwill announced all the Cardinals' home games will be played in Comiskey park, beginning with a night contest against the Bears on Wednesday, Sept. 25. The Bear game will mark the first appearance of the Cardinals on the south side since 1931, when they moved into Wrigley field to share the north side park with their city rivals, the Bears.

Failed to Emulate Bears.

Signing of the lease yesterday successfully concluded a campaign waged by south side fans and business interests since Dr. David Jones, from whom Bidwill purchased the club in 1933, sought to stimulate attendance by moving north, where Bear prosperity seemed to indicate professional football was more popular.

Professional football was extremely popular on the north side, provided it was Bear football. The Cardinals were unable to get the minds of north side fans off the Bears, and south side fans, considering themselves slighted by the switch, declined to follow "their team" across the city.

Another Wit for Park.

Bidwill's decision to return to Comiskey park is one of the planks in a reorganization platform that is bulwarked by a change of coaches.

With Conzelman, one of sport's most nimble wits, moving into the 35th and Shields district, Comiskey park becomes the headquarters of two of the leading after dinner speakers and wise crackers in athletics. Jimmy Dykes, the White Sox manager, long has had a reputation for sparkling repartee. Conzelman will assure the Cardinals of no worse than a draw with the little round man from the American league.

ROOKIE PITCHER RESCUES LEE; RADCLIFF LEADS BROWN ATTACK

Russell Drives Home Winning Runs in Eighth.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The annoyance those St. Louis Cardinals can provide when they're in a mischievous mood wasn't quite enough to unbalance the Cubs yesterday. At two different stages the Gas House gang dissolved slim leads Hartnett's crew had built up at great effort. And the Cubs, after getting themselves back into comfortable circumstances with a two run splurge in the eighth, experienced a stem winding ninth in which they saved a 4 to 3 decision for themselves only by hacking down the tying run at the plate.

The show, a chilly affair for which there were only 5,626 witnesses, was calm enough for a good portion of the nine inning journey. For seven innings Bill Lee, despite the Cards' tendency toward free hitting, transacted his pitching business so skillfully that only one visiting gentleman scored. Lon Warneke, during the same stretch, was almost miserly about surrendering hits, but, nevertheless, his former pals were able to eke out a pair of runs. Things then began to happen in a big way.

Cards Turn On Heat.

The Cards finally quit foolin' around with a hit here and there. They gave Lee such a blast in the eighth that he had to leave with the tying run already home, three more waiting on the bases and nobody out. Into this trouble laden spot stepped Ken [Lefty] Raffensberger with a rescue act that quickly restored order. Then the Cubs showered Clyde Shoun for two runs in their half, a margin that seemed ample. But Raffensberger was put on the merry-go-round a few minutes later and jumped off safely only because his defense stood fast in the midst of confusion.

Raffensberger's hair raising ride in the ninth began when he passed Stu Martin, but the situation apparently cleared when Slaughter flied to Dom Dallessandro and Mize forced S. Martin. Owen ripped off a single to right. Hopp, who ran for Mize, taking third. Then Pepper Martin sneaked a two bagger into right center. Hopp went home and Owen tried to get their from first with the tying run. He crashed into Al Todd like a ton of bricks, but Todd didn't lose his grip on the ball relayed to him by Herman.

Herman Bunts Safely.

The winning eighth was touched off properly by Billy Herman, who took notice of a lot of open space between himself and Jimmy Brown, enemy third sacker. Herman laid down a bunt and beat it with ease, going to second on Augie Galan's sacrifice. Shoun didn't care about testing Hank Leiber's power so granted him a pass. He gave the same to Dallessandro, the little Nemo of the outfield, but this wasn't intentional. Then Rip Russell, guilty of an error that had helped to hurry Lee to the bathhouse, redeemed himself with a bouncing single over third, Herman and Leiber scoring.

The Cubs didn't make a move toward their first inning run until after Warneke had dispatched both Hack and Herman. Galan launched the idea with a tap which Mize picked up but couldn't get to Warneke, who covered, in time to avoid a base hit. Galan furnished a little more annoyance for the enemy by stealing sec-

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., April 20.—The White Sox, who were held to no hits by Bobby Feller of the Cleveland Indians in their home opener, a fact which naturally made them unhappy, became more doleful today in the home opener of the St. Louis Browns. The Browns gave them a terrible drubbing, 11 to 1, in the Sox's second game of the frost bitten season.

The Sox pounded out a total of eight widely spaced hits off Elden Auker, a homer by Joe Kuhel accounting for the lone Chicago run.

While the offensive was considerably better than in the Chicago's 1 to 0 no hit experience with Feller et al, the comparison in defensives was most harrowing.

Radcliff Shows Off.

The Browns in acquiring their gaudy total of 11 runs busted out nine hits off John D. Rigney in six innings and four off Jack Knott, the assortment including a homer by Rip Radcliff, erstwhile White Sox, traded last winter for Julius Solters.

Rip was certainly a ripper, too. He made two singles besides his homer, and drove in five runs.

Emphasizing the weakness of the Sox defense were four walks, a hit batsman, a wild pitch, and four errors. All but two of the walks contributed to Brownie scoring. Three of the errors were of the ludicrous type, tho it is doubtful if Manager James Dykes or any other Chicago partisans saws anything funny about them.

Bad News Comes Early.

In the first inning both teams showed the results of curtailed batting practice. The Sox made it 10 hitless innings for the season when Bob Kennedy flied to Radcliff, Kuhel fanned, and Mike Kreevich tapped to Don Heffner to put the game's first inning into history. In the Brownie half Radcliff bounced to Luke Appling, then Alan Strange and George McQuinn struck out.

The second was notable because it produced the first Sox hit of the five day old season. With one down Appling singled to center. Then Taft Wright and Eric McNair flied out.

The Browns seemed to have forgotten practice shortage when they went to work in their second inning. Joe Gallagher got things started with a single to deep short, after which Walter Judnich singled to right, putting Gallagher on third. Wright failed to handle the bounce on Judnich's single and before he could run the ball down Gallagher had scored and Judnich was on third. Clift doubled to left, scoring Judnich, and went to third while McNair was throwing out Heffner. George Susce was hit by a pitched ball and Auker struck out, but Radcliff lined a single to center, scoring Clift. Strange then forced Radcliff.

Kuhel Averts Shutout.

Mike Tresh opened the third with a single to center, but Rigney hit into a double play and Kennedy tapped to Auker.

The Browns threatened another big session in their third but were held to a run. With one out Gallagher doubled and scored on a double by Judnich. Clift and Heffner then supplied infield outs.

It was in the fourth that the Sox scored their first and only run of the season to date. The run was chalked up when Kuhel, first up, rammed one over the roof of the right field pavilion and far into thorofare beyond, Kreevich bounced to Harlond Clift, Solters fanned, and Auker tossed out Appling.

There were no Sox hits after Kuhel's homer until Joe knocked a single

IT'S 'O, JAKE' IN OLYMPIA FIELDS LOCKER ROOM

Fina, Former Caddy, Has Unusual Golf Job.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Among the caddies who used to ride the old Illinois Central steam trains to and from their duties at the Olympia Fields Country club nineteen years ago was a 12 year old kid from Roseland named John Fina.

Johnny must have liked to work at the world's largest golf club, for he's still there. Somewhere along the way the John was dropped and he became known as Jake. Today, if you step into Olympia Fields' huge locker room, you're likely to hear "Calling Jake!" blaring thru the public address speakers a dozen times an hour. And Jake manages to answer all calls, for he's a handy man and a busy one in his dual capacity as golf superintendent and assistant to Olympia Fields' able manager, Barney O'Grady.

Has an Unusual Job.

Fina, the ex-caddy who grew up into a pleasant young man standing 5 feet 11 inches in height and weighing 205 pounds, has one of the most unusual jobs in golf. He not only assists O'Grady whenever the latter calls for him, but also supervises the locker room, the conduct of tournaments, whether they are for the regular members or for trade organizations, and the caddies.

When Jake started caddying at Olympia Fields nineteen years ago, Tom Walsh of Westgate Valley, present national president of the P. G. A., was superintendent of golf. The late Tom Ellis followed Walsh, and it was under him that Jake became a tee starter thirteen years ago. In succession, he went up from there to become assistant caddymaster, handicap clerk, caddy clerk, and finally, four years ago, superintendent of golf.

Jake still lives with his father and mother, both of Italian descent; three sisters, and two brothers, in Roseland. When he was graduated from Fenger High school, he had ideas of becoming an engineer, but now his ambition is to become a club manager, and he feels that he could get no finer training for such a post than from a man of O'Grady's ability and experience.

Lots of Things Happen.

For his 31 years, Jake has seen a lot of things happen around Olympia Fields' 700 acres. He witnessed the construction of the championship No. 4 course, the new clubhouse, and the swimming pool. He caddied for Bobby Jones in one of the practice rounds for the 1928 national open tournament. He was right in the middle of all the to-do caused on Aug. 5, 1938, when J. Smith Ferebee played Olympia's four courses twice around in his fantastic 144 hole marathon. And Jake will be on hand on May 27, when the Chicago district trials for the national open are held at the big south side club.

On that day Chuck Tanis, Olympia's professional, will supervise the conduct of the rounds. Jake himself will take over the tee on one of the two courses to be used, while Jack Hayes, the club's handicap clerk, will handle the other.

Hayes attends to all of the handicapping around the club, under Jake's supervision. Jack and Jake check on all the weekly events and on the ladies' regular Thursday program. Their system is such that no Olympia Fields member has a wait of more than 20 minutes, regardless of which of the four courses he elects to play. Hayes and Fina work with Mrs. J. D. O'Connor, chairman of the ladies' golf committee, and Dr. J. Earl Harris, chairman of the sports and pastimes committee. Alex Corrado is caddy clerk, while the three regular tee starters are Louis Rossi, Joe Adducci, and Ray Brown.

Confers with Caddymaster.

Jake also confers regularly with Hank Borquardt, Olympia Fields' caddymaster. Once a week Hank and Jake conduct lectures for the caddy legion at the club. Both have praised the new P. G. A. system of standardized caddy instruction along with Tanis, and the club has ordered 1,000 circular copies of the P. G. A. charts for individual study by their boys.

The locker room is still another Fina province. Olympia Fields boasts one of the largest in the world, containing forty-six alleys with a total of 1,200 lockers. Pat O'Connell, who is now entering his fifteenth season at the club; Bob Tadwald, and Bert Swanson are the three regular majordomos of this important territory.

Special Tourneys His Problem.

Special tournaments are one of Jake's major problems, especially from the locker standpoint. Last year 52,000 rounds of golf were played at Olympia Fields between May 15 and Oct. 15. In addition to the club's own invitational, the Frolics, many of these were played during trade and fraternal tournaments. The largest of these are the Knights of Columbus event, now a regular Olympia feature, and the railway supply men's tournament, each of which draws approximately 700 players. Fifteen of the 46 locker alleys are kept empty for use in special tournaments, and altho as many as 800 will be used for this purpose in a single day, no member is ever without his regular locker. This is arranged by doubling up guests in the special lockers.

Fina confers with Chuck Tanis (right), Olympia Fields professional who also is University of Chicago golf coach. Fina and Tanis work together on the conduct of regular golf events for members. Fina worries about trade tournaments, of which there were 52 at Olympia Fields last season.

Fina studies handicap ratings, prepared by Jack Hayes, who is handicap clerk at Olympia Fields. Fifty-two thousand rounds of golf were played at Olympia Fields between May 15 and Oct. 15 last year.

It's Hinted Dean Needs Keeper if He'd Regain His Old Luster

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., April 20.—Here we are with the White Sox after a training season with the Cubs and Dizzy Dean. Everything seems so peaceful and orderly. Everybody on the Sox thinks about baseball and every player, if he thinks about publicity at all, wants to win favorable comment thru accomplishment on the ball field.

This spring wasn't the first time we ever traveled with Dean. But on the other occasions the fellow never bored us. O, sometimes we'd get a bit fed up with his showboating, but this was easy to overlook in the freshness of the memory of the days when he was a great pitcher. This spring we had our fill of Dizzy Dean and we hope that by the time we rejoin the Cubs in July Dean is either in the glory of a great comeback as a pitcher or he has gone back to his Texas farm. We have no hankering to report again the bunk he has been putting out in lieu of pitching.

A Bit of Phonus Bolognus.

All of which is not in line with any silly thought that we can keep fans from being interested in what Dean does off the field. We are convinced that his maneuvers in the last year and a half have been strictly phonus bolognus and not worthy of the play that we, along with other scribblers, have given them, but we must be wrong. The same antics, accompanied by some good old time Dean pitching once again might be listed as engrossing color. Recently, tho, it has been strictly a smokescreen to cover up the fact that Dean has done little to earn the dough P. K. Wrigley has paid him, not to mention the original cost of the critter.

Writing about Dean and his irresponsible brainstorms would not be so difficult if every one were able to realize that what Dean says and does one minute has absolutely no relation to what he says and does the next minute. He is not the least abashed when one of his statements is proved untrue and he has no hesitancy in denying point blank what he has said seconds before in the presence of from one to a dozen sane listeners.

Easier if He Won Games.

Gabby Hartnett, manager of the Cubs, is stuck with him tho he has advanced to the point where he wouldn't want him on the team even if there were assurances he could win 15 or 30 games. Of course, he would be much easier to take if he were winning games, but until he does he must be rated as a managerial pain in the neck with no balms attached.

One had to be with the Cubs this spring during the three weeks Dean was holding out and absent, and the three subsequent weeks he was with the athletes in training to realize what a menace Dizzy is to team morale. Journalistic hysteria over him is discouraging to players who see their earnest efforts eclipsed by his erratic antics. The fact that his salary has been trimmed to $10,000 has helped among those who get more than that, but not as much as you might think.

If Dean were left to his own blustering devices he'd soon hang himself. But he has the good fortune to have a wife who is much smarter than he'll ever be. Just about the time he is about to break his upper plate, Mrs. Dean catches up with him and gets him back on the track where he stays until he again escapes her vigilance.

May Have to Suspend Rule.

It is likely that the Cubs will be forced to suspend the rule preventing players' wives from riding on the same trains with the team. The late William Veeck encouraged chaperonage by wives while he was president of the Cubs. The present rules were made after his death, tho his system proved out on a good many occasions, notably that of Pat Malone during the years Mrs. Malone was of a mind to watch him day or night. Pat was no such case as Dean, of course, but the policing was well worth the effort.

In Dean's great years on the Cardinals Mrs. Dean was his almost constant adviser and keeper. On the rare occasions she was absent from his presence he always managed to get in some sort of jam or other, but such absences were rare. Dizzy did nothing but mind his pitching when Mrs. Dean was on hand to quell and direct him.

If Dean's arm has come back as much as he claims, don't be surprised if Mrs. Dean is made a vice president of the Cubs. And we'll be one of the loudest applauders of the action.

Dizzy Dean to Make '40 Debut in Card Final

Diz Dean will undergo his formal 1940 unveiling today at Wrigley field when the Cubs encounter the Cardinals in the final game of the series. Diz insists he's ready for the ceremony, but he's a great kidder. He'll draw either Curt Davis or Bill McGee as his opponent.

More than half of yesterday's 5,626 customers did their viewing from bleacher seats, thereby saving a little money as well as getting the assistance of the sun in the problem of keeping warm.

Three present Cubs must be dispensed with to bring the roster down to the 25 player limit which becomes effective May 15, but Manager Gabby Hartnett hasn't given any hints as to where the axe will land. One catcher, one pitcher, and possibly one infielder may be the victims.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., April 20.—Ted Lyons tomorrow will launch his 18th season as a White Sox pitcher when he goes against the Browns in the final of the series. Ted will be opposed by George [Slick] Coffman, who held the Tigers to seven hits when he beat them 5 to 1, in the season opener in Detroit.

Vallie Eaves, the solemn Indian who retired nine straight Cubs, five of whom he whiffed, in the final of the spring city series, is slated to open against the Tigers when the Sox return to Comisky park Monday.

The American league season opener here today, was preceded by old time festivities, with a parade to the flagpole, maneuvers by 400 members of the Christian Brothers college R. O. T. C. unit, band concerts and first ball pitching by Bernard Dickmann, mayor of St. Louis.

Manager Dykes was on the lookout today for Billy Webb, former coach and now boss of the Sox's minor league affiliates. Billy didn't show up, causing James to suspect Bill was out chasing some phenom for one of his minor league teams.

Dykes, the only ex-soldier among the Sox flagpole marchers, was the only member of the Chicago delegation in step with the band.

Joe Medwick, regular Cardinal left fielder, worked out with the Sox and Browns before today's game. He stayed in St. Louis because of a sore back.

Atlanta, Ga., April 20 (AP).—The Atlanta Crackers announced today the conditional purchase from the Washington Senators of Al Williams, right hand pitcher. Williams, who won 14 and lost 9 with Chattanooga last season, had the second best earned run average in the Southern association.

ond. Leiber whacked a single thru short and Galan dashed home. Dallessandro then walked, but Russell bounced to Brown, who stepped on third to end the inning.

Lee had two foes disposed of in the third before encountering a flurry which enabled the Cards to tie the score. Stu Martin walked and galloped to third on Slaughter's single to right, registering a moment later on Mize's single to center. Lee asked for further trouble by handing a base filling pass to Padgett. Then Pepper Martin slashed a high power liner toward short and, while Sturgeon probably would have caught it, his services weren't necessary. The ball hit Mize in the back, automatically ending the inning.

A Triple Helps in Third.

The Cubs got some distance into one of a pair of hits in the third and restored themselves to the lead. The potent item was Galan's triple into the right field corner with one out. After Leiber had popped to Marion in short center, Dallessandro singled to left and Galan scored. The Cubs didn't come across with another hit off their former associate until two were gone in the sixth, when Russell polled a single into left.

The Cards gave Lee plenty of work in the fifth, sixth and seventh. Mize tripled with two out in the fifth, but Bill had enough in reserve to sneak a third strike past Padgett. In the sixth Moore singled and stole second, and Marion walked with one gone, but Warneke very kindly slapped a double play ball to Herman. The seventh was featured by a two base drive with which Stu Martin handcuffed Russell. This happened with one out, but Lee fooled both Slaughter and Mize.

Lee Leaves the Scene.

The eighth, which brought Lee's act to a close, began with Padgett doubling to left center. Pepper Martin bunted to Lee, and Pepper was safe when the throw escaped from Russell's glove. Epps, who ran for Padgett, moved to third, going home a moment later on Moore's two bagger to right. Marion was purposely passed, loading the bases. Jones, a left handed swinger, was unveiled as a pinch batter for Warneke, and this was where Raffensberger came in. Jones popped to Hack, and Brown tapped to Raffensberger for a twin killing by way of the plate.

SOX GET CROMER BACK, SEND HIM TO CHATTANOOGA

Hal Cromer, rookie outfielder from Indiana university, who went to camp with the White Sox, again was a member of the club for a few hours last evening. Hal had been optioned to the Oklahoma City club of the Texas league, but the latter team found itself overstocked with outfielders and returned him.

Shortly after being told of the move, Cromer was instructed by White Sox officials to report to Manager Kiki Cuyler of the Chattanooga club in the Southern association.

Manager Jimmy Dykes and Billy Webb, chief of the club's farm affiliates, believe Cromer will be ready for a big league berth with a season or two in the minors.

with two out in the sixth. The single went to waste because Kreevich supplied the third out with a liner to Radcliff.

Rigney held the Browns to no hits and three walks in the fourth and fifth innings, but Susce opened the sixth with a single to left. Auker's attempt to sacrifice forced Susce, then Radcliff drove out his homer, scoring Auker. Strange doubled to left, but McQuinn grounded to Kuhel and Kennedy threw out Gallagher.

Knott Takes Over.

After Solters and Appling had been retired on grounders in the seventh Wright singled to left for the fifth hit, but the inning ended with McNair's fly to Judnich.

Knott assumed the pitching burden for the Sox at the start of the home seventh and Judnich opened with his third hit, a single, and stopped at second on Clift's single. Heffner, attempting to sacrifice, forced Judnich at third, Knott to Kennedy. Knott caught Heffner off first with a throw to Kuhel, but when the play was diverted to Clift, who broke for third, Kuhel made a bad throw to Kennedy and Clift reached third safely, Heffner advancing to second. Susce walked, loading the bases. Heffner scored on a wild pitch, then Auker bounced a high one to Knott, who dropped the ball, Clift scoring. Radcliff singled to right, scoring Susce and Auker.

Ah! The End.

In the eighth the Browns scored on Gallagher's third hit, a single, a pass to Judnich, Knott's second error, and a long fly.

The ninth was the only inning in which the Sox accomplished two hits. With one down Solters singled and stopped at third on Appling's second hit, a double to left. Wright then flied to Gallagher and Clift threw out McNair.

FAME ESCAPES HERB PENNOCK ON OPENING DAY

Feller's Success Recalls Close One of 1915.

New York, April 20 (AP).—The added fame that has come to Bob Feller for pitching the first no-hit no-run opening game in Major league history nearly was Herb Pennock's back in 1915. . . . People quickly forget the "almost," but Pennock, then a 19 year old youngster still to become one of the great southpaws of his time, went until two were out in the ninth inning of the inaugural between the Philadelphia Athletics and the Boston Red Sox before yielding a scratch single.

In the first inning Tris speaker of the Red Sox waited out a base on balls. After that nobody reached first until Harry Hooper came to bat with two gone in the ninth. . . . He popped a looper just out of Pennock's reach. . . . Larry LaJoie fielded the ball cleanly, but his throw to first was just too late to catch the runner and Pennock's chance at fame went fluttering.

Bucky Harris of the Washington Senators is telling folks he thinks Al Hollingsworth will do his club some good. . . . The last time the Senators picked up a Dodger castoff he turned into a 20 game winner: Dutch Leonard. . . . The Senators also say Sid Hudson, their prize rookie from the Class D Florida State league, didn't look as bad against the Red Sox as the nine hits and seven runs he gave would indicate. . . . They say he ran into a streak of wildness midway. . . . Jim Pofahl, the Senators' freshman shortstop, is a flash at fielding but he was out of position often in Washington's test against the Yankees and once bumped Jim Bloodworth off second base as both tried to handle a double play throw.

The New York Giants as a club have a .195 batting average. . . . Frank Frisch wanted new faces in the Pittsburgh Pirates' outfield, so he made Paul Waner don spectacles on the playing field; you'd never recognize Big Poison now. . . . Ladies days in the Major leagues will get started this week; the Giants will have their first on Friday. . . . Those who remarked about the strangeness of the two Philadelphia clubs each leading their league after opening day didn't mention that the same situation occurred as recently as 1937.

The interference bad weather has given the Major leagues in their first week for the last couple of years has made some of the clubs owners give serious attention to the complaints of Walter O. Briggs, owner of the Detroit Tigers, who wants the schedule shaved a week on each end. . . . Briggs says his club will do no barnstorming next year, waiting in the south until just time to get home. . . . Charley Gehringer, who stayed in Florida this spring, reported in great condition on the eve of the season while some of his teammates were suffering various ailments acquired during the training games.

BASEBALL, CAMPUS BRAND, IS PRETTY FAST, TOO

Aaron Manders of the University of Chicago slides safely into third base in the seventh inning of yesterday's western conference game with Northwestern in Evanston. The Wildcat third baseman is Dennis Cowan. Manders scored later, but Northwestern won, 9 to 3.

Iowa City, Ia., April 20 [Special].—A triple in the ninth inning by Capt. Walt Pyrz halted the University of Iowa's 10 game winning streak as Illinois won a Western conference baseball battle today, 4 to 3.

Iowa was leading 3 to 2 when the ninth opened, but an error by Shortstop Andy Kantor put Drish, Illinois second baseman, on first, and he advanced to third a moment later on Astroth's bunt. Pyrz then drove a triple deep into left field, scoring Drish with the tying run. Pyrz scored the winning run on a bad throw by Dod Cook, Iowa left fielder, on the same play.

First Defeat for Iowa.

It was Iowa's first defeat of the season. It had beaten Illinois yesterday, 7 to 4, and Purdue a week ago in the conference opener, 2 to 0.

Iowa's runs came in the first, fourth and seventh innings, and the visitors' other two were scored in the fourth on singles by Hapac and Dresler and a triple by Evers.

Alan Grant, going the route for the Illini, kept the Hawkeyes from getting out of hand after a shaky start in the first inning when he walked three men and yielded a run. The big right hander struck out nine men.

After a wind-blown triple had helped Michigan score three runs in the opening inning, Saxer took charge and got better as the game progressed.

N. U. BEATS MAROONS.

Northwestern's baseball team made a clean sweep of the two game series with Chicago by winning yesterday's game, 9 to 3, on Roycemore field in Evanston. The Wildcats won the first game on the Midway, Friday, 11 to 9.

Fred Rosch and Dick Klein shared the pitching duties for the Wildcats. The former held the Maroons to five scattered hits for six innings but in the seventh a walk and two singles produced a run. Klein entered the game with the bases filled and struck out Levit on three pitches to retire the side. He struck out five men in the last three innings.

Altho Northwestern made but eight hits off Art Lopatka, five errors contributed to the Maroons' downfall. A walk, two infield errors, and a single by Conteas produced two Wildcat runs in the first inning. Bill De Correvont opened the second inning with a double, stole third, and scored on a fly to the outfield. Dick Erdlitz, another Wildcat sophomore, hit a home run in the third inning to give the Purple a 4 to 0 lead. Score:

Lawrence, Kas., April 20 [Special]. —Glenn Cunningham was last in his last mile here today. Twelve thousand fans turned out for the Kansas Relays hoping to see the former king of milers bid farewell to the Memorial Stadium track with one of his best races.

But the twins from Texas, Wayne and Blaine Rideout, were too much for the veteran. Altho he led the field in the invitation mile run for the first three-quarters, he didn't have the kick for the final dash, and Blaine Rideout, who had trailed the field from the beginning, forged ahead to win in record time.

Blaine's mark of 4:10.1 replaces the former relay record of 4:12.7, set by Cunningham in 1934.

Three Relay Marks Fall.

Three other relay records fell thruout the afternoon as perfect weather and track conditions prevailed for the annual carnival. The two mile college relay team from Abilene [Tex.] Christian set one when Templeton, Beadles, Rushing, and Womask covered the distance in 7 minutes 48.4 seconds. The old record of 7:50.5 had been set in 1933 by Emporia [Kas.] State Teachers.

In the university sprint medley, Oklahoma university's quartet lowered the two year old mark of 3 minutes 27 seconds to 3:25.3. Members of the team were Mathews, Koettel, Gahan, and Lyda. The other mark was set in the invitation college sprint medley relay where Baker, University of Kansas, lowered its own record of 3:39.2. The Baker squad, with two of its last year's record makers, Timmons and Williams, running again, lowered the standard to 3:36.7

Bryan Wins, but Fails.

Beefus Bryan of Texas, who set a new mark in the pole vault the last two years, failed to equal his record of 14 feet 2 inches, winning the event at 13 feet 3 inches.

E. Lee Todd, a former Nebraska school teacher who competed unattached, won the decathlon championship.

Todd took first place in the 100 meter run, 400 meter run, and javelin throw, second in the broad jump and pole vault; third in the high jump and 110 meter high hurdles; fifth in the discus throw; seventh in the 1,500 meter run, and eleventh in the shot put.

Uyval Jones of Wayne university in Detroit, finished second in the 10 event contest. Todd's score was 6,730 points, nearly 1,000 points short of the relay record. He won the event last year with 6,557 points.

Win Mile with Subs.

Using two substitutes, Bill Menke for the quarter mile, and Wayne Tolliver for the anchor mile, Indiana whipped Michigan in the distance medley in the slow time of 10:21. Notre Dame was last, since Illinois did not enter a team. Indiana's Hoke led Michigan's Kautz in the opening half mile of the medley, but Menke trailed by three yards at the end of the quarter.

In the mile, Tolliver permitted Barret to make the pace and then sprinted on the back stretch to beat him.

Notre Dame led all the way in the mile relay, final event. Schiewe opened with a fine first quarter for the advantage. Breidenbach, running last for the Wolverines, finally pulled up even with Roy of Notre Dame, but the Irish runner went out then to win by a yard.

Big Ten Athletic Directors to Vote on Chicago Today

The directors of athletics of the Western conference will meet this morning in the Sherman hotel at 9.30 o'clock to consider the question of scheduling University of Chicago teams, in particular the basketball team. Schedules for 1941 usually are announced the preceding university year.

President Robert M. Hutchins announced last December that Chicago would drop football. Since that action was followed by a newspaper report in which an "unidentified spokesman" for the university reflected on the integrity of conduct of Big Ten sports, some of the conference directors have urged that Chicago be dropped from all athletic schedules.

When the directors met in March they voted to withhold schedules until Chicago had explained or retracted the insinuations of the "unidentified spokesman." That explanation was made by President Hutchins and sent to each of the directors by T. Nelson Metcalf, director of athletics for the University of Chicago.

If Big Ten basketball schedules for 1941 do not include Chicago, it will be obvious that Dr. Hutchins' reply failed to satisfy the majority of directors.

PICTOR SCORES IN CHESAPEAKE; ANDY K. POOR 3D

Winner Improves Derby Rating; Royal Man 2d.

Havre De Grace, Md., April 20 (AP).—Out of Maryland's thorobred breeding grounds, a new "favorite son" splashed today as a challenger for the Kentucky Derby. W. L. Brann's Pictor, a worthy successor to Challedon as a son of Challenger II., fought off five other Derby hopefuls to win the mile and sixteenth Chesapeake stakes by two lengths on a wet track.

And with Pictor's move to the top of the eastern candidates for the derby, the hopes of Andy K. and Flying Fenelon nose dived. For Andy K., until today the second choice in the Derby's winter books, twice ran out—his costly fault last year—and Fenelon showed little liking for either the mud or the distance.

Nor could any others in the field of six—all listed for the Blue Grass classic—make it tough for Pictor. He was on top all the way except for an instant at the half-mile mark, and he came down the stretch gradually increasing his lead until he hit the wire two lengths ahead in 1:53.

Brann, the white haired master of Branncastle breeding farm, whence came Challedon to win ranking as the horse of the year in 1939, just sat there and smiled as Pictor led Harold A. Clark's Royal Man and Andy K. to the wire in that order.

Pictor took the winner's share of $12,800, equaling the record value in the 21 runnings of this annual test for 3 year olds.

Andy K. Fades Out.

A 40 to 1 shot in the derby future books and a $7.90 for $2 price in the mutuels today, Pictor broke well. Andy K. tried to test him first, rounding the first turn, but Brann's baby kept his nose in front. There Andy K. ran out for the first time. At the half-mile, Royal Man made his bid and momentarily poked his way to the front, but Pictor came right back and held a half length lead before they hit the next quarter pole. Royal Man held a four length edge on Andy K. at the wire. Andy kept bearing out repeatedly in the stretch drive. Fenelon tiring, was fourth. Mrs. E. Graham Lewis' General Manager was fifth and William du Pont's Maestro Sascha brought up the rear.

NIGHT EDITOR WINS

Pawtucket, R. I., April 20 (AP).—Night Editor, 6 year old gelding from the Detroit stable of Mrs. C. C. Winters, won his second victory in four days at Narragansett Park by capturing the $5,000 added Spring handicap today over a sloppy track. He won the Inaugural purse Wednesday.

The winner finished the six furlongs three-quarters of a length in front of W. F. Mannagh's Liberty Flight. R. C. Groff's Forever Prince finished third, three lengths back of Liberty Flight and a head in front of the Tall Trees' stable's Bill Farnsworth. Night Editor paid $18.80, $8, and $5.90; Liberty Flight, $5.40 and $3.80, and Forever Prince, $6.80.

The victory boosted Night Editor's earnings in 8 starts this season to $6,375, compared with $4,840 in 20 starts last year.

PARASANG 1ST AT JAMAICA

New York, April 20 (AP).—Parasang, lightly regarded three year old from C. V. Whitney's stable, outran his noted stablemate, Flight Command, over the sloppy Jamaica track today to win the first running of the $5,000 added Experimental handicap.

The Whitney entry, favored at $3.70 for $2 by the betters in the small crowd, finished one-two, four lengths apart, in the six furlong race. Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Merry Knight was third, another five lengths behind. Parasang, who was not nominated for the Major Springs stakes—the Wood Memorial, Kentucky Derby, and Preakness—splashed thru the deep mud in 1:14 to win $3,750.

Only six of the 100 horses weighted by Handicapper John B. Campbell at the end of the 1939 season on the basis of their juvenile form went to the post. Besides cutting the field, the driving rain and cold wind held the crowd down to 11,172 and the day's mutuel handle was only $492,608.

The starting field included three Kentucky hopefuls, Flight Command, Merry Knight and Marogay. They also are eligible for the Preakness along with Straight Lead.

KNICK, well up from the start, outgamed PLAY PENCE at end. The latter ran into a lead in stretch, appeared a sure winner, but tired suddenly. SILENT JIM came from far back and will surely improve. RICHMOND and HY-COP finished in a dead heat for the show. RICHMOND, well up, had no mishap. HY-COP came from far back. GUN BEARER is sure to improve.

Two dollar mutuels paid: Equistar, $9.20 straight, $5.30 place, $3.40 show; Irish Echo, $12.30 place, $4.20 show; Dini, $3.00 show.

EQUISTAR broke very fast, was sent to the front, raced DINI into defeat and gamely stalled off the determined bid of IRISH ECHO. The latter, away slowly, moved up rapidly on inside and finished with a good burst of speed. DINI got away well, followed the pace to top of stretch, then quit. DESTRER showed flash of early speed. SUPREME SPEED had no mishap. MOONFOLLY was outrun.

SUN PHAROS ran a real good race. He handled his weight well, overcame interference at start when he was pinched off and lost much ground. However, boy rated him along to the far turn where he began to send him along. The colt closed gamely going up on inside, then was steered to the outside entering stretch and won going away. SHIP BISCUIT followed the pace to the stretch where he took lead and then tired. MOWMART had plenty of speed for seven furlongs, then quit. THE MALAHAT had no mishap. DEVIL'S CRAG stumbled at start.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse $5,000 added. The Experimental handicap. Three year olds. Start good. Won easily, place same. Went to post at 4:52. Off at 4:53. Two dollar mutuels paid: Parasang, $5.70 straight, $5.30 place, $3.60 show; Flight Command, $5.30 place, $3.60 show; Merry Knight $3.80 show.

PARASANG, away fast and showing a decided liking for the going, opened a good lead soon after the start, saved ground all the way, and drew away at end. FLIGHT COMMAND broke thru the gate before the start, but was caught before he had gone a sixteenth of a mile. He was next best. MERRY KNIGHT moved up fast in last three furlongs, but never menaced the winner. MAROGAY got away well, showed speed for a half mile, then tired. STRAIGHT LEAD failed to show anything worth while. DUDIE was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and a sixteenth. Purse, $1,200, added. The Laurelton handicap, class C. Three year olds and up. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:25½. Off at 5:26½. Two dollar mutuels paid: Confiado $18.70 straight, $7.10 place, $4.40 show; One Jest $4.70 place, $3.60 show; Balloter $3.70 show.

CONFIADO broke slow and trailed far back. He was taken to the outside in the last quarter mile, closed gamely, and just got up to win. ONE JEST was rushed to the front early, set fast pace, and made a game effort. BALLOTER was kept close to the pace and held on well. CHIEF GAMBLE moved up fast in last furlong. DAY OFF was hustled along from the start and tired badly.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. Claiming price, $1,400. Four year olds and up. Start good. Won galloping; place easily. Went to post at 6:00. Off at 6:00½. Arab's Arrow Triumphs.

Arab's Arrow, veteran handicap performer owned by Louise Hickman won the $2,500 Ben Ali handicap, which share interest with the Elmendorf purse on today's program. After setting the pace in the mile and a sixteenth event, he yielded to Calumet Farm's Easy Mon on the last turn. Arab's Arrow came up again in the stretch as the leader tired. He went to the front in the last 50 yards and lasted long enough to withstand the fast finishing Shot Put which had come from last place. Easy Mon wound up third.

RIVERSIDE CLUB PICKED FOR '40 DISTRICT MEET

The Riverside Golf club was designated yesterday as the scene for the Chicago District Golf association's annual amateur championship tournament to be played Aug. 19 to 22. The final arrangements for the site were made by officials of the association and the club. It will be the first major golfing event at Riverside since the National Open qualifying round in 1928.

The tournament will be on a match play basis, with the 32 low qualifiers going into the first round. Defending his district title will be Wilford Wehrle of Tam O'Shanter, whose record 279 won at the Butterfield Country club last year.

Another entrant will be Art Doering of Medinah, one of the leaders in the national amateur at North Shore. Missouri golfers, who will be here for the annual Chicago-St. Louis team match Aug. 18, will remain for the district event, and Wisconsin players will make up another strong contingent.

GREEN BAY SIGNS VAN EVERY, THE GOPHER WIZARD

Pro Champions Bolster Back Field.

Green Bay, Wis., April 20 [Special].—Harold Van Every, left half back and signal caller who was named the University of Minnesota's most valuable player last fall, was signed today by the Green Bay Packers, National Football league champions. Van Every accepted a one year contract. Other terms of the agreement were not made public.

Signing of Van Every is the first move in Coach Curley Lambeau's elaborate plan for the defense of the world's championship and the Packers' assignment in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S All-Star game next August. Ironically, however, Van Every probably will not be of any assistance to the Packers in the All-Star game. One of the country's outstanding backs, he undoubtedly will be a popular candidate on All-Star ballots in THE TRIBUNE'S nationwide poll and in all probability will be a member of the collegiate squad that opposes the professional champions in Soldiers' field.

He Was First Choice.

Van Every was the Packers' No. 1 draft choice and one of half a dozen players who figure heavily in Lambeau's rebuilding plans. The Packers, five time champions of the National league, have been together a long time and Lambeau feels if they are to maintain their position among the league's leaders new men must be brought in to safeguard against the day when the Hutsons, Herbers, Hinkles, and Gantenbeins find the pace too swift.

Van Every was especially important in Lambeau's plans because of his passing ability. At Minnesota he was known essentially as a ball carrier, but as early as his junior year Coach Bernie Bierman rated him along with Davey O'Brien and Sammy Baugh as a passer. The husky triple threat star never earned a reputation for passing, however, because Minnesota, during his career, had no adequate receivers.

Breaks Lund's Record.

Last year Van Every, playing with a team much weaker than previous Gopher elevens, broke Pug Lund's all-time Minnesota ground gaining record. He picked up 733 yards running compared to 667 that Lund, a member of THE TRIBUNE'S all-star squad in 1935, made while the Gophers were marching to a Big Ten Championship.

Van Every suffered a back injury in the first game of the season against Washington in 1938 and was handicaped by the injury thruout the year. Last fall, he returned completely recovered and took over the team's kicking, passing, signal calling, and most of its ball carrying in addition to considerable blocking duty.

The position will not affect Cunningham's amateur standing should he change his retirement plans.

Michigan Eleven Will Fly to 1941 Opener On Coast

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 20 [Special].—The University of Michigan athletic board today approved plans for the football team to fly to Berkeley, Cal., for the opening game of the 1940 grid season Sept. 28 with the University of California. It will be the first time a Michigan athletic team has traveled by air.

Head Coach Fritz Crisler had been considering such a project since California was added to the Michigan schedule to replace Chicago, but final approval of the board in control of physical education was needed. Men under 21 years of age will have to get the written consent of their parents, according to the board's ruling.

The Western conference medal for proficiency in scholarship and athletics for 1940 was awarded to James W. Rae of Toledo, O., who captained this year's Wolverine basketball squad, the board announced. Rae also is a 440 runner on the track team.

The name of the Michigan Intramural building was officially changed to Sports building and Leroy Weir was engaged as a full time member of the athletic staff. Weir had been a part time tennis coach.

BOSTON GROUP ACQUIRES O'HARE DOG TRACK STOCK

Boston, Mass., April 20 (AP).—A Boston group headed by Edward F. Casey announced tonight it had gained control of the Bristol County Kennel club by acquiring stock held by the son and daughters of the late Edward J. O'Hare, slain Chicago race track owner.

A statement issued by a spokesman for Casey, former New England director of the National Youth administration, said the transaction brought to more than 70 per cent the amount of the club's stock in the new group's hands. The Kennel club has conducted dog racing at Dighton for five years.

The O'Hare heirs disposed of their holdings, the statement said, thru Robert F. Hannagan, St. Louis attorney. No price was announced. Hannagan did not deliver 405 shares in the slain man's name, which are held by a Chicago bank as trustee of his estate.

The Boston syndicate includes Eddie Goode, former Harvard baseball pitcher; Arthur Conlon, former Boston Braves infielder; Albert Burgess, former Princeton catcher, and Edward F. Hannon, Boston lawyer, who represented the group in the seven weeks' negotiations.

Casey probably will be elected president of the new stockholders at a meeting either Monday or Tuesday, the group's spokesman added.

O, TO FIGHT THE TARPON NOW IT'S APRIL IN FLORIDA

Moonlight Fishing Is a Thrill Packed Sport.

BY BOB BECKER.

It's fishing time down south if you seek the leaping silver tarpon. The fresh water angler has a chance to pick up a few walleyes in the Wolf river in Wisconsin. Black bass fishing in Reelfoot lake, Tenn., has been tops and doubtless will continue to be good for some weeks. Come May 15 or possibly a little earlier and the lake trout in Canadian lakes will gladly put on an aquatic wrestling contest with any bait caster who wants some fun. Michigan's trout season opens on Saturday.

Of all the salt water fish that weigh from 50 to 150 pounds we'll take the leaping, hard fighting tarpon.

Rates No. 1 Position.

We have caught many species of salt water fish in the Pacific and Atlantic oceans, but the fun of fighting tarpon by moonlight in the famous Boca Grande pass on the west coast of Florida rates the No. 1 position in our list of salt water rod and reel sports. We spent a number of nights in the Boca Grande pass last April. There was a full moon in the sky. On some evenings from 10 to 45 boats drifted with the tide over schools of tarpon. It was an unforgettable picture. Soft balmy nights, a full moon in the sky, tarpon taking lures greedily, 50, 75, and 100 pound fish leaping in the moonlight, flashlights winking at you from many boats, excited yells echoing over the water—that was tarpon fishing in Boca Grande pass in the latter part of April and early in May.

This sport has all the thrills of fishing plus the beauty and excitement of a water festival. We stayed on Useppa Island so we were only about a 15 minute run from Captiva pass, another famous hangout for tarpon and the same distance from Boca Grande pass.

Fun in Reelfoot Lake.

The fishermen who were smart enough to go to Reelfoot lake, Tenn., during the last two weeks had a circus with the large mouth black bass. This famous earthquake lake is just an overnight trip from Chicago. It's a beautiful body of water with many acres of sunken dead trees, great areas of cypress, and large lotus beds. The bass down there will take both bait casting and fly rod lures if you hit the lake when they're biting and the weather conditions are right. [Tennessee's nonresident fishing license costs just $1 for seven days.]

We advise fishermen going down there to take not only a five foot bait casting rod but one about 3½ or 4 feet in order to work lures beneath branches and into pockets with side flips and underhand casts. When you're among the cypress trees you really have to cast in order to keep your lures from getting snagged.

CAMP DEFEATS VAUGHN; TIES FOR LEAD IN CUE MEET

Rubin kept in the race by winning from Vaughn, 125 to 35, in 10 innings. Harry Kilgore, Chicago, defending titleholder, lost his third match in eight starts to Major White, Chicago, 125 to 97, in 21 innings and slipped to fourth position. Nick Oliva ran 67 to beat White, 125 to 106, in 10 innings and Charles Oliva won from Don Tozer, Decatur, Ill., 125 to 118, in 35 innings in other matches.

IT'S WASHINGTON AGAIN IN COAST ROWING REGATTA

Seattle, Wash., April 20 (AP).—Altho they didn't know which California crew they'd row against until they read the morning papers, the University of Washington varsity and junior varsity took no chances today and defeated both in the 37th renewal of the Pacific coast intercollegiate rowing regatta.

The varsity came from behind to triumph by just a shade under two lengths, and the Husky junior varsity oarsmen conquered the Bears by a length and a half.

60,000 Watch Events.

A California victory in the freshman race—first time in 11 years against the Washington Yearlings—saved the Golden Staters from suffering their ninth complete washout.

Official times were:

VARSITY THREE MILE — Washington, 17:15.8; California, 17:23.3.
JAYVEE THREE MILE — Washington, 17:38.10; California, 17:44.9.
FRESHMAN TWO MILE — California, 11:08.6; Washington, 11:12.7.

A brisk head wind from the north churned up Lake Washington at times, and it was impossible for the oarsmen to aim at any of the course records.

Regular Varsity Rows.

Ky Ebright, California varsity coach, suddenly decided to switch his varsity and Jayvee lineups. Last Tuesday he said his veterans would row in the Jayvee because they lost out in final time trials to the younger boat. But last night Ky said he would go back to his original lineups. So it was Cocky Jim Dieterich, one of the best coxswains in the country, who barked orders to the veterans.

California held a half length lead at the half mile, the stroke dropping from a beat of 36 to 30 strokes a minute while Washington stayed at 32. California still held its half length lead at the mile. Then the Huskies went to work.

At the mile and quarter, the white shirted Huskies pushed the nose of their slender 60 foot shell a deck length ahead of the Bears, and gradually incerased their lead to nearly two lengths at the finish.

PRINCETON NIPS NAVY

Princeton, N. J., April 20. (AP).—Princeton's varsity crew, bound for the intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie this year for the first time, got off to a notable start today by whipping Navy in a test on Lake Carnegie.

Pulling into the teeth of a bitter northeast wind which made opening race conditions even worse than usual, the Tigers staved off Navy's closing bid to win by a length and a half. It was the first Princeton victory over Navy on home waters since Heinie Leh's great crew did the trick in 1921, altho the Tigers won on the Severn in 1934.

Princeton's varsity was timed in 10 minutes 47.4 seconds against Navy's 10:54.2. The Jayvee times were 11:11.2 and 11:11.8.

The boatings:

Navy varsity: Bow-Benjes; 2—Lucian; 3—Wheeler; 4—Anderson; 5—House; 6—Pride; 7—Peters; stroke—Cuccias; coxswain—Hancock.

Princeton varsity: Bow—Koenig; 2—Fellon; 3—Smith; 4—Kobilak; 5—Bayard; 6—Drinker; 7—Pettingel; stroke—Mahlow; coxswain—Laughlin.

Detroit, Mich., April 20 [Special].—Joe Sinke and Herb Freitag, stars of the Chicago Classic league's Pabst Blue Ribbon team, rolled into first place in the doubles of the American Bowling Congress tournament today with 1,346. Two splits, an 8-10 for Freitag in the ninth frame of the third game, and a 5-7 for Sinke in the tenth, cut off hopes of an all time high.

Sinke, a postman, paced the attack with 704, and Freitag, a beverage salesman, supported with 642. Sinke shot games of 256, 235, and 214. Freitag had 215, 226, 201.

The Crowd Gathers.

In their third game each reached 97 in the fifth frame. Then they nabbed the spotlight as each posted three consecutive strikes. The largest matineé crowd of the tourney gathered around alleys 13 and 14. On a good hit, Freitag drew the wide open railroad. Sinke got his fourth strike and Freitag spared in the final to collect 20.. Then Joe drew the 5-7 on the first ball in the tenth and was halted at 213.

William Smith and Eli Maricich registered 1,247 in the doubles as Smith, the Power House candy anchor man, tossed a 659 series. Smith hit 605 in the singles but his 523 count in the five man effort slowed his all-events bid. Gills, Budweisers to Settle Randolph Title Thursday

BY C. H. BEUKEMA.

The result of the second of two close races between the Joseph L. Gills and the Budweisers will be determined Thursday night when the Randolph Bowling league winds up its season at Bensinger's. The two teams, whose first race was terminated when the Windy City league closed Monday with the Gills as champions and the Buds in a second place tie two games behind, are tied in the Randolph circuit, each with 63 games won and 24 lost.

The Budweisers, who until two weeks ago, led the Randolph league race, face the more difficult opposition, being scheduled to meet the Whitecaps who are tied for sixth place. The Gills oppose the Franklin MacVeagh team, which is well down in the standings.

Heavy Firing Anticipated.

Heavy firing is anticipated before the next three places in the Randolph standings are determined. The third place None Better Ice Creams, with 51 won and 36 lost, meet the La Palina Cigars; the fourth place J. J. Butlers, 50 won and 37 lost, oppose the Furman Funerals, and the fifth place Mineralites, 49 won and 38 lost, engage the Wagner and Hansons. Following the presentation, an individual sweepstakes will be held, open to all bowlers in the league and others attending the affair. The event will mark the conclusion of the Windy City's 35th year as a league.

CHICAGO CRICKET CLUB WILL OPEN SEASON MAY 12

State Association Makes Plans for Year.

The Chicago Cricket club, holder of the Barrett cup as champion for 1939, will start defense of the title in the Illinois Cricket association league play on Sunday, May 12, when the season opens. This was decided at the annual spring meeting of the association yesterday in the Morrison hotel when the schedule for the season was formulated.

The same ten teams which participated in last year's play will again compete, each club meeting the other twice. In addition, play in the Century of Progress knockout tourney for the K. A. Auty trophy will take place. This has been an annual affair since its inauguration in 1933. Other activities will be the visit of a combined Flint-Detroit team for a series of games the first week in July.

To Play in Canada.

The Chicago Cricket club will again make its annual trip, the tenth since its inception in 1928, to Canada and points east, leaving here on July 15 for a two weeks' tour during which seven games will be played. For the first time in the history of Chicago cricket a local team will visit Boston. Games will also be played in Philadelphia and in two Canadian cities, London and St. Catharines. The program for the trip is as follows:

July 16 at London [Ont.], Canada.
July 17 and 18 at St. Catharines [Ont.], Canada.
July 20 and 21 at Boston.
July 24 and 25 at Philadelphia.

One of the grounds provided by the park board, that at 48th street and the Outer drive, will not be available for play this year as new turf is to be laid during the summer. The two teams, Washington Park and Hyde Park, which played there last year, will transfer their activities to Washington Park and return there next year.

Same Officers in Charge.

The same officers will conduct the affairs of the Illinois Cricket association as last year. They are: President, K. A. Auty; treasurer, Harry H. Gawthorp; secretary, Leslie J. Youngren, Room 1010, Wrigley building, Chicago. The opening day's schedule:

Lake Forest vs. Chicago at Lake Forest.
Hyde Park vs. South Park at Washington Park.
Winnetka vs. Milwaukee at Winnetka.

THRONGS ATTEND DETROIT RITES FOR KID McCOY

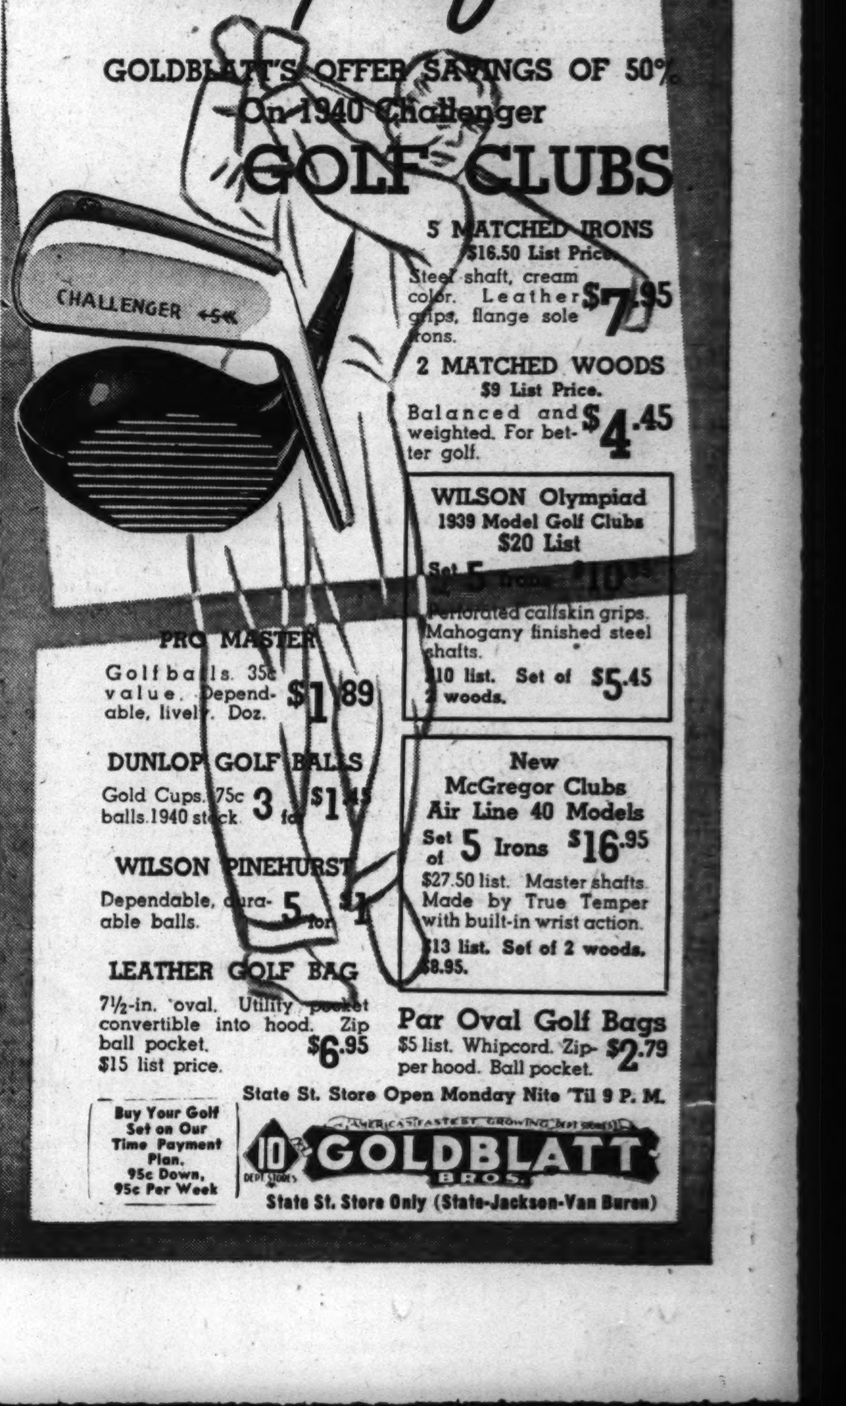
Detroit, Mich., April 20 (AP).—To the last Norman Selby—Kid McCoy of the prize ring—drew crowds about him.

Hundreds attended funeral services today for the former world's middleweight boxing champion, who took his own life last Thursday because he could not stand "this world's madness," and as many stood outside the mortuary where they were held.

Pallbearers were those McCoy knew during a life that was as colorful as that of any fictional character. Among them were Jack Rush, who managed Selby as a barnstorming young unknown years ago, and Hype Igoe, New York boxing writer.

Purdue Track Men Run Over Wayne U., 96 to 34

Lafayette, Ind., April 20 [Special].—Despite a howling wind that handicapped both track and field men, Purdue had an easy time defeating Wayne university in a dual track meet this afternoon, 96 1-6 to 34 5-6.



GRAINS ADVANCE SLIGHTLY IN DULL TRADING SESSION

Grain markets fluctuated indecisively yesterday as the public and professional traders debated what might develop in the European political situation over the week-end.

Wheat and corn prices held within a range of about 1 cent. Good support appeared on the declines, while the upturns in wheat brought in hedging sales against loan grain. Closing trades on wheat were ⅛ to ½ cent higher. Corn gained ⅛ to ¼ cent a bushel. Oats, rye, and soybeans were up a little.

Farmers Refuse to Sell.

Despite the fact that farmers are being offered the highest price for cash corn in about two and a half years, Chicago receivers said they found little grain for sale yesterday. Bids of 60 cents a bushel at country elevators in north central Illinois bought only 1,500 bushels of corn, and Indiana distillers are said to have paid up to 61½ cents for grain in central Illinois.

Fair amounts of white corn are understood to have been purchased recently from the government by Chicago interests, who took the grain on the basis of 67 cents a bushel at country elevators. White corn commands a big premium over the yellow in the open market.

Corn Shipped to East.

Two steamers loaded with over 500,000 bushels of cash corn cleared from Chicago for eastern lake ports, and shippers estimate that possibly 1,500,000 bushels more will be sent east before the end of April. All of the cash corn stored at eastern ports last winter is said to have been disposed of, and grain is being shipped from here to take care of the prospective New England demand.

Fair and warmer weather prevailed in the southwest, resulting in reports of a better outlook for the winter wheat crop in that area. A weather bureau long range forecast indicated showers in the southwest this week, with temperatures about normal. Dry weather is expected in the northwest. The latter will facilitate spring wheat seeding, brokers said.

COMMODITY LIST MOVES HIGHER ON WAR BUYING WAVE

Traders Debate Prospect for Domestic Trade.

Commodity prices swung upward yesterday on a new wave of war buying to climax a week of trading that saw many of the staples move higher—some to the highest levels of the last two years.

Some traders said the advances herald the autumn boom in factory activity, while others said they expect a late spring industrial upturn.

Rubber, sugar, and other staples that act as sensitive reflectors of war conditions started their advance with Germany's drive into Norway. The opening of another amphitheater of war gave rise to a general belief in trading circles that increased exports from this country would result.

In yesterday's trading world sugar futures rose nearly 1-20 of a cent a pound. Others that showed gains included copper, hides, cocoa, wool tops, and cottonseed oil. Coffee, recently priced at record low levels, again declined as did Straits tin. Domestic sugar and rubber were mixed.

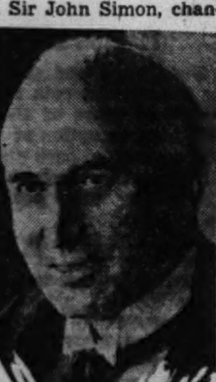
BRITISH AWAIT 'BAD NEWS' ON 2D WAR BUDGET

Minimum Cost Put at 10½ Billions.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 20.—A new era in British public finances will open Tuesday when Sir John Simon, chan- Tuesday when Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer submits the second war budget to parliament, appropriating to the state approximately 50 per cent of the entire national income.



Sir John Simon.

Statistical experts, reviewing the country's financial position with special reference to the expanding war costs, estimate the chancellor will have to find about 3 billion pounds sterling [about $10,537,500,000] from taxation and loans to cover the prospective expenditure for the fiscal year 1940-'41. The authoritative market organ, the Economist, suggests the budget spending may reach as high as 3 billion, 420 million pounds [about $12,012,750,000] during the next 12 months. In the year just ended Britain's national income was estimated at 6 billion pounds [about $21,075,000,000].

Cautious About Forecasts.

On the eve of the budget announcement financial writers are displaying unusual caution in attempts to forecast the chancellor's plans. The last fiscal year has cut across both peace and war conditions, and the government expenditure of 1,827,500,000 pounds [about $6,409,000,000], of which 778,500,000 pounds [about $2,422,700,000] was raised thru loans, bears no relation to what may be required in the coming months.

The outlook is further obscured by the secrecy surrounding the expenditure on the fighting and defense services and the impossibility of predicting what the transition from the seven months' "quiet" war into the blazeup of hostilities, such as in Scandinavia, may involve. If the precedent of the last war is followed Simon will not attempt to estimate the total expenditure for the 12 months ahead, but will apply to parliament periodically for "votes of credit" sufficient to cover the war needs for a few months at a time.

War Spending Is Rising.

An analysis of the revenue figures already published, however, shows that Britain's actual war spending between September and March—altho totaling 116 million pounds less [about $407,450,000] than the 1,413,000,000 pounds [about $4,963,172,000] the chancellor estimated, owing to the lag in production—jumped from 2,750,000 pounds daily [about $8,759,000] to more than 5,000,000 pounds daily [about $17,562,000] and is still increasing at the rate of about 1 per cent weekly.

A modest estimate, the experts contend, of war spending for the coming year will total at least 6,000,000 pounds daily [about $21,075,000] or 2,190,000,000 pounds [about $7,692,300,000] for the 12 months. On top of this the civil expenditure is estimated at 420,000,000 pounds annually [about $1,475,200,000] and the interest on current war borrowings is expected to add 30,000,000 pounds [about $1,053,370,000] to last year's figure of 247,000,000 pounds [about $867,500,000] for the national debt.

Minimum Believed 10½ Billions.

Six hundred ninety-seven million pounds [about $2,468,000,000] for domestic costs plus the war expenditures bring the total budget slightly below the 3 billion mark [about $10,537,500,000] which, financial writers appear to be convinced, is the minimum to be expected.

The problems confronting the chancellor in putting the final touches to the budget this week-end may be gauged from the fact that even on the assumption that the war this year costs no more than 6,000,000 pounds daily [about $21,075,000], the increased expenditure would swallow up the whole of last year's tax revenues.

The whole nation is waiting to hear how a bill of 3 billion pounds [about $10,537,500,000] or more will be paid without endangering the country's financial structure. The government's recent ban on the withdrawal of whisky and tobacco from warehouses has given rise to the belief that both will have to pay higher taxes beginning Tuesday and many suppliers are withholding their stocks in the hope of reaping a profit.

Stocks Finish Dull Week with Brisk Upturn

New York, April 20 (AP).—The stock market today ended a rather gloomy week with a brisk rally that put favorites up fractions to more than 2 points.

Specialties, including shipbuilding, woolen, sugar, paper, and packing issues touched off the revival in the first hour. Steels and aviations then joined the procession in active recoveries. New highs for the year or longer were well distributed, altho top marks in many cases were cut down by profit taking at the close.

Business News Encouraging.

The upswing was attributed partly to Paris dispatches telling of French efforts to arrange a Mediterranean entente with Italy. War news generally left Wall street as much confused as ever.

Business developments were fairly encouraging and some short covering and speculative purchasing was based on belief the market would break its stalemate with a rise.

Volume expanded to 720,660 shares compared with 495,370 a week ago. It was the best Saturday's turnover since Nov. 4.

Ship Stocks at New Highs.

New 1940 peaks were established by New York Shipbuilding, American-Hawaiian Steamship, International Mercantile Marine, Electric Boat, International Paper, American Woolen, Armour, Wilson & Co., and Zonite.

Prominent also in the advance were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Glenn Martin, Douglas Aircraft, Lockheed, American Airlines, Eastern Air Lines, American Sugar Refining, South Porto Rico Sugar, Studebaker, Westinghouse, and American Telephone. Most motors, rails, oils, and coppers were up small amounts.

The outlook for heavier demand for ships, planes, meats, and other products as the overseas conflict widens was seen as a stimulating market influence. Helpful also were indications next week's steel mill operations would advance, a continued high level of automobile sales and an increase in department store spending over 1939.

LUMBERMEN WILL ASK CONGRESS TO PAY LOST WAGES

Burlington, Ia., April 20 [Special].—The United States congress will be asked to authorize payment of wage claims totaling more than $8,000 to nearly 200 lumbermen who seized Eagle Island in the Mississippi river during a sit-down strike in December, 1937, it was announced here today. J. A. Daily Jr., attorney who is representing the lumbermen, returned here yesterday after conferences with Iowa congressmen in Washington, D. C.

The strike followed a dispute over unpaid wages with two Chicago contractors who had been awarded contracts for clearing timber off the islands by the war department. Basis for presenting the claim to congress is that the contractors' bondsmen were approved by the government and that all their efforts to collect the wages due from either the contractors or their bondsmen had failed.

The contracts, let to the Foundation Waterproofing company and Joseph P. Casey, both of Chicago, were canceled after the strike. Sureties for their bonds were Lawrence and Fred O'Connell, also of Chicago.

QUIZ ON NEW CAR TRANSPORT MAY LAST YEAR MORE

Washington, D. C., April 20 (AP).—The Interstate Commerce commission, which is conducting a nation-wide investigation into the transportation of new automobiles, today had amassed 2,600 pages of testimony with the end not yet in sight. Officials predicted it might not be concluded for a year or more.

The inquiry is being made into the rates, charges, rules, regulations, and practices of the various kinds of carriers.

A similar proceeding embracing movements of new automobiles on the Great Lakes and by coastwise and intercoastal carriers is being conducted by the maritime commission. The ICC instituted its proceeding on petition of the National Automobile Transporters Association, Inc., representing motor carriers which transport new cars from manufacturing and assembling points.

Cowboys usually are paid $40 a month and room and board.

Asserts Coal Prices Upset Freight Rates

Washington, D. C., April 20 (AP).—A charge that establishment and enforcement of minimum prices for sale of bituminous coal at the mines would destroy the coal freight rate structure built up by the Interstate Commerce commission was made to congress today by J. D. A. Morrow, president of the Pittsburgh Coal company.

J. D. A. Morrow.

He based his assertion on provisions of the Guffey act directing that the coal division, in fixing prices, consider differences in freight rates from the mines to common consuming districts.

Put in Congressional Record.

In a statement inserted in the Congressional Record by Representative Allen [D., Pa.], an opponent of the coal act, Morrow, chairman of the committee for amendment of the National Bituminous Coal act, added:

"As we understand it, the statute compels the coal division to take this action in order to protect high cost mines and high cost districts against the competition of lower cost mines and lower cost districts, and in order to comply with the requirement to give every present operator an equal opportunity as against every other operator to sell his coal in whatever market he reaches.

"But the present producing districts and the present volume of tonnage from those districts has been built up on the freight rate structure in effect over many years.

Hits "Unlimited Power."

"We do not believe that congress intended to repeal the rate fixing powers of the Interstate Commerce commission with respect to bituminous coal when it passed the bituminous coal act, nor to put into the hands of the administrators of that act the unlimited power over freight rate relationships on coal that they are now exercising."

Morrow also expressed the belief of "some of us" that oil and gas interests might have been "secretly influential in getting this law passed."

His statement was prepared for presentation to the senate appropriations committee but it was delayed until after the committee had finished discussion of the coal division's appropriations.

Mexican Road Takes Off Train; Blames Oil Shortage

Nogales, Ariz., April 20 (AP).—The Southern Pacific of Mexico has suspended operation of excursion trains or "extra" freight trains, due to a shortage of fuel oil, announcing that only a six day supply for regular operation is available. J. H. Small, vice president of the railroad, charged the National Railways of Mexico with unfair proportioning of the fuel oil supply.

FOREIGN BONDS RISE AS FRENCH PREMIER ACTS TO WOO ITALY

New York, April 20 (AP).—Sensing favorable implications in the foreign news, the bond market moved ahead today. Italian dollar loans showed a burst of strength on Premier Reynaud's declaration in Paris that friendly conversations were proceeding with Italy and Spain looking toward an entente in the Mediterranean.

Italian government 7s shot up 4⅛ points to 55. Rome 6½s made a similar gain, and the Milan 6½s rose 3⅜. Italian public utility 7s climbed 5½. Danish, Belgian, and Canadian issues also improved. German obligations weakened, as did Norway 6s and New South Wales 5s.

Industrial reports pointing to better business helped to broaden support for many domestic bonds in the so-called speculative class. Low yield issues were steady, but United States government loans again slipped back, closing with losses running to 1-32ds on small volume.

Transactions totaled $3,078,700 face value against $3,256,000 the previous Saturday.

GIRLS WHO QUIT JOBS TO MARRY GET IDLE PAY

Many working girls who shift from a career to marriage receive a "dowry" ranging up to $512 from unemployment compensation, the Illinois Manufacturers' association reported yesterday.

This substantial wedding present, conveniently paid in weekly installments over two 16 week periods, is just "another burden on industry," the association charged.

Officials of the division of placement and unemployment compensation of the Illinois department of labor admitted that under certain circumstances a working girl who quit her job to get married would receive benefits. These conditions include [1] when she is dismissed because of her marriage; [2] when she quits a job in one city to move to another to get married, and [3] when she voluntarily quits, then changes her mind and wishes to work but cannot get a job.

The amount of benefits received may be as much as $16 a week, depending on the amount earned in the insured period.

U. S. STEEL ORE UNIT CUTS PRICE AT LAKES PORTS

Cleveland, O., April 20 (AP).—Oliver Iron Mining company, a United States steel subsidiary, announced today a price of $4.45 per gross ton for Mesabi non-Bessemer iron ore delivered at lower Great Lakes ports.

Thus Oliver, which until recently produced ore solely for U. S. Steel, meets the Mesabi non-Bessemer price announced by Pickands, Mather and Co. Other ore producers indicated they also would meet the reduction of 50 cents a ton.

Ford Motor company closed an ore contract with Oliver last winter but prices were not made public.

Cheap Sterling Barrier to Egg, Butter Exports

The outlook for exports of American eggs and butter to the United Kingdom is unfavorable, despite reports which caused the egg futures market to rally last week, traders declared yesterday.

The view was expressed that in competition for the British market, Canada and other units of the empire have an advantage over the United States because of the foreign exchange situation.

Samuel Sugar, commodity trader and member of the Chicago Mercantile exchange, said he could find no basis for the export rumors which boosted egg prices. He cited the Canadian position as an exporter and the effect which the cheap British pound would have on any purchases of American eggs.

Cheap Pound is Factor.

"All that Canada is getting from Britain for eggs," he said, "is 25¾ cents, in Canadian money. On the basis of the Canadian dollar's value the price being paid to Canada by Britain would be equal to only about 20½ cents in United States money.

After allowing for the 5 cent British tariff on any American eggs sent to Britain, only 16 cents would be left as the price which Britain would pay. That is about 2½ cents a dozen lower than the American market."

Sugar said, however, that eggs might move from the United States to England if the 5 cent tariff were removed. He said the situation with regard to butter exports has not been clarified, but added:

"There again the question of exchange, tariff, and price differentials favor Canada and other parts of the British empire."

Prices Rise Slightly.

Heavy receipts of fresh eggs influenced selling of October futures yesterday, but a steady cash market and reports of a light into storage movement in other markets pushed prices up 0.05 cent a dozen. Canners and hedgers covering inventories provided most of the contracts. Fresh egg receipts were 35 per cent heavier than a year ago.

The reduction of ½ cent a pound Friday in the Federal Surplus Commodities corporation paying price at which it had pegged the fresh butter market for 92 score grade resulted in a similar reduction on all other grades yesterday with the exception of carlots of 90 score which eased ¼ cent a pound. Futures closed 0.05 to 0.2 cent a pound lower.

TWIN HIAWATHAS SET NEW MARCH TRAFFIC MARKS

Passenger travel on the twin streamlined Hiawathas of the Milwaukee road during March was the best for the month since the trains were put into service, officials announced yesterday. Running between Chicago and the Twin Cities, the morning Hiawatha carried 12,751 passengers during March, an increase of 1,603 over March, 1939. The afternoon streamliner carried 23,534 passengers, an increase of 4,178 over March a year ago.

NEW ANALYSIS REVEALS FARM EXPORT LOSSES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 20.—Uncle Sam's booming market in war implements but loss of prestige as a marketer of farm products under wartime conditions was shown graphically today in an analysis of 1939 foreign trade released by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

The report showed that aircraft parts and accessories made the most spectacular increase among major United States exports during 1939. The total of $116,910,000 exceeded the 1938 figure by 71 per cent and the five year average, from 1934 to 1938, by 259 per cent.

Heavier shipments also in cotton, metals, machinery, and chemicals—all vital to warfare—contributed to a rise in export trade to $3,177,344,000, or 2.7 per cent above 1938 and 19 per cent higher than the five year average.

More Than Offset by Gold.

Altho exports of merchandise in 1939 exceeded imports by $859,086,000, the excess of gold and silver imports over gold and silver exports amounted to $3,644,828,000, giving the United States a "visible" excess of imports amounting to $2,785,742,000.

The loss of farm markets, as strongly criticized by farm interests, was shown in trade figures for agricultural products. American export trade in foodstuffs in 1939 amounted to $313,284,000, or 28 per cent below 1938, altho 15 per cent above the five year average. Restricted buying by the United Kingdom and France affected exports of foodstuffs adversely, the report said.

Export and import controls established by the British and French have served to shut out American products not desired by those governments while admitting such products as are needed. Farmers have protested that their markets have been sacrificed to the advantage of manufacturing interests.

Act to Guard Trade.

The United States treasury this week took one defensive step in ordering customs collectors to assess British imports at the official, or higher, rate of pound sterling when such goods have been admitted on an ad valorem basis. Such goods previously gained a competitive advantage by coming in at the cheaper sterling rate of about $3.50. The official rate is $4.02½ to $4.03½.

"War buying by belligerents brought heavy increases in some military items," said Edward L. Bacher, manager of the chamber's foreign commerce department, in a foreward to the trade analysis. "On the other hand, belligerents' buying of a number of nonmilitary commodities was restricted, or shifted to their own colonial areas, or to neutral countries where exchange relationships accorded the warring powers an economic advantage.

Some Markets Disappear.

"Largely disappearing from our list of important customers and suppliers have been, of course, the large areas of central Europe, represented by Germany and the nations then under her control.

"From Sept. 1 [when the war began] on, much neutral trade looked toward the United States as supplies from Europe became uncertain. However, the governments and the traders of England and France have indicated their determination to do all that they can to maintain their export trade, which is of strategic importance in creating needed foreign exchange."

While exports of farm products fell—accounting for only 21 per cent of the total value of exports, compared with 27 per cent for 1938, 29 per cent for the five year average, and 35 per cent between 1927 and 1931—the report showed that imports of agricultural products constituted 49 per cent of total imports last year.

Big Part Duty Free.

The report disclosed further that 61.4 per cent of imports in 1939 entered free of duty, compared with 60.7 per cent in 1938. The average rate of duty on dutiable goods in 1939 was

Big Reserve Bank Job to Be Filled Soon

BY JOHN FISHER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 19.—Banking authorities and the banking world in general were speculating today on the winner of the choicest plum in the federal banking system — the presidency of the Federal Reserve bank of New York.

This bank is rated as the world's largest and is the most important unit in American banking, acting as it does as principal fiscal agent for the United States treasury, besides being the largest of the 12 federal reserve banks.

The position of president of the New York bank will be vacant as George L. Harrison, in the federal reserve system for 25 years and head of the New York bank since 1936, has resigned to become president of the New York Life Insurance company on July 1.

Receives $50,000 Salary.

Harrison has been getting $50,000 per year, the highest salary among reserve offices. Altho this is no indication that his successor will get the same, the position will carry with it ample salary, prestige, and power. Prospective candidates for the position have official circles buzzing here, especially because there are reports that the treasury and federal reserve board may clash on the choice of Harrison's successor.

The bank's president will be appointed by the board of directors, of which there are nine members, subject to the approval of the board of governors of the federal reserve system. This gives the federal reserve board veto power. The treasury holds no specific power over the appointment but has official interest in the selection of its fiscal agents, and can bring the weight of its influence to bear on the appointment.

Eccles Has Candidate.

The salaries of all officers and employés of the reserve banks are also subject to the approval of the board of governors. The hitch in the present situation is that Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the federal reserve board has a candidate other than that favored by the bank's directors and the treasury. Eccles has usually had his own way with the board of governors.

The most likely candidate for the position is Allan Sproul, now first vice president of the bank and regarded as Harrison's logical successor. He is understood to be the No. 1 choice of the directors and the treasury, which has been impressed by his management of treasury business.

But rumors are rife that Eccles is backing Wayne Chatfield Taylor for the post. Officials of the reserve board deny this, but other sources place credence in the reports. Taylor was assistant secretary of the treasury, but resigned because of differences with Morgenthau, who would be expected to oppose Taylor's candidacy. Since leaving the treasury Taylor, whose home is in Chicago, has been making relief surveys abroad for President Roosevelt and the American Red Cross.

Believe Outsider Is Opposed.

It is believed also that the bank's directors would oppose any outsider taking over the post. Owen D. Young, prominent industrialist, is chairman of the bank's board of directors, and Beardsley Ruml, treasurer of R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., is vice chairman.

Sproul, 44 years old, has been first vice president of the New York bank since 1936, when the titles of the bank's officers were changed from governor and deputy governors to president and vice presidents. From

INDUSTRY SLIPS ANOTHER COG AS HORIZON CLOUDS

War Casts Shadow on Trade Future.

BY LELAND FORRESTER.

Most of the immediately available business indices declined last week. The few gauges that edged upward were mostly those applying to branches of activity which stand to benefit at least temporarily from the spread of war, such as the manufacture of airplanes and ships.

The steel industry slackened output. Cotton textile production declined. Private engineering construction awards shrank, and home building barely held steady. Retail trade was spotty and averaged a little less in volume than in the preceding week. Wholesale trade made no headway.

Auto Sales a Bright Spot.

Automobile production increased, but the gain did not meet seasonal expectations. Auto sales, however, continued brisk. Bank clearings expanded. Latest figures on electric power output and freight loadings disclosed gains, but the available figures covered the week ended April 13.

Trade Outlook Uncertain.

While the intensified war was spreading its shadow of uncertainty over many industries, it set off flashes of speculative activity which boosted corn and wheat to two year high price levels and sent "war stocks" climbing. Most other stocks weakened, reflecting industry's failure to catch the spirit of spring.

GRAIN TRADERS

In my grain letter of Saturday, April 13, I pointedly advised all clients to stay long wheat in the expectation of a further price advance. I then stressed the probability of a rather sharp bull move within the next two or three weeks, with the Chicago September future pushing up to somewhere within the 115 to 120-cent level. That forecast has been partially fulfilled.

Now, however, there are indications which suggest rather strongly that the current bull move is perhaps nearing its final stages, and that from the high point in the present upswing there will be a broad decline extending into late May or early June. This and other important features of the market are discussed in a current issue of my grain market service.

In order to acquaint you with my complete advisory service on grains (and common stocks) I will air mail you my regular market letter for this week, and also that of April 27th when issued, upon receipt of one dollar.

DECREES FILED IN TYPEWRITER, CONTAINER CASES

Consent Plan Bans Price Fixing and Other Acts.

New York, April 20 (AP).—Federal prosecutors announced settlement by consent today of two of the government's major antitrust suits, one accusing typewriter manufacturers and the other paper box makers of having fixed prices and restrained trade.

Six of the country's biggest typewriter manufacturers on one hand and the National Container association and 26 of its corporate members on the other were indicted several months ago in the two cases. Federal officials said consent decrees would be submitted to Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard in both cases next Tuesday.

Several Companies Involved.

Typewriter companies involved are Underwood-Elliott-Fisher of Delaware and New Jersey; the Royal Typewriter of New York; Remington-Rand, Inc., of Delaware, and L. C. Smith and Corona Typewriters, Inc., of Syracuse, N. Y., and New Jersey. The firms were said to manufacture from 95 to 98 per cent of the typewriters sold in this country.

Assistant United States Attorney General Barkeley Henderson said that under the terms of the decree, the defendants would be prohibited from agreeing among themselves or with others on prices, trade-in allowances, and discounts in typewriter sales.

The decree also would outlaw the destruction of used typewriters manufactured by competitors to remove them from the market and the buying up of competitors' used products to maintain prices. Mergers and changes in discount prices would be barred except by court action or other federal intervention.

Charges in Container Case.

Defendants in the container suit had been accused of price fixing and production curtailment thru trade associations in the $300,000,000 corrugated and fiber board container field.

Under the decree, defendants would refrain from restricting production and controling prices and would eliminate certain practices the government contended went beyond legitimate activities of trade associations.

Federal officials said that for the first time in the history of the Sherman antitrust act interested persons would be given opportunity in federal court to express their views on the consent provisions.

BLACK GOLD.

Discovery of oil in commercial quantities in Nebraska and Mississippi and the boom in the new fields of southern Illinois and Indiana has brought out the usual swarm of smooth tongued promoters and dealers in oil royalties.

Exploration of new oil fields always provides shady promoters operating on the outskirts of the law with glittering bait for gullible investors. The lure is the supposedly easy riches found in "black gold," as crude oil is described in sales rhapsodies.

The average investor usually knows little about oil royalties. He does not realize the risk involved nor can he determine what he is really buying.

An oil royalty is the interest retained by a landowner in the mineral wealth of his property after he has leased certain rights or working interest to an oil operator. The royalty is usually one-eighth of the gross output of crude oil on the property.

The oil operator agrees to pay all development and drilling expenses. If oil is struck, the operator gets seven out of every eight barrels of oil and the landowner receives one barrel in payment for the lease.

Landowners often sell their entire royalty or a fraction of it to a promoter. This interest is then subdivided by the promoter into smaller units and sold to investors.

Fraudulent promoters emphasize the possibility of rich returns from oil royalties but neglect to reveal that:

1. There is no dependable method of determining the recoverable oil reserves of the property involved.
2. Oil production of any well sooner or later reaches the point of diminishing returns and eventually will run dry.
3. Offset wells on adjoining property may drain off a considerable part of the available oil.
4. State proration laws limit production and thus restrict the income from a well.
5. No oil may be discovered on the property.

Oil royalties must be considered highly speculative because of their very nature. The investor who has no expert knowledge of the oil business, who cannot afford the risk, nor has any way of testing the truth of a promoter's assertions should avoid buying oil royalties. He should realize that royalty payments are to a large degree return of the principal invested and cannot be considered income until payments exceed the invested capital. More important, there is no recognized market for this type of security in which it may be sold easily.

can companies' sales abroad, the Associated Press had this to say:

"Whether expansion of dealings with Britain and France and the remaining neutrals in Europe would be sufficient to make up for foreign trade losses elsewhere remained a moot point in financial circles.

"Trade figures for March showed exports still running well ahead of last year, despite a cut in cotton shipments. The $344,000,000 export total was 20 per cent above the corresponding 1939 month."

Companies Expand Facilities.

Stockholders of many corporations held annual meetings during the week and heard reports which for the most part indicated that business currently is better than it was a year ago.

Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, forecast a 15 per cent increase this year in the amount of money the company will spend on construction and improvements, as compared with last year. The probable 1940 expenditure was estimated at $135,000,000.

How business fared in the first three months of 1940 was indicated by a compilation of the earnings of the first 90 corporations reporting for the quarter. They had an aggregate net income which was 43 per cent larger than the earnings for the corresponding 1939 period.

COTTON

Trading in cotton was somewhat restricted yesterday but the market showed a firm undertone. Closing trades were at gains of .01 to .06 cent a pound. Heavy rains fell in parts of the southeastern belt, which may delay field work for several days.

Export trade reported that the proposed purchase of 20,000 bales of cotton by Hungary cannot be shipped abroad until June, as the English government refused to issue "navicert," giving Hungary the right to import the cotton until June.

Spot cotton closed .03 to .05 cent higher, with New York 10.91 cents, New Orleans 10.77 cents, and Houston at 10.40 cents a pound. Prices follow:

DON'T LET PORK RISE FOOL YOU, MEAT MEN WARN

Claim Most Cuts Still Are on Bargain Counter.

Don't let that rise in prices spoil your appetite for pork if you want to continue serving economical meals is the advice of meat men at the stockyards. Practically all cuts of pork still furnish the best meat buys, and they are likely to remain on the bargain counters of butcher shops for some weeks yet, it was said.

A sharp upswing has occurred in prices of hogs and some pork cuts since April 1. However, the rise began from the lowest level in more than six years and from the third lowest price basis in more than 40 years.

Bargains Still Available.

Shoppers found plenty of bargains in the various cuts of pork in their week-end tours of the retail stores. With the exception of top light loins the advance in pork prices since April 1 was moderate, considering the relatively low price position compared with other meats.

Top light loins at the close of the week wholesaled at 17 cents a pound, showing an increase of 47 per cent over April 1 prices. The heaviest loins moved up from 9½ cents to 13 cents, an increase of 36 per cent. Top spare ribs closed at 9½ cents, up 26 per cent. Shoulders at 9½ showed 5 per cent gain. Hams rose only 1 per cent.

All pork is attractively low compared with 1939 and 1938, and is at a considerable reduction from the April, 1937 and 1936 prices.

Pork Prices Compared.

	Yesterday.	Apr. 1.	1939.	1938.
Loins	17	11½	18	20
Butts	12	10½	15	18
Shoulders	9½	9	13	15
Spare ribs	9½	7½	12	12
Hams	14	13⅞	18	19
Bellies	9¾	9¾	14	17¼
Fat back	6	5⅞	7	8¼
Lard, cash	6.35	5.52½	6.30	8.30

Altho prospects of future foreign demand has injected a stronger "feeling" in the pork and hog markets the last two weeks, recent price increases have been due also to expanded domestic demand and smaller supplies of hogs. Slaughtering of hogs at leading packing centers last week was 80 per cent of the volume of a month ago, and 60 per cent of the January average.

Practically all classes of hogs closed at the highest levels of the year last week. The six day average, at $5.50 per hundred pounds, was highest of the year and 35 cents above a week ago. Top loads at $6.00 equaled the 1940 peak.

Steers and yearling cattle advanced 15 to 25 cents for the week. Heifers closed strong to 25 cents higher. Calves rose 50 cents to $1.00. Cows slowed down late in the week, with the close about steady.

Slaughter lambs experienced a rather sharp break during the week. Prices fell 50 to 65 cents under the 1940 highs that prevailed at the close of the preceding week. Yearling wethers declined 25 to 50 cents. Old sheep sold steady.

MANUFACTURERS OFFER PROGRAM TO AID RECOVERY

LaborAct Revision Placed at Top of List.

Revision of the national labor relations act heads a five point program for business improvement which will be presented to the annual convention of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States by the Illinois Manufacturers' association.

W. Homer Hartz.

The business building program was announced yesterday by W. Homer Hartz, president of the manufacturers' association. The convention will start April 29 in Washington, D. C.

Text of the program as outlined by Hartz follows:

"1. Amendents to the Wagner labor relations act by the present congress that will establish a mutuality of interest between management and men and encourage harmonious labor relations. These amendments should require fair and impartial trials by the labor board, full power of review by the courts, and repeal of the "majority rule" and "closed shop" encouraging provisions. In addition, members of the board should be prohibited from acting as mediators.

"2. Prompt return of the administration of relief to state and local governments, avoiding impractical wasteful methods which result in discrimination to the unemployed and impose unnecessary burdens upon employed workers as well as upon the taxpayers.

Ask Revised Bookkeeping.

"3. Adoption by the federal government of a fiscal system which will accurately portray the financial experience of the government, including receipts and disbursements from all sources and for all purposes, as well as all contingent liabilities of the government.

"The government now employs a dual system of bookkeeping—one record recording the financial experience of the government in connection with unemployment relief and the other the financial experience of the government in connection with other activities. This system does not fully record all of the contingent liabilities of the government and has proved to be confusing and misleading to the public.

"Step in Right Direction."

"4. The passage of the Walter bill by the house of representatives providing for the control of methods of issuing rules and regulations by administrative agencies of the government and for the judicial review of the rules and regulations issued by such agencies is an important step in the right direction, and the senate should be urged to pass the Logan bill, which has the same purpose in providing against the continuation and extension of the abuses now inherent in the promiscuous issuance of rules and regulations by federal administrative agencies.

"5. Require every federal agency engaged in the production of goods or the rendition of services in competition with private industry, to adopt standard cost accounting procedure, and also to disclose those items such as insurance, taxes, etc., which are not included in federal costs, but are incurred by private industry.

Demand Accurate Costs.

"Prohibit appropriations for the functioning of governmental agencies producing goods or services which may be obtained at less cost from private enterprise, unless such agency submits an estimate or bid in competition with the private bidders and includes in its estimate every reasonable item of cost customarily incurred by private enterprise. It is estimated that the government is now competing with private industry in more than 40 lines of industry, affecting at least 225 items of trade, industry, personal, and professional services."

In addition to Hartz, 20 delegates of the association will attend the convention.

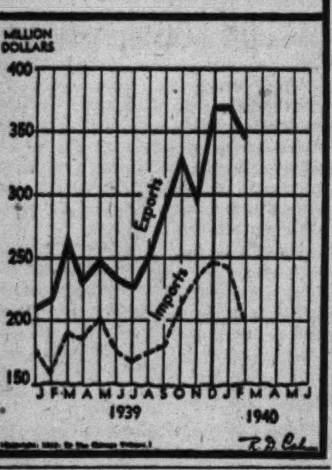
Exports and Imports of the United States by Months



NEW ANALYSIS REVEALS FARM EXPORT LOSSES

Critics attribute this to the functioning of the administration's reciprocal trade agreements under which tariff concessions are granted friendly nations. There were 18 agreements in effect thruout 1939 and two more during part of the year. Exports to nations with which the United States had such agreements increased 8.1 per cent in 1939 compared with 1938, while imports from the same nations jumped 20.1 per cent over those in 1938.

Chief Markets in Year.

Chief markets in 1939 were as follows: United Kingdom, to whom America sold $505,227,000 in goods and from whom she bought $151,320,000; Canada, $493,450,000 and $322,681,000; Japan, $231,405,000 and $161,082,000; France, $181,825,000 and $61,406,000, and the Philippines, $110,018,000 and $91,906,000.

The United States bought more from Cuba, Brazil, China, Germany, British India, the Netherlands Indies, and Chile than it sold those countries, the analysis showed.

LAKE ORE SHIPS TAKE ON CARGOES FOR FIRST TRIPS

Cleveland, O., April 20 [Special].—Vessels started loading ore at upper lake ports this week-end and the movement will be in full swing shortly after the first of the month, fleet operators announced today.

Freighters operated by the M. A. Hanna and Pickands-Mather companies were scheduled to take cargoes today and Monday. Cleveland Cliffs Iron company vessels will be in action late this month and the Pittsburgh Steamship company's big fleet is slated to get up steam within the next two weeks.

Bituminous coal already is moving to ports on Lakes Erie and Michigan. With vessels loading daily, the movement from the mines to lake docks is speeding up. Surplus stocks at Lake Superior points are lower than they were a year ago and shipments up the lakes are scheduled to get under way next week.

UNITED AIR LINES TO OFFER MORE, FASTER SERVICES

Faster summer flight times and new flights adding 13,500 miles daily to present schedules were announced by United Air Lines yesterday by W. A. Patterson, president.

The additional mileage to be flown represents an increase of approximately 25 per cent. New schedules will become effective April 28, Patterson said.

Daily service will be extended by sixth and seventh coast-to-coast flights, one to Portland, Ore., and Seattle, Wash., and a 12th Chicago-New York nonstop flight. Elapsed time of trips between New York and San Francisco or Los Angeles, Cal., will be cut two and one-half hours, Patterson said.

Ernest J. Howe.

RESERVE BANKS' CHOICEST JOB TO BE FILLED SOON

Treasury, Board Clash Believed Likely.

1920 to 1930 he was with the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco. He came to the New York bank in 1930 as assistant deputy governor and secretary.

Another long shot candidate in the running is W. Randolph Burgess, who is vice chairman of the board of the National City Bank of New York. He was formerly vice president of the New York Reserve bank. He is understood to be getting more salary than the reserve bank post would pay, but is said to prefer reserve banking to commercial banking. Burgess would also have treasury support, as he is one of Morgenthau's advisers.

Term Is Five Years.

The appointment as president of the New York reserve bank is for a term of five years. According to private opinion among officials here, Sproul will become acting president of the bank if Eccles persistently supports Taylor or some other candidate.

As mere acting president he would not be subject to federal reserve board veto and could continue in that office until Eccles resigns. It is generally understood that Eccles will resign if there is a change in administrations. Officials admit, however, that a situation of that sort is highly conjectural and Eccles may fall into line and support Sproul.

"Streamlined Garden" to Be Housing Attraction

ANNUAL CHICAGO HOME EXHIBITION WILL OPEN MAY 4

Many Groups Co-operate in Presenting Show.

Chicago's fifth annual National House and Garden exposition, the annual "home show," will have a "streamlined" estate garden as one of its features when it opens at the Coliseum on May 4. The garden, it is said, would cost $50,000 to duplicate out of doors. The show is to close May 12.

Robert Bruce Harris, landscape architect, will achieve the streamlining by basing the entire garden scheme upon a strong central axis extending practically the entire length of the Coliseum. The estate garden will be made up of 11 sections, each to be bordered by an evergreen hedge that will extend 1,500 feet.

Old Fashioned Garden, Too.

One section will be an "old fashioned" garden, featuring phlox, larkspur, lilacs, snapdragons, peonies, and other flowers, rustic benches, and a real well equipped with an old oaken bucket. An elaborate pool will be dominated by a statue of a young girl.

More than 10,000 plants will be used in transforming the interior of the Coliseum into a garden. Among those who will coöperate in furnishing the garden are the Clavey-Ravinia nurseries, Deerfield; Tunistra Landscape company, Chicago, and the Oman Landscape company, Prairie View, Ill.

Exhibition booths located around the gardens will embrace every phase of home construction, home ownership, and equipment. The purpose of the show is to inform prospective home owners as to what's new in home building and to show present owners how they can improve their homes. And there will be many exhibits of interest to the hundreds of thousands of Chicago flat dwellers.

A Large Stoker Exhibit.

One of the most pretentious of the displays will be the stoker exhibit to be presented jointly by the Chicago Coal Merchants association and the Midwest Stoker association. A large number of stokers and boilers will be kept in operation in the north wing to show what can be accomplished thru the use of coal.

In addition to the many exhibits of building material companies, real estate firms and others, the Chicago Park district will have a homecraft exhibit in the south wing.

John A. Servas, who has managed the home show for several years, is the managing director of the National House and Garden exposition.

MORTON GROVE SCENE OF NEW HOME EXPANSION

Three houses ranging in cost from $6,000 to $12,000 are under construction in the new Harms Ridge development in Morton Grove, about five blocks west of the Dempster street "L" terminal. A. J. Epson and Associates are the developers.

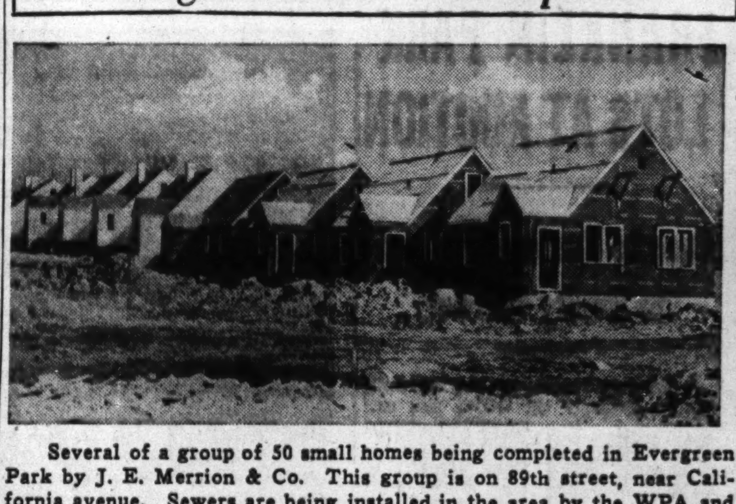
In addition to the three houses, which will be shown as model homes, Architects Himelblau and Spitz are preparing plans for six additional residences of from 5 to 8 rooms. The designs will be Georgian, English, and Early American.

The sketch for one of the houses will represent one of the last activities of J. E. O. Pridmore, noted Chicago architect, who died recently. Epson said there are 105 lots in the development, with an additional 200 in an adjacent subdivision.

Western Tire Will Open Wacker-Dearborn Store

Western Tire Auto Stores will open a new downtown store at the southeast corner of Dearborn street and Wacker drive, N. Shalin, secretary, announced yesterday. The chain has 70 stores. Headquarters are at 1333 South Cicero avenue.

Evergreen Park Development



Several of a group of 50 small homes being completed in Evergreen Park by J. E. Merrion & Co. This group is on 89th street, near California avenue. Sewers are being installed in the area by the WPA and water, gas, and electricity will be available. J. E. Merrion states that 76 houses of this type have been sold in the area. Financing is under FHA insured loans.

Store Building for Edgebrook

B. Leo Steif designed the above two story store and office building which is being erected at the northeast corner of Devon avenue and Kinzua, Edgebrook. Henry F. Knipp, retired real estate operator, is building the structure which will occupy a lot fronting 105 feet on Devon and 120 feet on Kinzua. Five stores will front on Devon and two on Kinzua. The exterior will be of tinted Wisconsin lannon stone, trimmed with Bedford limestone. The cost will be about $100,000. The National Tea company is among the companies that have rented stores. The Hofmann Realty and Construction company is renting agent.

Civic Groups Soon to Start Building Drive

Assurances of coöperation in Chicago's second annual building industry week, May 13 to 18, have been obtained from leading commercial, financial, industrial, and civic organizations, Paul D. Angell, chairman of the week, said yesterday. Angell also is secretary of the Chicago Building Congress, sponsor of the event.

"Building industry week appeals to all groups because of the importance of the building industry to the growth and prosperity of Chicago and its environs," Angell said. "It is designed to stimulate interest in building of all types from the modest home to the apartment skyscraper and from the small factory to the large industrial plant. It was created to make Chcago residents and manufacturers building conscious."

Time to Build.

Angell said it is hoped to place the spot light on the opportunities that now exist in the city for real estate investment and to call attention to the advantageous financing that may never again be available at such low cost.

"This year should mark the beginning of a new cycle in the real estate and building industry," he continued. "The best authorities are frank in stating that there are many reasons for believing that the next six months will offer opportunities which will probably not exist again for many years. They say that building and remodeling costs are going up. There is a shortage of homes. Building is already pointing upward. Home building in Chicago has reached its lowest cost level. Building costs are bound to go higher and it is not expected that they will go lower."

Elmer C. Jensen, president of the Chicago Building congress, said that the trades and professions within the building industry can find in the activities of the week a medium to inform the public as to savings possible by building now.

Other officials of the congress are John A. Holabird, Charles M. toeLaer, T. O. Morgan, William F. Krimel, Russell G. Creviston, Charles M. Hines, and Arthur G. Erdmann.

Officials Open Drive to Clear Up Delinquent Taxes on Vacant Land

COUNTY TO SELL FRANKLIN PARK LOTS AT AUCTION

Hope to Restore Property to Realty Market.

A drive to restore to the tax rolls vacant property on which tax and special assessment accumulations amount to far more than the assessed valuations is to be opened Tuesday with the sale at auction of 450 lots in Franklin Park. The auction will be held at 11 a. m. in the county building.

Arthur Sullivan.

The results of the auction are to be watched by taxing authorities and civic groups interested in clearing up tax delinquency. If successful, similar sales may be held of delinquent vacant property in other communities.

Accumulations Run 50 Years.

Arthur Sullivan, attorney for the county treasurer, told members of the Chicago Real Estate board that tax and special accumulations on some of the lots had extended for from 10 to 50 years.

"It is the thought of the taxing officials," he said, "that it would be better to get $40 a year tax on a small home than to let the land lie vacant without bringing in a cent.

"For obvious reasons, no one will purchase vacant property on which there are heavy tax accumulations. For example on one of the lots involved general tax accumulations amount to $1,403 and special assessments $536, a total of $1,939. The full valuation of this lot is placed at $376. On a group of 12 lots the tax accumulations amount to $6,241 and the full assessed valuation is $2,613.

None Since Subdividing.

"On some of the Franklin Park lots to be auctioned no taxes have been paid since the property was subdivided in 1889. Our records show that on some of the original special assessments of $5 a lot the installments amounted to 25 cents over a period of years. Because of the penalties it would cost $5 an installment to pay off what is due on the particular special assessments. It is obvious there is no way to collect now.

"The thawing out of these properties should benefit every one, the communities in which they are located and the county as a whole. It would open the way for the sale of desirable lots to small home owners.

Subject to Court Approval.

"There is no minimum on the bids that may be submitted, the auction being wholly unrestricted. However, all bids are subject to approval by the court and all will be scrutinized by the county treasurer."

Paul Brust, Franklin Park village attorney, said the lots are in an area which is 60 per cent tax delinquent. This means there must be a heavier burden than desirable for the Franklin Park home owners who are paying their taxes. Brust said that no one would buy these lots. Instead many purchasers of sites for small homes have been buying property in areas which have no sewers, water, gas, or other conveniences. Were it not for the tax accumulations they could buy property in Franklin Park having most of these conveniences.

WARD'S LEASES EVANSTON STORE ON BENSON AVE.

A one story commercial building, a part of which has been leased to Montgomery Ward & Co., is nearing completion at 1615-19 Benson avenue, Evanston—in the Davis street business district. Another of the five stores in the building has been leased to Johnson's Foods. The building is directly across from the Davis street station of the elevated and North Shore railroads. The property is owned by Michael C. Birnkrant. Alex L. Levy and M. W. Levy are architects. Hokanson & Jenks are renting agents.

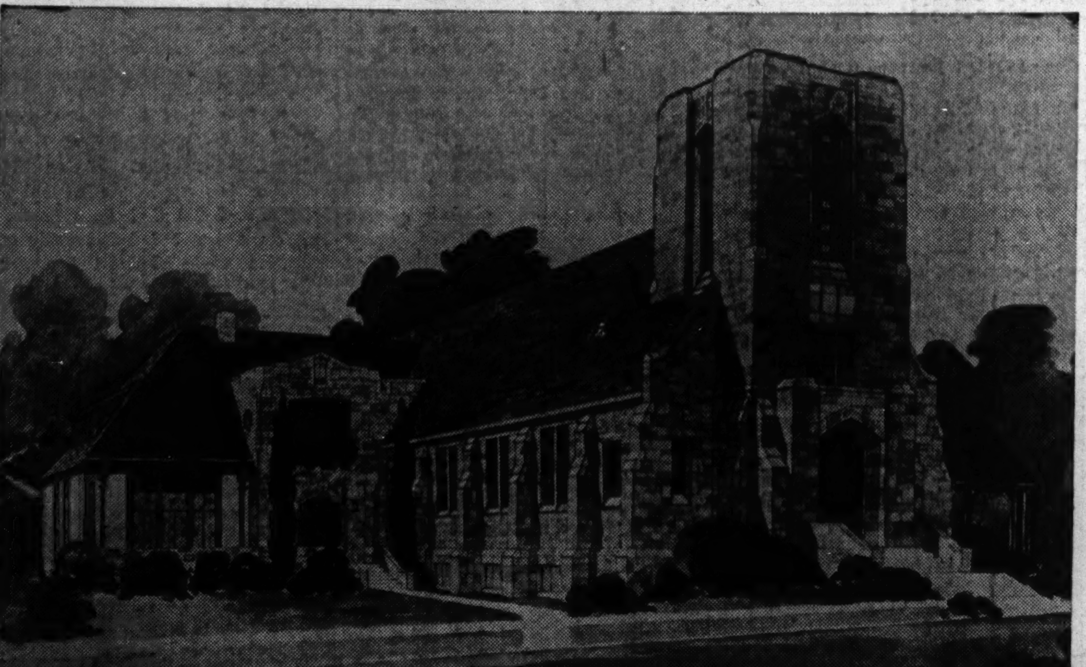
$125,000 Store Building Planned for 7921 S. State

Work is scheduled to start May 15 on a store building at 7921-23 South State street, site 100x125 feet, for David Simons. David Saul Klafter designed the one story building which is to have a terra cotta and glass front of modern design. Half the building has been leased to a chain organization and the other half will be divided into three shops. Investment in land and building is reported at $125,000. Completion is to be in time for fall occupancy.

New Winnetka Residence

Gerald D. Moore, an official of a large food company, is building the above 9 room residence of Georgian design in the Meadowreach section of Winnetka, north of and near the Indian Hill club. H. A. Anderson is the architect. The Meadowreach section comprises the old Higginson estate, facing on Birch street and extending south from Sunset road. E. Sawyer Smith and Arthur C. F. Gedge, Winnetka realtors, are subdividing the tract.

For Morgan Park and Beverly Hills



A. F. Heino, architect, designed the above church building, planned for Longwood drive, between 110th and 111th streets, by the congregation of the Morgan Park Presbyterian church.

Flat Building Rehabilitation Aids Revenues

A rehabilitation program developed for an apartment building at 4048 Sheridan road—in the Sheridan Park district—resulted in an increase in gross annual revenue from $16,000 to $22,000, or 37.5 per cent, according to Antoine & Mortell, Inc., north side realty firm, and agent for the property.

The improvement was in line with current agitation to restore realty values within the city thru the use of private capital.

The Sheridan road property was described as in "a rundown condition" when the improvement was undertaken last Aug. 1. It consisted of six two room flats, 24 three room, 12 four room, and two basement shops.

In Need of Repair.

"The building had been allowed to sink into a sad state of depreciation," the realty firm said. "The roof was beyond repair. The boiler was in bad condition. The back porch had been condemned. Tuckpointing, caulking and outside painting were desperately needed if the exposed wood and brick were to be saved from serious damage.

"In the flats themselves light fixtures and wiring were obsolete. Floors were in need of sanding. Ceilings were cracked and the apartments generally were in poor condition. On Aug. 1 occupancy was about 80 per cent and there was considerable delinquency."

Total Cost Is $23,150.

Plastering	$ 1,000
Boiler repair	1,100
Back porches	2,200
Roof	300
Tuckpointing and caulking	1,000
Sandblasting	1,200
Carpenter work	2,500
Decorating apartments	6,000
Decorating stair halls & carpentering	750
New Stoves	1,800
New electric fixtures and outlets, changing over to private meters	1,600
Sanding floors	600
Outside painting	800
Bath fixtures and showers	1,000
Miscellaneous and labor	1,300
Total	$23,150

After the improvements there was an immediate increase in inquiries, the realty firm said. By Jan. 1 the building was 98 per cent rented despite 15 to 20 per cent rent increases. New tenants were selected and rent delinquency disappeared.

TENTH YEAR BOOK IS PUBLISHED BY SAVINGS LEAGUE

The United States Savings and Loan League has just published the tenth of its year books of the savings and loan business. The new book, edited by Morton Bodfish, executive vice president of the league, emphasizes at least a half dozen subjects which were not even mentioned in the first book of the series, published in 1930.

Among these are public housing; interest rates and the concomitant, dividend rates, which are treated in three articles; investment of excess funds; bonus and retirement plans for savings and loan association managers and staffs; trust funds as a source of money for saving and loan groups.

The volume contains numerous articles on conventional subjects and includes a directory of the league's 3,000 member associations, with their principal officers.

EVANSTON APARTMENT SALE.

The City National Bank and Trust company of Chicago has sold to Edwin D. Ballard the two apartment building at 1814 Colfax street, Evanston. Edna D. Ballard of George S. Ballard & Co. was broker.

Morgan Park Church Plans New Building

The congregation of the Morgan Park Presbyterian church is making a renewed effort to raise funds to complete its church building at 11040 Longwood drive, in the Morgan Park-Beverly Hills residential district.

The congregation's original church was burned about six years ago. Since then a basement auditorium and a ladies' parlor building have been completed at a cost of $45,000. The amount needed to finish the structure is about $40,000.

The congregation has been meeting in the basement auditorium, but the rapid growth of the church and Sunday school membership is said to have made increased space necessary. The church membership is now about 420.

The Rev. Leason Sharpe has been pastor for the last nine years. The congregation was organized about 50 years ago.

A. F. Heino, architect, designed the new church building, which will be in the provincial English Tudor style. It is hoped to have work started within a year.

HOUSING TENANTS FACING EVICTION PLAN OWN HOMES

Form Co-operative to Seek New Accommodations.

Forced to move from the Jane Addams and Julia Lathrop low rent homes operated by the Chicago Housing authority because their annual incomes exceed the requirements, about 350 of the 600 tenants who must leave are proposing a coöperative building program, it was learned yesterday.

The group has organized the Coöperative Housing society to try to work out a home building program. They have hunted ready-built private housing, but say that so far they have been unable to find satisfactory accommodations. About the only places available at the rents they are able to pay are substandard dwellings in slum areas, members of the group said.

Will Work Together.

"The Chicago Housing authority has made it possible for us to form our group," commented Charles Lauer, chairman of the Julia Lathrop tenant group. "During our stay here we have learned to live and work together and we hope to work out a program of our own."

The families in the housing developments who must move have annual incomes of between $1,500 and $2,000 and have from one to four children. Their present plans call for the construction of three, four, and five room units, each to cost about $3,500. Most of the families are able to pay as much as $40 a month.

Several sites near the present locations are under consideration, but if these cannot be obtained the members of the coöperatives will move elsewhere. Each member has pledged a $200 down payment. However, no actual financing has yet been arranged.

Comment by Jensen.

"This is an excellent opportunity for those interested in housing to organize a trust which would ultimately give the ownership of the homes to the tenants," commented Elmer C. Jensen, president of the Illinois Society of Architects and of the Chicago Building congress. "One practical method of carrying out the plan would involve the appointment of a number of trustees, including representatives of the tenant-owners.

"The trust would then obtain financing either from private sources or by a FHA loan. Participating certificates would be issued and sold to families according to the cost of the unit purchased. A monthly payment similar to rent would be made over a period of years by each family, and ultimately the families would own their own homes."

CROMWELL PAPER CO. ENLARGES ITS PLANT ON SOUTH WHIPPLE

The Cromwell Paper company is contributing to Chicago's industrial expansion by the construction of a third large addition to its plant at 4801-35 South Whipple street. The company manufactures various paper specialties. This is the third addition within eight years.

Joseph Weil, president, says the new section will provide additional floor space required by increased production and expanding manufacturing plans. The reported cost of the building and land is $100,000. A. Epstein, Chicago industrial engineer, designed the addition as well as the original units.

The original plant, with 25,000 square feet of space, was built in 1924. The second unit of 22,290 feet was built in 1932 and the third unit, of 27,200, was added in 1935. The fourth unit, now under construction, contains 25,000 square feet and will bring the total to 99,490 square feet. The structure will front 400 feet on Whipple.

BAIRD & WARNER FIRST QUARTER SALES DOUBLED

Dollar volume of sales in the first quarter made by Baird & Warner, Inc., totaled $2,000,000, compared with $1,000,000 in the like period of last year, the company reported yesterday. The number of units sold was the same as last year. However, the value of sales per unit increased from $10,870 in 1939 to $21,890 this year—a gain of 51 per cent. The company reports that sales in April will be about three times as much in dollar volume as a year ago.

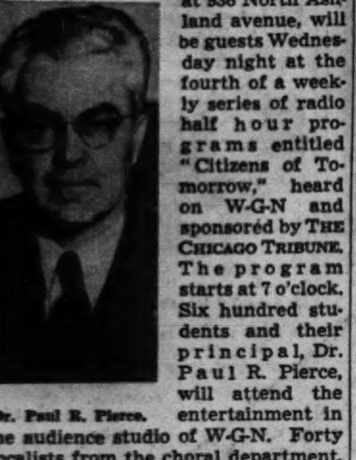
CITIZENS' RALLY SALUTES WELLS HIGH THIS WEEK

Youths to Be Guests in W-G-N Studio.

Students of one of Chicago's youngest public high schools, Wells, located at 936 North Ashland avenue, will be guests Wednesday night at the fourth of a weekly series of radio half hour programs entitled "Citizens of Tomorrow," heard on W-G-N and sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. The program starts at 7 o'clock. Six hundred students and their principal, Dr. Paul R. Pierce, will attend the entertainment in the audience studio of W-G-N. Forty vocalists from the choral department, directed by Mrs. Myra Cook, will sing.



Dr. Paul R. Pierce.

The appearance of Wells High school will follow the debut of Lake View, Austin, and Parker on W-G-N. Next week Steinmetz will take over the half hour program. As special guests Wednesday night, "Charlie Jones," the school engineer of the "Citizens of Tomorrow" cast, has invited the school engineer-custodians of the 39 high schools in Chicago. With them will be John Howatt, chief engineer of the Chicago board of education, who will be introduced by Philip Maxwell of THE TRIBUNE'S editorial staff, who plays the rôle of "The Principal" and is master of ceremonies on the program.

Jerry to Have Guests.

"Jerry" Gregory, the 16 year old senior of all Chicagoland high schools, will be back on the program after her turning the tables last week on Mr. Maxwell in a "news quiz" which also stumped the announcer of the broadcast, Pierre Andre. "Jerry," who in real life attends Maine Township High school, has quite a time attending rehearsals and keeping up her high grades which have marked her as an outstanding student. In her honor 30 students from Maine High with their dean, Einar J. Anderson, will attend the broadcast.

Honor Roll Students.

On each Wednesday night's program several Chicagoland students who have achieved success in their work are mentioned by Mr. Maxwell.

Each Wednesday night after the broadcast the guests are shown the talking movie film, "Trees to Tribunes," and then a smaller group is taken on a tour of Tribune Tower. Most of these students are from classes in journalism. Coöperating each week with THE TRIBUNE in the presentation of "Citizens of Tomorrow" are the music and radio departments of the Chicago public schools.

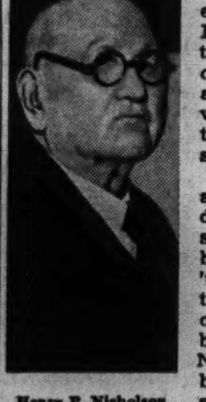
Paints and Sells Rope—Why Not—He's Only 99!

BY DAVID ANDERSON.

Henry P. Nicholson had 99 candles on his birthday cake April 13. The cake was a baker's masterpiece. It weighed forty-two pounds, for one thing, and after 75 persons were thru eating there was still some left.



Henry P. Nicholson.

Now 99 candles are a lot of candles, Mr. Nicholson will tell you, but "99 years—'taint such a long time." You're not old if you keep busy, and Mr. Nicholson keeps busy. You understand what he means when he tells you what he does with his time.

He studies Spanish two or three hours daily. "I hope to go to Mexico this year," he says, "and I figure I may as well know the language." In a large, round hand he writes his lessons in a ruled paper notebook. He has filled page after page of Spanish translation without a single crossed out word.

Takes Daily Walk.

He walks half a mile a day outdoors. In the last week he has been limping slightly. "It's just a touch of rheumatism," he tells you. "Caught a little cold, I guess."

He paints pictures in his spare time. "I've always painted, ever since I was a boy," he says. One the walls of his home at 5833 Kenmore avenue, where he resides with his son, Dr. J. M. Nicholson, and his daughter, Lottie, are his paintings—landscapes, portraits and scenes drawn from memory of his boyhood days in Canada.

In the summer for a few weeks, he goes on the road with his son and sells rope and twine.

"I'm probably the oldest traveling salesman in America," Mr. Nicholson says. "I've been a rope and twine salesman for almost 70 years. Of course, I don't get out now as much as I used to, but I still have a route."

His route is the southern part of Wisconsin. Every summer his son drives him into Wisconsin, their car loaded down with samples, and Mr. Nicholson calls on the trade, hardware stores, groceries, manufacturing concerns and general stores.

First Customers Gone.

"Many of my customers are the sons and grandsons of customers I had when I first started on the road," he says. "I've outlived all my first customers."

Five years ago Mr. Nicholson and his son and daughter, "got sore at the depression," as he says, and bought tickets for China. In Shanghai a business man gave him an order for 2,000 pounds of twine. Mr. Nicholson says this is probably one of the distance records in the twine industry.

On the way back he stopped at the Philippine Islands. "I wanted to see how manila rope is made," he said. "I had sold millions of miles of it and had never seen it manufactured."

In Manila, the rope industry closed up shop for the occasion. Mr. Nicholson, then 94 years old, was the oldest rope salesman ever to visit the factories, said his hosts, and they declared a holiday.

On his birthday, April 13, Mr. Nicholson stayed up until 3 o'clock in the morning entertaining his guests. That same morning he was up at 6 o'clock to take his half mile walk.

"I'm 99, but I don't feel it," he says. "Anyway, 'taint such a long time."

GYM EXERCISES ARE SCHEDULED FOR TWO PARKS

Hundreds of north side boys and girls will take part in two gymnasium demonstrations this week at Chase park, Leland and Ashland avenues, and Paul Revere park, 2509 Irving Park road.

The Chase park demonstration will be held Friday evening. Members of the Ravenswood American Legion post and auxiliary, Daughters of Union Veterans and neighborhood Boy and Girl Scouts, will take part. This event is under the direction of John Duffield, Chase park supervisor, and Edith Pearson and George Jenkins, staff instructors.

Here's a Tense War Situation

A tense situation is created when the gray meets the blue. Here a confederate soldier, portrayed by Jane Davies, left, has surprised Capt. Trumbull, a Union officer, in a scene from "Barbara Frietchie," to be presented by the seniors at Immaculata High school, Irving Park road and Lake Shore drive, on Thursday, Friday, and Sunday nights. Lorraine Knaub, right, will play the title role; Lorraine Hill is her Union sweetheart, Capt. Trumbull, and Audrey McLaughlin will appear in the cast as Laura Royce. Miss Margaret Cleary is directing the production, in which more than 25 seniors are cast. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

15 HOMEMAKERS TO SHOW THEY ALSO CAN PAINT

Palette Club Will Open Exhibit Saturday.

Fifteen homemakers who know how to wield a paint brush and a floor mop with equal dexterity will exhibit their paintings for two weeks in Pottawatomie park fieldhouse, 7340 Rogers avenue. The exhibit by the Palette club of Rogers Park will be opened to the public at 7 o'clock Saturday night and continue thru May 11.

The artists will entertain their friends at a special showing and tea at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The exhibit will contain two or three pictures by each member and some sculpture and wood carvings. Subjects for the water colors and oils include landscape, still life, and portraits.

Those to Exhibit.

The exhibitors are Mrs. Nanette Burkart, Mrs. Dolly Dana, Mrs. Jessie Field, Mrs. Ernestine Freese, Mrs. Beulah Hanssen, Mrs. Edna Heicher, Mrs. Ruth K. Hibbs, Mrs. Lillian Holtzman, Mrs. Ione Janssen, Mrs. Catherine Meyer, Mrs. Mary Ossinger, Mrs. Elton Spoor, Mrs. Martha Wange, Mrs. Dorothea Werhane, and Mrs. Louise Wilson.

"We have exhibited together for the last three years," said Mrs. Meyer, 1953 Lunt avenue, vice president and exhibit chairman, "but we've only been organized as a club for a year and a half. Some of us used to meet in our homes or go out to the forest preserves and beaches to paint. Eventually we agreed to form a club and meet monthly in the fieldhouse."

Have Special Clubroom.

The members have a special clubroom in which to work and frequently friends are invited to pose for the group. They exchange ideas and criticize each other's work. Most of them work at home whenever they can find an extra minute.

The women are all from 30 to 55 years old except one who is 19. Art is an avocation for these housewives and only a few of them have time for other art leagues. However, Mrs. Field, Mrs. Hibbs, and Mrs. Meyer have exhibited in other shows. The Palette club limits its membership to 15. Mrs. Burkart is president and Mrs. Werhane is secretary-treasurer.

The church has a garden of memory and a fine arts room of religious objects. A memorial to the poet Douglas Malloch recently has been placed in the garden. CHURCH RECALLS ITS FOUNDING IN AREA OF MARSH

Ravenswood Unit Will Celebrate Today.

The Ravenswood Congregational church, founded 70 years ago today when there were only seven homes in the community, will formally accept 70 new members this morning in celebration of its anniversary.

Dr. Morriston Thomas [Daguerre Photo.]

The gray-tan brick and stucco church at Montrose and Hermitage avenues is said to be the oldest Protestant church between Diversey boulevard and Evanston. Part of the original structure stands beside the present building and serves as the parsonage where the pastor, Dr. Morriston Thomas, resides with his family.

To the 70 new members this morning at the 11 o'clock service, Dr. Thomas and Dr. Ernest Graham Guthrie, general director of the Congregational Union of Chicago, will relate in their sermons the story of the church.

Will Tell Church's Story.

In 1870 Ravenswood, then a tract of marsh and farmland outside the limits of Chicago, had a population of seven families. From these seven homes seven charter members founded and organized the church under the leadership of the Rev. William A. Lloyd, the first pastor.

In 1889, when Ravenswood became part of the city, the Rev. Mr. Lloyd helped draw up the annexation charter which provided that the community of Ravenswood remain forever dry territory. This charter became invalid, however, Dr. Thomas says he learned from city officials, when the 18th ammendment was repealed.

Old Families Represented.

Many members are descendants of old Ravenswood families. "Ours is a family church with communicants, now in the middle age, who started as Sunday school pupils," says Dr. Thomas.

The choirmaster, William Newey, 4606 North Beacon street, has directed the church choruses for 32 years. J. Arthur Wirth, 3759 Janssen avenue, has been organist for 38 years. William Carroll, 78 years old, 1718 Montrose avenue, retired last week as sexton. He served 23 years.

On Wednesday evening members will hold a banquet in the church house. Mrs. Virginia Holland, who has sung in the church for 15 years, will be guest soloist. Burton F. Secord is banquet chairman. Members of this morning's anniversary program committee include Vernon Reynolds, Clarence B. Aldrich, and Dr. Thomas.

Fantasy and Skill to Lure Throngs.

What amounts to the Golden Gloves in the universal sport of kite flying will take place next Saturday morning in Grant park.

Three hundred and seventy-two semi-finals winners in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE kite contest will fly in the grand finals for the championship of Chicagoland. As in the Golden Gloves boxing tournaments, eight champions are to be crowned, one for each event.

Several thousand spectators are expected to gather at Hutchinson field near Balbo drive in Grant park to watch the 1940 championship finals. The contest, under co-sponsorship of the park district, will get under way at 10 o'clock in the morning. It is not expected to end before 1 o'clock. In the event of rain the grand finals will be held over to Saturday, May 4.

Each Makes Own Kite.

Spectators will see the city's most skillful kite flyers, boys and girls and adults, who have been selected from more than 5,000 preliminary contestants at local parks, and who have won in semi-finals held in six sections of the city. These contestants, who have been reduced to 372, are the most expert kite flyers in Chicagoland. Each has made his own kite, for the most part with materials furnished free in park district fieldhouses.

To the eight winners of the contest, will go eight loving cup trophies donated by THE TRIBUNE, as precious to kite flyers as the Golden Gloves insignias are to amateur boxers. Contestants will compete in artistic, novelty, solo box, messenger, mechanical winding, handwriting, strongest pulling, and largest kite events. To the runners-up and third, fourth, fifth, and sixth place winners, the park district will award ribbons.

More than a contest of skill, it will be a spectacle of color and creative ingenuity. Kites of all sizes and shapes will be dancing in the breeze at the ends of 75 yards of string, pirouetting and soaring before the judges.

Pinocchio and Gulliver.

There will be Pinocchio kites, kites depicting Gulliver's travels, huge tongued dragons, stately box kites, kites shaped like fish, stars and crescents, plain bow kites and Confucius kites blazoned with 1940 westernized orientalisms.

On the field a first aid station is to be set up for kites that are damaged in flight. Contestants will be able to repair their kites with equipment furnished by the park district.

F. E. Kardes, park district supervisor of crafts, will be contest director. S. J. Meuris is assistant director. R. V. Pierce will judge the artistic, novelty, strongest pulling, and largest kite events. Other judges are Paul Tornheim, handwinding; Frank Nekimken, mechanical winding; O. C. Sonntag, solo box kite, and J. E. Rosich, E. D. Harris, and R. C. Mitchell, messenger event.

This is the sixth year that superintendents, principals and supervisors have met at the college to discuss education problems of mutual interest. Miss Edna Dean Baker is president of the college.

The principal address will be made by Charles C. Stadtman, first assistant to the superintendent of public instruction in Springfield. He will speak after luncheon on "Organizing the School Program to Promote Child Development." 90 CLUBS TO AID IN ASSEMBLING SPRING BLOOMS

Seek Blossoms from Every Grower.

What is the best way to cut lilac blossoms to prevent injury to the bushes? How can cut flowers be treated to delay their wilting? These questions are answered in a story and picture on page 7.

BY HOMER NIESZ.

While cool weather last week was further retarding the opening of lilac flowering buds in Chicagoland, officials of the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild furthered plans to distribute the blooms to sick and shutins in the city's hospitals in the twelfth annual "Share Your Lilacs" campaign.

The guild and THE TRIBUNE coöperate each year with lilac growers in sharing the lilac blossoms with the sick. Last year the bouquets were taken to 147 hospitals, settlement houses, old people's homes, and other institutions, caring for more than 22,000 patients.

Guild officials last week appointed committees to work with 90 community and garden clubs in the Chicago flower area in gathering the lilacs and loading them on suburban trains for free transportation to the city. The clubs have more than 2,000 members.

Will Meet Tuesday.

The guild committees of the garden clubs and the club presidents are to meet at luncheon Tuesday noon in Carson, Pirie, Scott tearoom to complete their organization for lilac day and to plan distribution of fruits and flowers to charity patients thruout the summer. It is only on lilac days that the guild attempts to take bouquets to all hospitals in the city.

The date for gathering and distributing the lilacs will be announced as soon as officials can determine when most of the blooms will be open. Theodore V. Purcell of Evanston, president of the guild, said yesterday the date likely would be later than usual because of the retarded spring season. Most years the blossoms are ready to cut around the middle of May.

Mr. Purcell said that, as in other years, all who have lilac bushes, whether few or many, are invited to use the guild's organization in sharing the blooms with the sick. Guild committees of garden clubs will supervise the assembling of the flowers at suburban railroad stations. Trains will bring them free to stations in the city where fleets of Tribune trucks will pick them up and take them to hospitals.

Mrs. Grace Heads Work.

Mrs. Stanley D. Grace of Highland Park is chairman of the guild's general committee that will direct the work this year. She formerly was a division chairman in charge of the northern Milwaukee division of the Northwestern railroad area. Her work as division chairman has been assigned to Mrs. Warner K. Nelson of Glencoe.

Working under the various division chairmen are guild chairmen of the garden clubs. A few of these still are to be selected. Names and addresses of club presidents and guild chairmen in this area are:

HORN BLOWING AT NIGHT.

There is a curious breed of motorist who finds expression in honking his horn at 3 o'clock in the morning under the windows of Rogers Park residents. This species insists on tooting his horn while parked on the street, apparently for no other reason than to wake the neighborhood.

Why these tooters sound off in the early hours I don't know. And why we sleep lovers let them get away with it I don't know either. What can be done to stop it.

TIRED.

APPROVES TRAFFIC CHANNELS.

The intersection of Lincoln, Ashland, and Belmont avenues is one of the most dangerous in the city, according to comparative accident reports.

How can the city ignore such worthwhile plans as those submitted by the North Area council of the Chicago Motor club to split this three-way corner up into channels? This improvement which has long been a need out here.

A NORTHSIDER.

COUPLE TO HAVE WEDDING RING AFTER 50 YEARS

August Delisis to Renew Vows This Morning.

Fifty years ago a young man in Sicily borrowed his mother's wedding ring to marry his best girl. After the wedding ceremony the couple returned the ring, said "thank you" and went away together.

The young man intended to buy his wife a wedding ring but somehow, what with the arrival of children, he never got around to it. They came to America 27 years ago. When their children grew up they began to tease their father about the wedding ring that never materialized.

The couple, Mr. and Mrs. August Delisi, 5941 North Maplewood avenue, merely smiled when their five daughters and three sons talked about the ring. Five years ago on his wife's birthday, Mr. Delisi went to the jewelry store and bought a diamond engagement ring.

Renew Vows Today.

Last week he bought a wedding ring, a plain gold band. For, this morning at 10 o'clock at St. Philip Benizi church, Oak street and Cambridge avenue, Mr. and Mrs. Delisi will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary in a renewal of vows ceremony.

Their sons and daughters and 15 of their 18 grandchildren plan to attend. Their daughters are Mrs. Joseph Longo, 5923 North Artesian avenue; Mrs. Josephine Palumbo, 1239 Norwood avenue; Mrs. Nicholas Mancuso, 1239 Norwood avenue; Mrs. August Felicuchia, 1919 Patterson avenue, and Mrs. Edward Durchslag, 5941 North Maplewood avenue, and their sons are August, Joseph and Sam. The family will hold a reception at 7:30 this evening at the Sovereign hotel, Kenmore and Granville avenues.

Return from California.

After living in California for 10 years, Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Deright, former north siders, returned recently to celebrate their golden wedding anniversary at the home of a son, Harry, 4918 North Wolcott avenue. Mr. Deright is 73 years old and Mrs. Deright is 72.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Knaff, 834 Belden avenue, recently celebrated their 54th wedding anniversary. They have resided on the north side for more than 50 years. Both were born in Luxemburg. They have one daughter, Mrs. Margaret Krier and two grandchildren.

N. SIDER HEADS GROUP TO STUDY THE DAY LILY

Elmer A. Clear Leader of Amaryllis Society.

It may be just a day lily to you, but to a special committee of experts headed by a northsider, Elmer A. Clear, 1400 Lake Shore drive, it's something to study.

Mr. Clear, who calls it by its very proper and Latin name of Hemerocallis, has been elected chairman of a national committee which has as its task the preservation and evaluation of this flower. The committee can be compared to curators of an art museum.

The committee is a part of American Amaryllis society, a group of 500 to 600 amaryllis experts living in all parts of the United States. Mr. Clear succeeds Edward Steichen, noted photographer and flower fan.

In 250 Varieties.

The day lily comes in 250 varieties. It's colors run thru tints of yellow, cream white, orange, purple, and in some cases, when crossbred, with brown and beige stripes.

Mr. Clear's duties are to lead in the work of classifying and studying the flower. He has, for example, devised an intricate copyrighted rating form of the flower's carriage, a sort of floral casting director's file. He rates its height, which ranges from that of a 12 inch dwarf to a towering five feet.

Iris Judges Named.

Seven other north siders came into the news of the flower world last week. They were picked by the American Iris society to judge private gardens on the north shore and other parts of Chicagoland some time in June. The society will have its convention here at that time and the best irises will be given awards during the convention.

The seven north side judges will be W. F. Christman, Northbrook; Mr. Clear, who also doubles in irises; Mrs. Fred H. Clutton, Highland Park; Dr. Franklin Cook, Evanston; Sherman R. Duffy, 20 Wacker drive; O. W. Fay, Wilmette, and David F. Hall, Wilmette.

Double Feature Town House

The handsome new duplex town home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Woods and Mr. and Mrs. DePerro at 6026 and 6028 Bloomingdale avenue. There are many interesting features to this two family dwelling, not the least a study den over each garage. The exterior walls are of brick in shades of tan and deep brown. Architect, Martin H. Braun, 1827 North McVicker avenue, Chicago.

MODERN DUPLEX HOUSE CONCEALS TRUE IDENTITY

Offers Advantages for City Dwellers.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Just before spring came, a bit reluctantly, from around the corner this year, Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Woods moved into their new home at 6026 Bloomingdale avenue. At approximately the same time their aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. De Perro, moved into their new home at 6028 Bloomingdale.

As it happens, the two residences are under one roof, for the dwelling is a duplex town house, and a very good looking house, we can honestly say

The architect, Martin H. Braun, 1827 North McVicker avenue, has carried out the exterior walls in brick; tan and brown shades predominate, and the exterior trim, windows and doors have been painted an off white.

Advantages Are Told.

There are many definite assets to the modern duplex town house. Economy of land is one. And there is the impression of greater size since two small homes under one roof seem larger than a one size home of the same cubic content. Then, too, with a finely designed duplex on a 50 foot lot, each occupant pays for only 25 feet, is taxed for only 25 feet, and yet has the enjoyment of wide front and back lawns.

This is a home where every square foot of the interior has been made to give an excellent account of itself.

Mrs. Woods showed me thru her home the day I visited the duplex. She is a young woman who has every reason to be proud of her house. There are many interesting features upstairs and down, and Mrs. Woods has given the interior an atmosphere of unusual appeal.

Closet Near Door.

As you enter the hallway you see a convenient guest closet directly opposite the entrance door, and at the left there is the living room, with dining room beyond and an arch between.

The living room walls have been painted and stippled an off peach, while the dining room is papered, and the oak floors have a fine, natural finish.

The kitchen walls are painted an off white, and combine happily with white cabinets and blue linoleum top and blue linoleum floor. The breakfast set is carried out in lively red tones. And the cabinet spaces are a joy to behold—and to use.

Glass Block Over Tub.

There are Venetian blinds at all the windows and glass block has been used at several strategic points, including a panel over the tub in the bathroom.

Halfway up the stairs which lead to the second floor there are the electric door chimes, recessed in the wall. And at the right a cozy studio den, which is placed over the garage. This room could be used as a bedroom equally well. And it has the advantage of closet space which runs the entire width of the room.

Half a flight farther up is the second floor, with its two bedrooms and bath. The master bedroom has an attractive small alcove corner and its walls have an unusual treatment.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, April 22.

Without suitable soil, plants will not do well; poor soil must be corrected by adding plant food and humus. Humus improves the soil, holds moisture, aids in the manufacture of plant fod, and provides the best conditions for plant growth. Wherever there is room for a compost heap it should be kept going at all times. Every scrap of grass, clippings, manures, soft weeds, etc., should be put in the compost.

Tuesday, April 23.

Some annuals may be grown in a shady part of the garden, if the shade is not too dense. These include the aster, forget-me-not, nemophila, pansy, snapdragon, wishbone plant or torenia, sweet alyssum, and monkey flower. It is late to sow pansy seed, but short, stock plants can be obtained easily from supply houses. Seedlings raised in boxes are greatly benefited by transplanting at least once.

Wednesday, April 24.

Fast growing annuals that require little attention include the alyssum, cosmos, marigold, larkspur, candytuft, nasturtium, mourning bride, pot marigold, and bachelor buttons. Keep all withered flowers removed to prevent formation of seed. Plant more of the graceful grasses for bouquets.

Thursday, April 25.

A good soil for most plants consists of about one-half loamy garden soil, one-quarter rooted leafmold, some decomposed cow manure, and one-quarter sand. If the manure is unavailable, a four inch pot of high grade complete commercial fertilizer mixed with each wheelbarrow of soil is excellent. Do not put small plants in large pot; wait until the roots touch the sides of the pots and then shift.

Friday, April 26.

Gardeners who expect to plant a new perennial garden this spring should see that the soil is well prepared because of the permanent nature of the plants. Dig the soil to a depth of a foot or more and work in a complete commercial plant food; well decayed manures can be used if they are available.

Saturday, April 27.

Most perennials can be propagated by dividing the roots in early spring. Others can be increased by root cuttings taken during the middle to late summer. When a young tree is planted see that it has a guard to prevent injury from children or from the lawn mower. An injury to the trunk should be repaired immediately by cutting out all mutilated sections to the cambium and painting with coal tar. When ordering a tree for the yard select one with a straight trunk, without a crotch.

News and Queries Within and Without the Church

". . . Before criticizing your wife's faults remember that it may have been those very defects which prevented her from catching a better husband."

Dr. Oswald W. S. McCall.

That is the warning of Dr. Oswald W. S. McCall, pastor of New First Congregational church, Ashland avenue and Washington boulevard, as, in a new pastor's journal, Sermons in Brief, published in New York, he argues that phobias, neuroses, psychiatrists, and psychologists can be forgotten in face of plain questions, such as:

"Should the husband rule in the home, or should the wife?

"If you wish an answer to such a tormenting question—or is it an entertaining question?—to come from actual case histories as our useful fashion now is, here's one: 'Before he was married he assured his friends he would be the boss in his own house or know the reason why. Now he knows the reason why.'"

The McCall contribution, called "Specters of the Mind," deals with religion's answer to phobias, neuroses, and the multitude of authors on morbid psychology who write in learned terms when, as Dr. McCall suggests, plain words may be better. The Chicago pastor is in good company in the magazine—Karl Barth, Archbishop Spellman, Archbishop Temple of York, Rabbi Wolsey, Muriel Lester, Archbishop Glennon, and Bishop Manning!

Sermons in Brief is edited monthly by friend Herbert H. Rugg.

When the Rev. E. M. Hegge of Oak Park Norwegian Lutheran church speaks this morning on the subject "Humanity's Archenemy—War!" he will speak out of experience. A world war veteran, in 1924-'27 he was a war correspondent in China for Peking and Hankow newspapers. Special prayers for Scandinavia this morning also.

PUPILS PREPARE TO CLEAN CITY AS ANNUAL TASK

Drive Starts Tomorrow and Lasts Thru May 4.

"Teamup with Cleanup" urge the 1940 posters put out to focus attention on the annual cleanup-paintup-lightup-plantup spring drive which will sweep Chicago from tomorrow thru May 4. The Community Service committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce, directed by Miss Ethel Foster, sponsors the campaign, which originated in 1914. Only in the years of 1918-'19 was it abandoned.

As a good citizenship project, the drive is being promoted by the Chicago board of education in every public school. Games, contests and courses of study are making it popular to scrub homes, schools and the community. The winning 1940 slogan was written by Irene Murdock, a senior at McKinley High school.

Mayor Fred A. Busse issued a proclamation for the first Chicago cleanup campaign in 1907 when he called "all citizens, business houses and school children to join hands in a Clean City campaign."

Work in 1912.

In 1912 the Association of Commerce appointed Howard Elting as chairman of a cleanup committee and the following year Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of schools, granted the association's request "to send circulars to the public schools, requesting the coöperation of principals, teachers, and pupils in the City Cleanup campaign."

Slogans from north side students which won honorable mention include "A City Clean Is a City Keen," Oscar Weser, Chappell school, 5145 North Leavitt street; "All Together for a Cleaner, Brighter Chicago," Deloris Roth, Schiller school, 700 Scott street, and "Coöperate to Make Chicago Clean and Great," Genevieve Abbananti, Schiller.

The public is invited to visit an exhibit of campaign posters thru April 30 in the Chicago Public library. Olga Martish of Schurz High won first place and Albert Shemrinsky of Marshall High second. The awards were $200 scholarships in the Chicago Professional School of Art and the Ray schools. Fifty-seven students won honorable mentions.

North side students whose posters received honorable mention include Bob Rohrhof, Ruby Hanson, Verna Jerome, Louise Vlasak, and Stephen Jerger, Amundsen; Helen Hook and Marie Di Leonardo, Lake View; Gordon Urquhart, William Magnuson, Norman Harris, and Edwin Allan, Lane; A. M. Crossland and Lee Ray Haisler, Sullivan, and Ubaldo Paterni and Lorraine Hanspire, Waller.

Has 4 Point Plan.

The following students' posters passed the preliminary judging committees: John Laurie, Joyce Chirpe, and Robert Olson, Amundsen; Ruth Janus and Lois Peddicord, Lake View; Richard S. Zabel, Lane; Albert Pounian and Bob Mills, Senn; Robert Blair, Arthur Paul, and Franklin Burke, Sullivan, and Lorraine Mueller and Jean Liepe, Waller.

The Clean-up league at Senn High school has announced a four point project: clean up the lunchroom, clean up a specified block in the Edgewater area with the coöperation of home-owners and janitors, study sanitation and personal health in science classes, and correct fire hazards in the home.

Members of the committee are Joseph Wyatt, chairman; Harry Chambas, co-chairman; Werner Baum, publicity; Reynold Berggen, finance; Virginia Dickson, public relations; Marilyn Zeidman and Miriam Blumenthal, correspondence; Leonard Afton, photography, and Jean Smith, report book.

Lane's program includes six points; make Chicago the finest and cleanest city in the world, make Lane and its elementary schools clean up conscious, keep a cleaner lunchroom, coordinate Lane, public, and parochial schools, distribute more waste containers, and coöperate with the merchants and citizens.

Leonard Doerfler is the senior chairman, Julian Chaplinski, honorary chairman, and Sverre Ulsfrud and Fred White, junior co-chairmen. Schools coöperating with Lane in the campaign include Agassiz, Audubon, Burley, Cleveland, Jahn, LeMoyne, Linne, Schneider, St. Benedict, St. Francis Xavier, and St. Veronica.

In 75 sections of the city, in schools, parks, playgrounds, settlement houses, clubs, churches wherever young folk gather, programs will be presented to illustrate the year round activities of youth.

NEW $15,000 GIFT TO AID NEGROES' PROGRESS SHOW

Dr. Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald fund, has announced that his organization will contribute $15,000 to the American Negro exposition, to be held in the Coliseum July 4 thru Sept. 2. Besides helping to underwrite the event, the grant will be used in part for the fund's special sections on education, health, and social science.

The Rosenwald fund is the second foundation to make a special grant to the forthcoming celebration of 75 years of Negro progress since emancipation. Recently the General Education board appropriated $15,000 for a motion picture on Negro education to be prepared by the American film center for showing at the exposition.

The state, which is officially sponsoring the event, has set aside $75,000 as a sustaining fund. Approximately two million persons are expected to attend the 60 day exhibit.

60 CARNATIONS HELP TO MARK AN ANNIVERSARY

Same as Married Years of the William Kochs.

BY JUANITA DALY.

The William Koch family always has considered anniversaries and birthdays important. A recent one that rated a special celebration was Mr. and Mrs. Koch's 60th wedding date. A gift of 60 white carnations, delivered in the early morning, started the anniversary pleasantly, and thruout the day the couple received calls, cards and visits from members of the family and friends in their home at 1462 Leland avenue.

It reminded white-haired, slender Mrs. Koch of their golden wedding day except that then they were in their own home on Washtenaw avenue.

"We served dinner in our basement that evening," she recalled, smoothing the skirt of her ecru cotton lace dress. Settling on the studio couch and turning to her husband, she continued. "We seated 66 persons at once, didn't we? Many of my relatives came down from Milwaukee and 23 of them slept in our house that night."

Born in Milwaukee.

Both William Koch and Frances Dathe were born and grew up in Milwaukee, but they did not meet until about a year before they were married. Soon after their church wedding, young Koch, looking for a job with a future, decided to leave his home town and take his wife to the nearby metropolis of Chicago.

He found a job in a tailoring shop and stuck to this work thru his earning years. He worked for two firms for 45 years, starting with one employer, changing to a second and, after business reverses, returning to the first employer in later years. When the average tailor's work was replaced by a machine, Mr. Koch's employer made uniforms.

For the most part, Mr. Koch did not do tailoring, but was in charge of the shop. Altho he does not know much about sewing, he can pick out a well made suit in a minute. He has been retired for 13 years.

She Is the Expert.

Mrs. Koch is the expert with the needle. She made most of the dresses and slips for herself and her three daughters, and even trimmed their hats.

"I sewed for most of the ladies on our street, too," she added.

When the Kochs first moved to Chicago they settled on North avenue. The city limits were at Fullerton avenue on the north and Ashland avenue on the west. Beyond were farms and cabbage fields. Thruout their 60 years on the north side the Kochs moved northward as the city grew and the population shifted.

Since they lost their home ten years ago they have resided with a daughter, Mrs. Luella Autenrieth, in a bungalow in Portage Park and now are taking care of an apartment for a friend. Another daughter is Mrs. G. G. Mossman, 4737 North Hermitage avenue, and the third died recently. The latter's two sons, the only grandchildren, are George W. Kind and Owen Wallis Kind, 4857 North Washtenaw avenue.

Both Are Active.

Altho Mr. and Mrs. Koch spend most of their time at home now, they are both active and healthy. Mr. Koch reads every newspaper and magazine he can lay his hands on and always listens to the news reports and baseball games on the radio. Mrs. Koch, who is a frail looking person [she's never weighed over 100 pounds] does housework all day.

"I've been ill the greater part of my life," she said, "but I've outlived my sisters and I'm 82 years old now. Dad is 83.

"Whenever I get a chance, I visit my relatives in Milwaukee and we go to the Ravenswood Congregational church every Sunday, but otherwise we're content to stay at home and let the younger folks come to see us."

Clifford L. Terry, 2447 Lunt avenue, has been elected president of the Men's Club of St. Luke's pro-Cathedral in Evanston. He succeeds Dr. John R. Merriman. Mr. Terry also was named chairman of the club's annual Christmas party for needy Evanston children. Other new officers include Louis T. Henderson, vice president and chairman of the ushering committee; George S. Smith, vice president and chairman of the member canvass committee; Herbert E. Welter, treasurer; Ashley Kennedy, secretary, and James E. Hendrix, program chairman.

W-G-N PROGRAM REVEALS YOUTH'S HOPE, STRENGTH

Tribune Via Air Salutes 'Citizens of Tomorrow.'

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

As a salute to youth's promise and accomplishment and to its high destiny under the American way, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE each Wednesday evening presents the program, "Citizens of Tomorrow," over W-G-N.

It is well worth a half hour's pause to watch this procession of youth passing thru the portals of W-G-N. For here one obtains a brief preview of the future of democracy. That glimpse is full of hope.

The manner of presenting "Citizens of Tomorrow" is in itself strictly in the democratic tradition. For this program is an anomaly in educational broadcasting—an informative and entertaining program that delights the boy and girl as well as parents and teachers and the countless others who listen to it. Too often radio programs that suit parents and educators are ignored by youth. The converse is true, too. Mothers and fathers are not always pleased with the radio preferences of their offspring.

To make "Citizens of Tomorrow" the success it is, high school students give their best; they set the pace for the show—and it is a show—and they flavor it with their rousing yells, their fine choral singing, their lively contributions to THE TRIBUNE news quiz, and their reverberating applause—with a higher decibel rating than many sponsored network productions are accorded. They have embraced it as their own show.

The fullest coöperation is given, too, by the public school system. The Chicago board of education lends its full support to the broadcasts. Valuable aid and advice is given in preparing the programs by the radio council of the board of education, directed by Harold Kent, and by the department of music, under the direction of Miss Helen Howe.

The contributions of the youngsters and of their teachers are deftly welded into a finished production by skilled writers, producers, and performers of W-G-N. The result: A weekly program that is educational, stimulating, inspiring—that reflects democracy at its best.

A Glimpse of Young America.

A visit to a broadcast of "Citizens of Tomorrow" provides a fine opportunity to observe Young America at close range. As 600 boys and girls from Parker High school—probably a good cross-section of the youth of the nation—poured into W-G-N's spacious audience studio last Wednesday, certain qualities stood out.

Chicago's youth is not regimented. Youngsters appear to be far more individualistic than their elders. That seems to apply particularly with regard to dress and manner. These high school folk wear an astonishing variety of clothes, with comfort and color competing as the keynotes. Footgear alone runs the gamut from Mexican huaraches and "wedgies" to patent pumps with high heels. The girls wear all manner of anklet socks, silk hose—or both.

They Are Democratic.

As they scramble for seats a minor uproar fills the studio. They make full use of the right of free speech and assembly. With regard to the latter it takes the form of trying to save seats for their late-arriving friends. With regard to the former, one hears from a husky lad such expressions as "Hey, good looking—you with the mirror—how about moving over a notch so we can sit down?"

These boys and girls are decidedly democratic. Already they reveal many potentialities of good citizenship. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools, touched on this point the other evening when he was a guest at the broadcast. He remarked about their willingness to serve and their capacity for enjoying friendship and fellowship with others thru sharing common privileges and responsibilities.

"You young people," he said, "can and do participate in your American citizenship long before you are eligible to vote. Ever since you started school you have been learning to work and play with your classmates and to contribute your best to group activities." These experiences in school he said, represent the best possible preparation for democratic living.

Understands School Youth.

"Citizens of Tomorrow" derives much of its success thru the enthusiasm and experience of Philip Maxwell, member of THE TRIBUNE staff and the master of ceremonies, who plays the rôle of the principal.

In recognition of the achievements of out of the city students, tributes are paid each week to five boys and girls in the five Chicagoland states who have already made their marks in leadership, scholarship, character, and service. Those saluted are selected by their high school principals in coöperation with local correspondents of THE TRIBUNE.

Quiz Arouses Applause.

Announcer Pierre Andre keeps the showing moving right along; Blair Walliser is the efficient director; Francis Coughlin does the smooth writing job, and Harold Turner is ever ready at the piano to furnish what is needed in the way of music.

THE TRIBUNE news quiz arouses plenty of spontaneous applause as six classmates, picked at random from the audience, fight it out for cash and glory. Those who survive the quiz-down get $5 each. There were three such winners for Parker last Wednesday, to the delight of Miss Nellie Quinn, the Parker principal. Answers of the youngsters indicate a good reading acquaintance with THE TRIBUNE. One girl raised a great cheer by correctly answering a Golden Gloves question—just to cite one example.

The demand for tickets far exceeds the number available each week. At some high schools 2,000 have requested tickets; only 600 can be accommodated. Others hear the show in their own living rooms. After the broadcast the motion picture "Trees to Tribunes," telling the story of the making of tomorrow's newspaper, is shown. And then 100 selected students—usually those enrolled in journalism courses—are taken on a tour of THE TRIBUNE'S plant.

Three performances of "Citizens of Tomorrow" have been given. Eight more are scheduled prior to the end of the school year.

You're missing something if you aren't listening!

W-G-N Guest

This is Luella Gear, comedienne now starring in "The Streets of Paris" at the Grand Opera house. She will be heard with Bobby Clark, her colleague in the musical revue, on Fifth Row Center over W-G-N and the Mutual network from 7 to 7:30 p. m. Friday. They will do a comedy called "Career in Matrimony" on the broadcast.

'DEACON' TELLS WHERE HE GETS HIS FUNNY SLANT

The Deacon is a very funny man in the opinion of many W-G-N listeners. In reply to fan letters, commenting on his humor, The Deacon [John Howard] suggests that maybe his humor is at least partially due to his friendship with some of the great American humor writers, including Irving S. Cobb and the late Opie Read.

The Deacon's program is a monolog, with a verbal patter and songs. Howard has had many years of theatrical and radio experience behind him. He has appeared on the legitimate stage for the Shuberts, the Erlangers, and for Winthrop Ames. He appeared in one of Ames' companies of "The Mikado." Among his other stage works have been "The Farmer's Wife," "Robin Hood," "The Dutch Doll," "The Rivals," and "Expressing Willie."

The scene of the program is a mythical but nevertheless very real place called Echo Valley, where the Deacon discusses such friends as Lem Conover, Widow Belle Meakins, Onie Googins, and Bud Wilkins.

BOBBY CLARK, LUELLA GEAR ON 5TH ROW CENTER

They'll Co-Star in 'Career in Matrimony.'

Bobby Clark and Luella Gear, comedy headliners of "The Streets of Paris," will be co-starred in W-G-N and Mutual's program Fifth Row Center from 7 to 7:30 p. m. next Friday. They will be featured in a radio play titled "Career in Matrimony."

A Couple of the Theater.

In "Career in Matrimony" Clark and Miss Gear will play the parts of a married couple of the theater. Both are stars, and, while in love with each other, they are tremendously jealous of each other's work. They decide to separate, but their careers bring them together again, thru a maze of complications.

Without His Teammate.

Bobby Clark is now making his second solo starring appearance. For three decades he was teamed with the late Paul McCullough.

Luella Gear made her debut in "The Love of Mike." Since then she has starred in many big shows including "The Gold Diggers," "Poppy," "Ups a Daisy," "The Gay Divorcee," "Life Begins at 8:40," and "On Your Toes."

HIT SONGS OF SEASON SLATED ON 'ANGELS SING'

"And the Angels Sing," featuring the women's choir, Edna O'Dell, and the W-G-N dance orchestra under the direction of Harold Stokes, will present the season's hits in a half hour show at 8 p. m. today on W-G-N.

Edna O'Dell will sing "What's the Matter with Me?" and with the chorus will do the new number. "Where Do I Go from You?" The women's choir will sing "Relax," and will accompany the string section in "Yesterday," from "Roberta." A special piano arrangement of "Serenade to a Wealthy Widow" will be played.

Edna Odell to Sing Song from Buck Benny Movie

"Romance in Rhythm," directed by Harold Stokes, will feature Lawrence Salerno, Edna O'Dell, the Four Shades of Blue, and the chorus from 9:30 to 10 p. m. tomorrow on W-G-N and the Mutual network.

Salerno will sing the "Gaucho Serenade," and will join the chorus in "Yours Is My Heart Alone." Miss O'Dell will be heard in "Say It," from the musical picture, "Buck Benny Rides Again," and will join the chorus in "It Happened in Kaloha."

CARTERS' TALENT HUNT IS NO SEARCH FOR ANOTHER OOMPH GIRL

Sponsors of the Carters of Elm Street, who are conducting a talent search thru W-G-N and 84 other Mutual stations, have announced that they are not necessarily seeking an oomph girl or a grandmother. [There are to be two winners—one between 15 and 25 and one over 25.]

Parts are to be written into the script to fit the talents, the acting ability, and the personality of the two winners. The winners are to get contracts for two weeks each at $112.50 a week with all expenses paid while in Chicago.

The search started on April 15 with local auditions to be held in each of the 85 cities and towns carrying the "Carters" program. Then, recordings of the voices of the local winners will go to regional centers, and those of the regional winners will go to Chicago for the national selections. Chairman of the national judges' committee will be Virginia Payne, who plays the starring rôle of "Carrie Carter" on the "Carters" program. One of the other judges will be one of the nation's outstanding motion picture talent scouts.

AMATEUR STAGE GROUPS OFFER A VARIED MENU

Murder and Shakespeare Are Among Items.

A murder case, a civil war play, Shakespeare's "Hamlet" and a comedy are among the items on the dramatic bill of fare for north side amatuer theater-goers this week.

The North Shore Repertory players will mark the anniversary of Shakespeare's birth by presenting "Hamlet" this week, twice in Winnetka and once in Evanston. The Winnetka performances will be given at 8:15 o'clock on Tuesday and Friday nights in the Kuppenheimer Memorial hall of Skokie school and the third performance will be Saturday night in the Evanston's Woman's club.

Stars Send Greetings.

John Gielgud, Laurence Olivier, Lillian Gish, Raymond Massey, Maurice Evans, and Sir Archibald Flower of the Stratford-on-Avon theater have sent their congratulations to the players. The greetings will be published in the souvenir birthday program.

Harry Thornton Moore of Winnetka will play the title rôle, Maxine Wilcox Stetson will portray Ophelia, Leighton Carey, Queen Gertrude; J. Williams Macy, King Claudius, and Samuel Otis will appear at the First Grave Digger.

Hudson Players' Bill.

Tonight and tomorrow night the Hudson players will present Colton and Miles dramatization of the Borden murder case, entitled "Nine Pine Street," at 8:30 o'clock in their headquarters at 1016 North Dearborn street.

Two events on the professional stage make this drama timely. Lillian Gish, appearing currently in "Life with Father," was the star of the original New York company of "Nine Pine Street," and in the current "The Man Who Came to Dinner," one of the characters is a satire on Lizzie Borden, the leading rôle in "Nine Pine Street."

Roy Hudson directs the Hudson players. The principals will be Virginia Lamb as Lizzie, Hazel Spears as the mother, William Jaye as the father, and Alice Dineen as the stepmother. Supporting rôles will be played by Theresa Stein, Ruth Stein, Anthony Harrant, Irene Browne, Johanna Landauer, Crescent Venuto, Yolanda Salla, Martin MacNeeley, and Dorothy Messer.

High School Plans Play.

A civil war atmosphere will be created for the setting of "Barbara Fritchie" to be given as the senior class play at Immaculata High school on Thursday, Friday, and Sunday night in the school auditorium, Irving Park road and Lake Shore drive. Performances will begin at 8:15 o'clock.

Lorraine Knaub, 2224 Rosemont avenue, will portray the title rôle and Lorraine Hill, 4729 North Washtenaw avenue, will appear opposite her as Capt. Trumbull. In the supporting cast are Antoinette Hanson, Jane Davies, Maud McKay, Shirley Connelley, and Claudia Ellis. More than 30 students will assist with the production.

The story, by Clyde M. Fitch, tells of a Maryland girl whose loyalty to the south is challenged by her love for a union officer. Miss Margaret Cleary is the director, with Miss Irene Pryor as chairman of period dancing. Herman J. Beringer will conduct the school orchestra for the incidental music.

Play for Glencoe.

Members of the Drama club of the Glencoe Union church will present the three act comedy, "Footloose," on Friday and Saturday night, under the direction of Spiro Mann. The cast includes Barbara Bray, Buster Cassels, Ruth Hackett, Bill Holst, Arminda Jeffreys, Marjorie Kearney, Gordon Laughead, Alan Matthews, Leroy Moeller, Leonard Reed, Ray Reed, Jean Seidel, Patsy Strauss, and Mary Ellen Wright.

Jordan Wilson and Jack McIntyre form the stage crew, Nancy Wilder is manager of properties, assisted by Peggy Wright, Virginia Jensen, and June Dewey; Ronald McGraw is ticket chairman, Barbara Kearney, prompter, and Elsie Russell, publicity chairman.

Murder conceived by the twisted brain of an apparently gentle old maid was revealed in the Borden murder case. A dramatization of this story by John Colton and Carleton Miles, entitled "Nine Pine Street," will be enacted by the Hudson players at 8:30 o'clock tonight and tomorrow in their headquarters at 1016 North Dearborn street. Lizzie Borden, the murderess, will be played by Virginia Lamb, right, and the other characters in this scene are (left to right) Theresa Stein as Clara Holden, Yolanda Salla as Minnie Roberts, and Tony Harrant as Warren Pitt. The play is directed by Roy Hudson.

Krazy Kwiz Chief

Prof. Harold Isbell, the quizzing master of the Krazy Kwiz program, new mirth provoking presentations aired on W-G-N at 1 p. m. each Sunday. The professor hands out cash for answers to the fantastic questions.

TEMPLE SHOLOM MEN TO SPONSOR PARTY FOR SONS

Sports Films and Talks Comprise Program.

Movies of major league baseball, sleight of hand and talks by sports celebrities will make up the program of the annual fathers' and sons' night of Temple Sholom Men's club Wednesday in the community rooms, 3480 Lake Shore drive.

Guest speakers will include Barney Ross, former welterweight champion; Sam Lifschultz, coach of the Chicago Bruins football team, and Marshall Goldberg, former All-American half back at the University of Pittsburgh, now a member of the Chicago Cardinals team.

The contest is under the direction of the Men's club, and contestants will make ten minute speeches on subjects connected with past or present Jewish life. Dr. Eliezer Ehrmann, chairman of the Temple High school, will be in charge.

The school will hold a dance Saturday evening in the community hall to raise money for the Jewish Welfare fund. Elaine Retchin and Avron Zechman are co-chairman of the dance. Last year the students raised $600 for the fund.

A literary and pictorial exhibit of manuscripts of Rashi, famous Talmudic commentator, will be on display until May 15 at the library of the College of Jewish Studies, 220 South State street. The exhibit, prepared by Dr. Fritz Bamberger, faculty member, is being held in connection with the 900th anniversary of Rashi.

CHOIR OF DE PAUL U. WILL GIVE CONCERT ON FRIDAY EVENING

De Paul university a cappella choir, Arthur C. Becker, director, will give a concert at 8:30 o'clock Friday evening in Thorne hall, Lake Shore drive and Superior street. Tenor soloists will be Ralph Niehaus, 3044 Kenmore avenue, and Edward Short of Waukegan.

Edward Short.

Mr. Niehaus, accompanied by Gregory Konold, will sing a group of songs including "Alma Mia," from the opera "Floridante," by Handel; "Clorinda," by Morgan; "Black Roses," by Sibelius, and "Cielo e mar" from the opera "La Gioconda," by Ponchielli.

LOVE FOR LILACS IS TRADITION OF AMERICAN LIFE

Sprouts Brought West in Covered Wagons.

Man's love for the lilac has been reflected in every step in the development of America. The Morton arboretum has traced the spread of the flower from the days it was brought to New England by the colonists.

The Arboretum reports that "a few carefully protected lilac sprouts were usually tucked away somewhere in the covered wagons of these pioneers as they set out to conquer the wildernesses of the west. Even today one may recognize old home sites by the remaining lilac clumps which still guard forgotten doorways."

Bushes Bloom Profusely.

The lilac has been found to be exceedingly tolerant of soils and exposures. It blooms profusely in the Chicagoland setting. Yet, if future flowering is to be considered there are certain simple rules to be followed.

At the arboretum, where there are 251 varieties of the blossom in all shades from deep purple and white to pink, these suggestions were made to home gardeners planning to participate in the Share Your Lilacs campaign sponsored by the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild, and THE TRIBUNE:

Don't break off the blossoms. It is advisable to use pruning shears or a sharp knife in cutting lilacs for bouquets.

Cut Close to Stem.

Cut as close to the main stem as possible so as to permit quick healing.

Do not cut promiscuously, damaging the symmetry of the bush. The blossoms should be cut in late evening, or early morning before the sun is up. Place them in cold water in a cool place over night.

It is possible to offset wilting by cutting away some of the leaves, thus reducing the amount of evaporating surface.

Proper cutting of blossoms is not injurious to the bush and does not affect its future productiveness.

Authorities point out that pruning in winter or spring delays a large part of the flower buds. It is explained that lilacs need pruning only to cut out dead or diseased wood, or renew old plants.

Asked the common question, "What is the best variety to plant?" an authority once answered: "The best 12 are any 12 which are most pleasing to you."

While it may be said that the lilac is tolerant of soils and exposures, the collection at the Morton arboretum was shifted four times in attaining the best results. The first spot was found too low and the blossoms were subjected to late spring frosts. The second spot was too shady, and the third too moist. The ideal site has been found to be one where there is proper drainage, no shade, and an elevation from frost.

'Liliom' Will Be Next Great Play Presentation

"Liliom," by Ferenc Molnar, Hungarian playwright, now having one of its many successful Broadway revivals, will be the Great Play presentation at 1 p. m. today over WENR. The drama, a story of a lovable young roughneck who wants to do what's right by his wife, but always manages to make both of them miserable, was first produced at Budapest in 1909 when the author was 31 years old. It not reach American until 1921.

What amounts to the Golden Gloves in the universal sport of kite flying will take place next Saturday morning in Grant park.

Three hundred and seventy-two semi-finals winners in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE kite contest will fly in the grand finals for the championship of Chicagoland. As in the Golden Gloves boxing tournaments, eight champions are to be crowned, one for each event.

Several thousand spectators are expected to gather at Hutchinson field near Balbo drive in Grant park to watch the 1940 championship finals. The contest, under co-sponsorship of the park district, will get under way at 10 o'clock in the morning. It is not expected to end before 1 o'clock. In the event of rain the grand finals will be held over to Saturday, May 4.

Each Makes Own Kite.

Spectators will see the city's most skillful kite flyers, boys and girls and adults, who have been selected from more than 5,000 preliminary contestants at local parks, and who have won in semi-finals held in six sections of the city. These contestants, who have been reduced to 372, are the most expert kite flyers in Chicagoland. Each has made his own kite, for the most part with materials furnished free in park district fieldhouses.

To the eight winners of the contest, will go eight loving cup trophies donated by THE TRIBUNE, as precious to kite flyers as the Golden Gloves insignias are to amateur boxers. Contestants will compete in artistic, novelty, solo box, messenger, mechanical winding, handwriting, strongest pulling, and largest kite events. To the runners-up and third, fourth, fifth, and sixth place winners, the park district will award ribbons.

More than a contest of skill, it will be a spectacle of color and creative ingenuity. Kites of all sizes and shapes will be dancing in the breeze at the ends of 75 yards of string, pirouetting and soaring before the judges.

Pinocchio and Gulliver.

There will be Pinocchio kites, kites depicting Gulliver's travels, huge tongued dragons, stately box kites, kites shaped like fish, stars and crescents, plain bow kites and Confucius kites blazoned with 1940 westernized orientalisms.

On the field a first aid station is to be set up for kites that are damaged in flight. Contestants will be able to repair their kites with equipment furnished by the park district.

F. E. Kardes, park district supervisor of crafts, will be contest director. S. J. Meuris is assistant director. R. V. Pierce wil judge the artistic, novelty, strongest pulling, and largest kite events. Other judges are Paul Tornheim, handwinding; Frank Nekimken, mechanical winding; O. C. Sonntag, solo box kite, and J. E. Rosich, E. D. Harris, and R. C. Mitchell, messenger event.

Whole Town Hails Pair as Uncle and Aunt

"Uncle" Gus and "Aunt" Libbie Kirchhoff are friends of every one in Franklin Park. They have grown old with their neighbors and they've known the younger couples since they were children in Sunday school. That's why they are "uncle" and "aunt" to the whole town.

August B. Kirchhoff taught Sunday school in the first Methodist church—now located across the street almost as close to his home as to the parsonage—for 43 years. He is a charter member of the church, which was the only one in town for many years and is still the only established Protestant congregation. He started the Sunday school at the time the church was organized in 1892.

Altho Uncle Gus resigned as superintendent in 1938, he has served as superintendent emeritus ever since and has been a standby in any emergency. He likes to lead the singing, especially when they sing his favorite song, "Blessed Assurance, Jesus Is Mine." He has gained this assurance thru his church activities.

"Church work came ahead of almost everything for me," Mr. Kirchhoff explained.

Wife's Long Record.

His wife made her record in the primary department where she taught for 25 years. "I loved the little ones and was in my glory when I could be with them," she said. "You see, we didn't have any children, and, tho we reared a niece of mine, one child wasn't enough."

Recently the congregation honored Mr. and Mrs. Kirchhoff at a surprise party on their 53d wedding anniversary and presented Uncle Gus with a recognition pin for his years of service.

"It was a real surprise," admitted Mrs. Kirchhoff. "I didn't have any idea they were planning anything and wore an old red dress. They gave me a pink corsage and the ladies said they were hoping I wouldn't wear that dress. I told them they should have warned me."

Treasures a Notebook.

Among Mr. Kirchhoff's favorite possessions is a tattered notebook with the records of the first church meetings and additional notes by later pastors. In flowing penmanship on the pages is a brief history of the first years, a copy of the charter and the names of the founders—A. B. Kirchhoff, W. H. Kirchhoff [a brother], J. B. Grubbs, D. L. Gill, Dora Martens, H. A. Draper, and Abe Roland. [The last four are deceased.]

The church was opened with ten adults and the Sunday school started with 40 youngsters. Services were held in the forenoon in a pavilion which was used for dancing in the afternoon. The Rev. W. G. Lemmon was the first preacher to stay any length of time, tho many student pastors came out to the congregation for short periods. The acting pastor is the Rev. C. H. Duvall.

After meeting in temporary quarters for several years the record reads "a frame church was built, 24x36 feet, with a steeple in front and a bay in the rear costing [including lot] $1,200 and was dedicated free from debt in August, 1897, by the Rev. A. D. Traveler, secretary of the Home Missionary society."

In 1913 the congregation erected the present brick church at a cost of $8,000 and the frame building was moved to Schiller Park for the Methodist congregation there.

Once a Telegrapher.

In addition to his church work Uncle Gus, who is a 32d degree Mason, served as master of the lodge and patron of the Eastern Star. He was the first Mason in Leyden township to be initiated and receive three degrees. As a young man he worked as a telegrapher and auditor and then started a lumber business in Franklin Park which he conducted for 34 years.

Mrs. Kirchhoff paralleled her husband's activities in the church and lodge by organizing the Ladies' Aid society, teaching in the primary and taking part in Eastern Star events. Lately she has been glad to let the younger women take over this work, but she still attends church and meets with a Travel club.

The Kirchhoffs lead a quiet life now in their old home. They agree that "53 years is a long time when you look forward, but when you look backward it don't amount to much."

Orphans Await Move Into New $700,000 Home

The new $700,000 building to house 30 orphans of high school age at the Uhlich Orphan home, 3730 North California avenue, is just about completed, and will be occupied next fall. The Uhlich home is the oldest orphanage in Chicago, founded in 1867, and the new addition was made possible thru the gift of Edward J. Abel, who died in 1929, and his sister, Miss Minnie Abel, who died in 1937.

The building has a modern gymnasium and a stage, with a dressing room below. There will be two children sharing each bedroom, each having his own bed and spacious individual wall cabinets. There will be a printing shop, a manual training room, and club rooms. A catalogued library, other shops, domestic science quarters, and dental and medical rooms, available to these children, are in the adjacent older building.

Students living in the new building will attend the nearby public high schools: Roosevelt, Lane Technical, and Lucy Flower. According to the home plan, all have a part in working for the general upkeep of the plant, and are given frequent opportunites to develop their individual interests and talents. Music is especially encouraged—piano, band, and vocal—in the German tradition of the organization.

Some Not Orphans.

Today orphanages are not as they used to be depicted in story books as drab and uniform barracks. The children at Uhlich are not even orphans in many cases. They are largely children from broken homes.

Perhaps it is divorce, tuberculosis, insanity, or death. They come from all walks of life, and the 87 children making up their number represent many nationality backgrounds. They are of Protestant inclination, or if not trained in religion they assume the religious attachment of the Evangelical and Reform church which guides the orphanage.

Children come there sometimes at the age of 3. They are given nursery school care, then kindergarten, and as they grow older attend one of the four neighboring grammar schools. When they finally graduate from high school they are not thrust out into the world until a job is assured and some money is in the bank.

During their years at the home they have been trained in domestic skills, in vocations, in etiquet, and music, and in general personality development, so they are equipped to take up an independent life as adults with its many needs and opportunities fulfilled.

Gave Land for Camp.

Otto F. Closius, superintendent of the home, was president of the board of directors, and by profession a banker. When the former superintendent and the matron died suddenly in a short space of time he stepped in to tide over the emergency, and became

90 CLUBS TO AID IN ASSEMBLING SPRING BLOOMS

Seek Blossoms from Every Grower.

What is the best way to cut lilac blossoms to prevent injury to the bushes? How can cut flowers be treated to delay their wilting? These questions are answered in a story and picture on page 4.

BY HOMER NIESZ.

While cool weather last week was further retarding the opening of lilac flowering buds in Chicagoland, officials of the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild furthered plans to distribute the blooms to sick and shutins in the city's hospitals in the twelfth annual "Share Your Lilacs" campaign.

The guild and THE TRIBUNE cooperate each year with lilac growers in sharing the lilac blossoms with the sick. Last year the bouquets were taken to 147 hospitals, settlement houses, old people's homes, and other institutions, caring for more than 22,000 patients.

Guild officials last week appointed committees to work with 90 community and garden clubs in the Chicago flower area in gathering the lilacs and loading them on suburban trains for free transportation to the city. The clubs have more than 2,000 members.

Will Meet Tuesday.

The guild committees of the garden clubs and the club presidents are to meet at luncheon Tuesday noon in Carson, Pirie, Scott tearoom to complete their organization for lilac day and to plan distribution of fruits and flowers to charity patients thruout the summer. It is only on lilac days that the guild attempts to take bouquets to all hospitals in the city.

The date for gathering and distributing the lilacs will be announced as soon as officials can determine when most of the blooms will be open. Theodore V. Purcell of Evanston, president of the guild, said yesterday the date likely would be later than usual because of the retarded spring season. Most years the blossoms are ready to cut around the middle of May.

Mr. Purcell said that, as in other years, all who have lilac bushes, whether few or many, are invited to use the guild's organization in sharing the blooms with the sick. Guild committees of garden clubs will supervise the assembling of the flowers at suburban railroad stations. Trains will bring them free to stations in the city where fleets of Tribune trucks will pick them up and take them to hospitals.

Mrs. Stanley D. Grace of Highland Park is chairman of the guild's general committee that will direct the work this year. She formerly was a division chairman in charge of the northern Milwaukee division of the Northwestern railroad area. Her work as division chairman has been assigned to Mrs. Warner K. Nelson of Glencoe.

Working under the various division chairmen are guild chairmen of the garden and community clubs. A few of these still are to be selected. Names and addresses of club presidents and guild chairmen in this area are:

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

OUR Towners who read early editions of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE last Monday saw a girl's face in a picture on page 3. Many failed to recognize it, however, because the name was strange. There was nothing in the caption under a San Francisco date line to indicate that the girl chosen by artists and cameramen as having the most perfect figure in Hollywood formerly lived on the northwest side.

Miss Lenore Le Nay.

The Lenore Le Nay in the picture is the Lenore Thome who was born and reared in Our Town. Until five years ago she resided with her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Thome, at 5209 Ainslie street. She attended the Beaubien school and was active in affairs of St. Cornelius Catholic church.

Since her family moved to Hollywood she has appeared in minor rôles in 35 motion pictures. Her hope is to continue in pictures until she is a star. Last summer she returned to the northwest side to visit her sisters, Mrs. Robert Beaugureau and Mrs. P. C. Black. She expects to come back again this summer.

A new name on the roster of the Kiwanis club of northwest Chicago is that of Ben Lautenslager Jr. He resides at 5811 Virginia avenue and is in business at 5838 North Pulaski road.

OFFICERS of Von Steuben High school alumni association will be chosen at a meeting at 7:30 o'clock Friday night in the high school auditorium, 5039 North Kimball avenue. Entertainment will be provided by members of the graduating class. The executive committee will have charge of the meeting. Members are Jack Portnoy, Rosalyn Gutman, Leonard Gutman, Seymour Waldman, Bernard Epstein, Edward Shapiro, and Sam Rutchke.

Two young men from Our Town, students at Loyola university, were pledged to Pi Gamma Mu, national honorary social science fraternity, last week. They were Harold Hall, 6041 North Talman avenue, and John Marino, 618 North Western avenue. Four others were initiated to Blue Key, national honorary activities fraternity, last night. They were John Barry, 4140 North Mason avenue; Roman Ziolkowski, 5048 School street; Richard Boland, 2914 Logan boulevard, and Eugene Dubay, 4100 North Mason avenue.

TALENT scouts were prophesying a brilliant singing career for 11 year old Delores Ann Rizek last week following her appearance as a soloist in a downtown theater. A coloratura soprano, she has won several radio amateur contests. Among her prizes are two gold wrist watches and $75 in cash. Sundays she sings at the 10 o'clock mass in St. Cornelius church. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Rizek, 4923 Carmen avenue.

Marilyn and Marvin Beck, juvenile dancers and impersonators from Park Ridge who recently went to Hollywood seeking a career in the movies, won their first laurels last month appearing in an informal show at the Masquers club. They shared the spotlights with established actors such as Hugh Herbert, Joe E. Brown, Pat O'Brien, and George Bancroft. Marilyn and Marvin, who are 10 and 11 years old respectively, were born on the northwest side and have lived most of their lives in Park Ridge.

More than 200 friends and relatives attended the silver wedding reception of Mr. and Mrs. Leo J. Pitlock recently. Mr. and Mrs. Pitlock reside at 2530 North Parkside avenue. They have a son, Richard, and a foster daughter, Marie.

Hostesses at the Fiesta card party to be given at St. Elizabeth's hospital at 1:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon will be Mrs. Michael Brisch, Mrs. Frank Fischer, and Mrs. Paul Kohnen. The party is a benefit arranged by the woman's auxiliary. It will be held in the assembly hall at 1430 North Oakley boulevard.

Miss Estelle Florczak will become the bride of Henry Kunkel at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon in St. Constance church, Strong street and Menard avenue. She is the daughter of Mrs. Karoline Florczak, 5906 Lawrence avenue, and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Kunkel, 7341 North Hoyne avenue.

Nine volunteer Scout leaders from the northwest side received certificates last week for the completion of "Principals of Scout and Cub Leadership, Parts 1 and 2," a training course offered by the Chicago council.

CITIZENS' RALLY SALUTES WELLS HIGH THIS WEEK

Youths to Be Guests in W-G-N Studio.

Students of one of Chicago's youngest public high schools, Wells, located at 936 North Ashland avenue, will be guests Wednesday night at the fourth of a weekly series of radio half hour programs entitled "Citizens of Tomorrow," heard on W-G-N and sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. The program starts at 7 o'clock. Six hundred students and their principal, Dr. Paul R. Pierce, will attend the entertainment in the audience studio of W-G-N. Forty vocalists from the choral department, directed by Mrs. Myra Cook, will sing.

Dr. Paul R. Pierce.

The appearance of Wells High school will follow the debut of Lake View, Austin, and Parker on W-G-N. Next week Steinmetz will take over the half hour program. As special guests Wednesday night, "Charlie Jones," the school engineer of the "Citizens of Tomorrow" cast, has invited the school engineer-custodians of the 39 high schools in Chicago.

Jerry to Have Guests.

At their head is John Howatt, chief engineer of the Chicago board of education, who will be introduced by Philip Maxwell of THE TRIBUNE's editorial staff, who plays the rôle of "The Principal."

"Jerry" Gregory, the 16 year old senior of all Chicagoland high schools, will be back on the program after her turning the tables last week on Mr. Maxwell in a "news quiz" which also stumped the announcer of the broadcast, Pierre Andre. "Jerry," who in real life attends Maine Township High school, has quite a time attending rehearsals and keeping up her high grades which have marked her as an outstanding student. In her honor 30 students from Maine High with their dean, Einar J. Anderson, will attend the broadcast.

Honor Roll Students.

Assisting in the preparation of the script for the broadcast is Miss Lillian Novotny, the school's radio chairman and teacher of English.

On each Wednesday night's program several Chicagoland students who have achieved success in their work are mentioned by Mr. Maxwell.

Inspiration for Wells Cheers

Voice of the Northwest Side

Readers of the Metropolitan Section are invited to contribute to this column on matters of neighborhood interest. Readers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Full names and addresses must be given. No manuscripts will be returned. Address Voice of the Northwest Side, The Tribune.

NOISY STREET CAR CURVES.

Now that the first spring days are here do we people who live and conduct our business in the neighborhood have to endure the intolerable screeching of the Chicago Surface Lines cars on Lawrence avenue, as they make the curve just west of Milwaukee avenue.

For the last five years we have had to endure having our business interrupted and our sleep broken. All the writing to the Surface Lines and all their seeming willingness to try to remedy that matter have resulted in nothing except making nervous wrecks out of every one within half a mile.

Is there not an anti-noise committee or nuisance abatement society that we can appeal to? Any one who can do anything about this will be doing a real service to the residents of the Milwaukee-Lawrence vicinity. V. L. E.

THE CLEANUP CAMPAIGN.

Our school, the Wicker Park, is trying its hardest to have a clean community and school. Altho our neighborhood isn't very dirty there is a lot of room for improvement. We are doing many things to improve the appearance of our community. Every school room is clean and painted and the outside of our school is clean. Our newly installed lunchroom is as sanitary as a hospital.

The aldermen in our student council check upon the rooms for paper on the floor and other conspicuous things. We have many cleanup contests. Posters have been put in store windows and pamphlets have been sent to the parents thru the children.

HAROLD LUCK,
Chairman of the Cleanup Campaign.

WELLS EVENING HIGH SCHOOL IS NOW ACCREDITED

Rated for Membership in North Central.

Wells, the northwest side's newest evening high school, has been favorably reported for membership in the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Notification of the acceptance of the report and admission to accredited lists is expected before the end of this semester.

The school was established in February last year and became eligible for its first inspection last month. School officials said the rating given by F. C. Hood, assistant high school visitor from the office of the state superintendent of public instruction, was one of the highest ever attained by an evening school in its first year.

No faults were listed under any of the 10 divisions of the inspector's report. Instruction and spirit as well as administration and supervision were described as "worthy of special mention." The preparation of the faculty and the educational program were especially commended. The school plant, equipment, library, records, teaching load, and pupil load were reported satisfactory or superior.

Urges Pace Be Kept.

The only recommendation was that "the present interest in adapting the curriculum offering and the methods of instruction to the needs and interests of the pupils be maintained."

Thaddeus J. Lubera, principal, attributes much of the success of the school to the pupils, the faculty, and the flexibility of the evening program.

"Wells is situated in an area with a large percentage of its population foreign born or of foreign extraction," he said. "Standards of living are low and, as a result, opportunities for education have been limited. This combination of circumstances produces a superior quality of students—men and women who are seriously interested in improving themselves culturally and vocationally. School spirit is no problem when students are willing to sacrifice nights to study after working all day.

Youth and Enthusiasm.

"The outstanding qualities of the faculty," Mr. Lubera continued, "are youth and enthusiasm. The median age of the staff of 80 is less than 30, yet 31 teachers have master's degrees and most of them have done or are doing postgraduate work. Teaching for them is an adventure rather than a routine process. They stimulate students with their enthusiasm and initiative.

"In organizing the curriculum we have made every effort to provide the courses that students wanted. We have two counselors who interview each student and learn his preferences and aptitudes and advise him in planning his program. When there are enough who request a course we always try to offer it.

"For example, soon after the classes began last year members of a neighborhood boys' club came in and asked for instruction in printing. We were not offering a course then, but within a few weeks we had organized one. The class is now one of the most popular in the curriculum."

Enrollment in the school numbers 2,049, an increase of 763 since it opened last year. The first classes of 14 high school students and 15 elementary school students will be graduated on June 2.

NEW $15,000 GIFT TO AID NEGROES' PROGRESS SHOW

Dr. Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald fund, has announced that his organization will contribute $15,000 to the American Negro exposition, to be held in the Coliseum July 4 thru Sept. 2. Besides helping to underwrite the event, the grant will be used in part for the fund's special sections on education, health, and social science.

The Rosenwald fund is the second foundation to make a special grant to the forthcoming celebration of 75 years of Negro progress since emancipation. Recently the General Education board appropriated $15,000 for a motion picture on Negro education to be prepared by the American film center for showing at the exposition.

The state, which is officially sponsoring the event, has set aside $75,000 as a sustaining fund. Approximately two million persons are expected to attend the 60 day exhibit.

so interested in the work that he has remained.

He has donated land for a summer camp near Walkerton, Ind. The boys have been building their own lodge and cottages there, building their own boats, and eventually the girls' quarters will be erected.

The Uhlich home was founded originally to care for orphaned children whose fathers had been killed in the civil war, and was originally located at La Salle and Ontario streets. When the Chicago fire destroyed this building, for one year the home was moved to Burling and Center streets, while Charles Wacker and others raised the money to establish a permanent institution. In the spring of 1928 the present quarters were occupied.

Rounded lives and happiness are two of the goals of the home, and the 2,000 children who have emerged from childhood there have turned out well. Those having the advantages of the new quarters will be as well cared for as at any private school.

MODERN DUPLEX HOUSE CONCEALS TRUE IDENTITY

Offers Real Advantages to City Dwellers.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Just before spring came, a bit reluctantly, from around the corner this year, Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Woods moved into their new home at 6026 Bloomingdale avenue. At approximately the same time their aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. De Perro, moved into their new home at 6028 Bloomingdale.

As it happens, the two residences are under one roof, for the dwelling is a duplex town house, and a very good looking house, we can honestly say.

The architect, Martin H. Braun, 1827 North McVicker avenue, has carried out the exterior walls in brick; tan and brown shades predominate, and the exterior trim, windows and doors have been painted an off white.

Advantages Are Told.

There are many definite assets to the modern duplex town house. Economy of land is one. And there is the impression of greater size since two small homes under one roof seem larger than a one size home of the same cubic content. Then, too, with a finely designed duplex on a 50 foot lot, each occupant pays for only 25 feet, is taxed for only 25 feet, and yet has the enjoyment of wide front and back lawns.

This is a home where every square foot of the interior has been made to give an excellent account of itself.

Mrs. Woods showed me thru her home the day I visited the duplex. She is a young woman who has every reason to be proud of her house. There are many interesting features upstairs and down, and Mrs. Woods has given the interior an atmosphere of unusual appeal.

Closet Near Door.

As you enter the hallway you see a convenient guest closet directly opposite the entrance door, and at the left there is the living room, with dining room beyond and an arch between.

The living room walls have been painted and stippled an off peach, while the dining room is papered, and the oak floors have a fine, natural finish.

The kitchen walls are painted an off white, and combine happily with white cabinets and blue linoleum top and blue linoleum floor. The breakfast set is carried out in lively red tones. And the cabinet spaces are a joy to behold—and to use. The cabinets over the sink have adjustable shelves, and the cases under the work top surfaces have sliding shelves which pull out for greater working convenience.

Glass Block Over Tub.

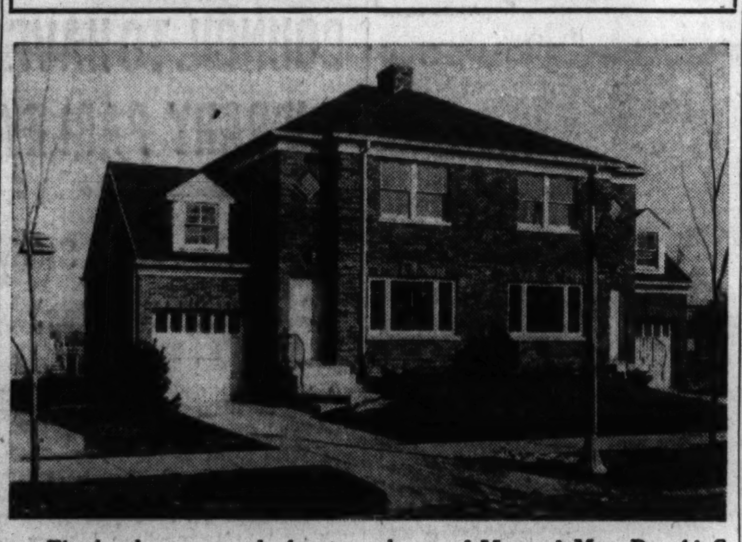
There are Venetian blinds at all the windows and glass block has been used at several strategic points, including a panel over the tub in the bathroom.

Halfway up the stairs which lead to the second floor there are the electric door chimes, recessed in the wall. And at the right a cozy studio den, which is placed over the garage. This room could be used as a bedroom equally well. And it has the advantage of closet space which runs the entire width of the room.

Half a flight farther up is the second floor, with its two bedrooms and bath. The master bedroom has an attractive small alcove corner and its walls have an unusual treatment. Walls on two of its sides are painted blue, and the other two walls have a white paper with a blue figure. The ceiling is a dark blue. The second bedroom is carried out with a yellow papered wall with a yellow ceiling.

Thruout the house the interior doors are the flush type of birch veneer, with a shimmering natural finish, and the trim around doors and windows has been specially designed.

Double Feature Town House



The handsome new duplex town home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Woods and Mr. and Mrs. DePerro at 6026 and 6028 Bloomingdale avenue. There are many interesting features to this two family dwelling, not the least a study den over each garage. The exterior walls are of brick in shades of tan and deep brown. Architect, Martin H. Braun, 1827 North McVicker avenue, Chicago.

LOVE FOR LILACS IS A TRADITION OF AMERICAN LIFE

Sprouts Came West in Covered Wagons.

Man's love for the lilac has been reflected in every step in the development of America. The Morton arboretum has traced the spread of the flower from the days it was brought to New England by the colonists.

The Arboretum reports that "a few carefully protected lilac sprouts were usually tucked away somewhere in the covered wagons of these pioneers as they set out to conquer the wildernesses of the west. Even today one may recognize old home sites by the remaining lilac clumps which still guard forgotten doorways."

Bushes Bloom Profusely.

The lilac has been found to be exceedingly tolerant of soils and exposures. It blooms profusely in the Chicagoland setting. Yet, if future flowering is to be considered there are certain simple rules to be followed.

At the arboretum, where there are 251 varieties of the blossom in all shades from deep purple and white to pink, these suggestions were made to home gardeners planning to participate in the Share Your Lilacs campaign sponsored by the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild, and THE TRIBUNE:

Don't break off the blossoms. It is advisable to use pruning shears or a sharp knife in cutting lilacs for bouquets.

Cut Close to Stem.

Cut as close to the main stem as possible so as to permit quick healing.

Do not cut promiscuously, damaging the symmetry of the bush. The blossoms should be cut in late evening, or early morning before the sun is up. Place them in cold water in a cool place over night.

It is possible to offset wilting by cutting away some of the leaves, thus reducing the amount of evaporating surface.

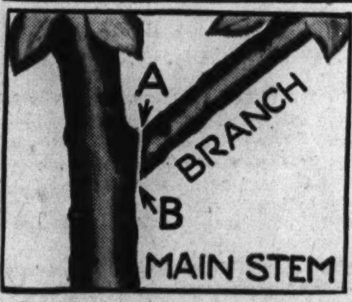
Proper cutting of blossoms is not injurious to the bush and does not affect its future productiveness.

Authorities point out that pruning in winter or spring delays a large part of the flower buds. It is explained that lilacs need pruning only to cut out dead or diseased wood, or renew old plants.

Asked the common question, "What is the best variety to plant?" an authority once answered: "The best 12 are any 12 which are most pleasing to you."

While it may be said that the lilac is tolerant of soils and exposures, the collection at the Morton arboretum was shifted four times in attaining the best results. The first spot was found too low and the blossoms were subjected to late spring frosts. The second spot was too shady, and the third too moist. The ideal site has been found to be one where there is proper drainage, no shade, and an elevation from frost.

Gathering Lilacs



Cut close to the main stem when you gather your Share Your Lilacs bouquet. The line AB shows the correct method and it is best if point B is slightly closer to the stem than point A. Use pruning shears or sharp knife.

Mrs. Ida Waskow.

LUTHERAN GUILD TO OFFER BAZAR IN IRVING PARK

The Dorcas Guild of the Irving Park Lutheran church, located at Harding and Belle Plaine avenues, will hold a spring festival for the benefit of the church building fund in the church educational building at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday and Wednesday nights. A dinner will be held Tuesday. There will be movies and a chalk talk by Walter Ohlson. Booths will display fancy work, refreshments, "white elephant" assortments, children's toys and clothes. Dr. Joshua Oden is pastor of the church, and Mrs. Eleanor Ripka, 5759 North Marmora avenue, is chairman.

LINNE STUDENTS PLAN CLEANUP PARADE FRIDAY

"Adopt the Zinnia as the Neighborhood Flower," is the slogan for the cleanup project which Linné Elementary school, 3221 North Sacramento avenue, is sponsoring under the direction of the student council. The annual cleanup parade will be held in the streets near the school at 1 o'clock Friday.

Harry Pillman, council secretary, has written to all neighborhood organizations inviting them to coöperate. Harriet Pillman is president of the council and Frank Lesher, a patrol captain, is chairman of the parade.

COLLEGE ALUMNI PLAN BANQUET FOR THURSDAY

Chicago chapter of the Kalamazoo College Alumni association will hold its annual spring banquet in the Midland club Thursday evening at 7 o'clock. Willis D. Pease, 7750 Indiana avenue, president of the organization is in charge of the plans. Mrs. Carl Chatters, 10726 South Hoyne avenue, is the vice president, and Dexter Johnson of La Grange is the secretary.

At the banquet the alumni plan to inaugurate an annual scholarship for some deserving high school student in the Chicago area. It is intended to raise at least $100 each year by direct contribution from the alumni. Kalamazoo college has agreed to match from its scholarship funds.

SCHOOL BRIGADE POISED FOR WAR ON CITY GRIME

Annual Cleanup Drive Starts Tomorrow.

A children's crusade will take the field against dirt tomorrow. From northwest side schools thousands of boys and girls, armed with hoes, brooms, mops, and rakes will go forth to battle against grime, rubbish, weeds, and other enemies of health and beauty.

Battle cry in the campaign will be "Team Up with Clean Up," a slogan written by Miss Irene Murdock, a senior at McKinley High school. The banner will be a poster drawn by Miss Olga Martish, a senior at Schurz High school. Both were winners in contests held under the auspices of the community service committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Get Honorable Mention.

Northwest side students who received honorable mention in the slogan contest were Richard Monogue, Reilly school; Loretta Jensen, Avondale school; Martin Tivador, Dever school; Stanley Pulaski, Burr school; Lorraine Dauw, Steinmetz High school; Marvin Peterson, Schurz High school; Richard Seeber, Foreman High school, and Irving Markin and Lillian Feinstein, Tuley High school; Kenneth Low, Sauganash High school.

Those who received honorable mentions in the poster contest were Robert Enzenbacher, Vernon E. Stake, and Rocco Grecie from Foreman; Helen Dachs, Eleanor Klak, Marion Bollinger, Jack De Bartolo, Robert Wahlgren, Don Beckler, and Vally Ringstmeyer from Schurz; Harold Brooks, Gladys Bruhn, and Irving Markin from Tuley; Marvin H. Lavin from Von Steuben; Florence Curtis, Joseph Engelhardt, Sidney Rushakoff, Clarice Osborne, Muriel Larson, and Genevieve Szymkiewicz from Roosevelt.

At Wells High school the principal event this week will be an orchestra contest for children in elementary schools associated with Wells in the drive. They will compete next Wednesday for gold, silver, and bronze medals as well as a trophy for their school.

Paint Window Boxes.

Tomorrow students at Foreman High school will produce an original play written by George Kurth and Robert Banzhaf. It was chosen from several submitted in a clean-up play contest. Betty Lund is the student director.

At Schurz High school next week students will be putting the finishing touches to a set of 17 window boxes which will extend across the face of the building. Brightly painted, they will be planted with petunias in summer and some kind of evergreen in the winter.

At Taft High school the greatest emphasis in the campaign is to preserve the clean appearance of the new building and grounds.

There are four divisions in the project at Kelvyn Park High school—the community, the school, the home, and the pupil. In addition, there is a permanent clean-up campaign in operation within the school building during the entire term.

The campaign at Steinmetz is organized along lines similar to that at Kelvyn Park. Miss Rea M. Lyon and Herbert A. Jackson are sponsors of the clean-up committee.

As an aid in enforcing regulations at Von Steuben High school, members of the committee have been given the power to arrest and hold to the student court for trial all those who break the rules. Posters, slogans, plays, and inspections have also been used in making students clean-up conscious.

Monday, April 22.

Without suitable soil, plants will not do well; poor soil must be corrected by adding plant food and humus. Humus improves the soil, holds moisture, aids in the manufacture of plant fod, and provides the best conditions for plant growth. Wherever there is room for a compost heap it should be kept going at all times. Every scrap of grass, clippings, manures, soft weeds, etc., should be put in the compost.

Tuesday, April 23.

Some annuals may be grown in a shady part of the garden, if the shade is not too dense. These include the aster, forget-me-not, nemophila, pansy, snapdragon, wishbone plant or torenia, sweet alyssum, and monkey flower. It is late to sow pansy seed, but short, stock plants can be obtained easily from supply houses. Seedlings raised in boxes are greatly benefited by transplanting at least once. Use annual vines wherever they can be used for they grow rapidly, cover unsightly objects or hide poor views if given some support, and they add much to the appearance of any place. The monvine is one of the best. Pot plants can be purchased. The hyacinth bean has large purplish beans and does well on the wire fence. Morning glories, cypress vine, scarlet runner, balsam apple, and cardinal flower all have a place. Sweet peas are best grown in full sun and supported with wire or brush.

Wednesday, April 24.

Fast growing annuals that require little attention include the alyssum, cosmos, marigold, larkspur, candytuft, nasturtium, mourning bride, pot marigold, and bachelor buttons. Keep all withered flowers removed to prevent formation of seed. Plant more of the graceful grasses for bouquets. They include cloud grass, quaking grass, Job's tears, fountain grass, and ruppeli. All of these are easily grown and do best in full sun. A group in perennial borders looks well.

Thursday, April 25.

A good soil for most plants consists of about one-half loamy garden soil, one-quarter rooted leafmold, some decomposed cow manure, and one-quarter sand. If the manure is unavailable, a four inch pot of high grade complete commercial fertilizer mixed with each wheelbarrow of soil is excellent. Do not put small plants in large pot; wait until the roots touch the sides of the pots and then shift.

Friday, April 26.

Gardeners who expect to plant a new perennial garden this spring should see that the soil is well prepared because of the permanent nature of the plants. Dig the soil to a depth of a foot or more and work in a complete commercial plant food; well decayed manures can be used if they are available. Perennials delight in a deep, well drained location. The first year a few plants should be purchased and seeds of other kinds sown. Sowing seeds in April or May will give good plants that can be transplanted to permanent beds next fall. Seedlings should be transplanted by late June.

Saturday, April 27.

Most perennials can be propagated by dividing the roots in early spring. Others can be increased by root cuttings taken during the middle to late summer. When a young tree is planted see that it has a guard to prevent injury from children or from the lawn mower. An injury to the trunk should be repaired immediately by cutting out all mutilated sections to the cambium and painting with coal tar. When ordering a tree for the yard select one with a straight trunk, without a crotch.

W-G-N PROGRAM REVEALS YOUTH'S HOPE, STRENGTH

Tribune Via Air Salutes 'Citizens of Tomorrow.'

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

As a salute to youth's promise and accomplishment and to its high destiny under the American way, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE each Wednesday evening presents the program, "Citizens of Tomorrow," over W-G-N.

It is well worth a half hour's pause to watch this procession of youth passing thru the portals of W-G-N. For here one obtains a brief preview of the future of democracy. That glimpse is full of hope.

The manner of presenting "Citizens of Tomorrow" is in itself strictly in the democratic tradition. For this program is an anomaly in educational broadcasting—an informative and entertaining program that delights the boy and girl as well as parents and teachers and the countless others who listen to it. Too often radio programs that suit parents and educators are ignored by youth. The converse is true, too. Mothers and fathers are not always pleased with the radio preferences of their offspring.

To make "Citizens of Tomorrow" the success it is, high school students give their best; they set the pace for the show—and it is a show—and they flavor it with their rousing yells, their fine choral singing, their lively contributions to THE TRIBUNE news quiz, and their reverberating applause—with a higher decibel rating than many sponsored network productions are accorded. They have embraced it as their own show.

The fullest coöperation is given, too, by the public school system. The Chicago board of education lends its full support to the broadcasts. Valuable aid and advice is given in preparing the programs by the radio council of the board of education, directed by Harold Kent, and by the department of music, under the direction of Miss Helen Howe.

The contributions of the youngsters and of their teachers are deftly welded into a finished production by skilled writers, producers, and performers of W-G-N. The result: A weekly program that is educational, stimulating, inspiring—that reflects democracy at its best.

A Glimpse of Young America.

A visit to a broadcast of "Citizens of Tomorrow" provides a fine opportunity to observe Young America at close range. As 600 boys and girls from Parker High school—probably a good cross-section of the youth of the nation—poured into W-G-N's spacious audience studio last Wednesday, certain qualities stood out.

These youngsters are wholesome, hearty, and hardy. Vitality, health, exuberance, enthusiasm, eagerness, hope, confidence, and strength! These are but a few of the qualities brought to mind as they overflowed the big auditorium.

Chicago's youth is not regimented. Youngsters appear to be far more individualistic than their elders. That seems to apply particularly with regard to dress and manner. These high school folk wear an astonishing variety of clothes, with comfort and color competing as the keynotes. Footgear alone runs the gamut from Mexican huaraches and "wedgies" to patent pumps with high heels. The girls wear all manner of anklet socks, silk hose—or both.

They Are Democratic.

As they scramble for seats a minor uproar fills the studio. They make full use of the right of free speech and assembly. With regard to the latter it takes the form of trying to save seats for their late-arriving friends. With regard to the former, one hears from a husky lad such expressions as "Hey, good looking—you with the mirror—how about moving over a notch so we can sit down?"

These boys and girls are decidedly democratic. Already they reveal many potentialities of good citizenship. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools, touched on this point the other evening when he was a guest at the broadcast. He remarked about their willingness to serve and their capacity for enjoying friendship and fellowship with others thru sharing common privileges and responsibilities.

"You young people," he said, "can and do participate in your American citizenship long before you are eligible to vote. Ever since you started school you have been learning to work and play with your classmates and to contribute your best to group activities." These experiences in school he said, represent the best possible preparation for democratic living.

Understands School Youth.

"Citizens of Tomorrow" derives much of its success thru the enthusiasm and experience of Philip Maxwell, member of THE TRIBUNE staff and the master of ceremonies, who plays the rôle of the principal. Mr. Maxwell is director of the Chicagoland Music Festival. He knows and understands the high school youth. Each fall he addresses some 50,000 of them at school assemblies in connection with THE TRIBUNE'S R. O. T. C. awards. Out of this experience grew the "Citizens of Tomorrow" program which reaches out by radio to high school students everywhere thruout Chicagoland.

In recognition of the achievements of out of the city students, tributes are paid each week to five boys and girls in the five Chicagoland states who have already made their marks in leadership, scholarship, character, and service. Those saluted are selected by their high school principals in coöperation with local correspondents of THE TRIBUNE.

Quiz Arouses Applause.

Announcer Pierre Andre keeps the showing moving right along; Blair Walliser is the efficient director; Francis Coughlin does the smooth writing job, and Harold Turner is ever ready at the piano to furnish what is needed in the way of music.

THE TRIBUNE news quiz arouses plenty of spontaneous applause as six classmates, picked at random from the audience, fight it out for cash and glory. Those who survive the quizdown get $5 each. There were three such winners for Parker last Wednesday, to the delight of Miss Nellie Quinn, the Parker principal. Answers of the youngsters indicate a good reading acquaintance with THE TRIBUNE. One girl raised a great cheer by correctly answering a Golden Gloves question—just to cite one example.

While "Citizens of Tomorrow" has a definite format, it is flexible enough to permit desirable alterations. Last week Jerry, the brash co-ed, turned the tables on the experts and subjected them to a quiz of her own.

"If I went to a Parker dance 'sandwich'—how would I go?" she asked Mr. Maxwell. It was his cue not to know the answer, which is as every high school student knows: "Go with two boy friends." It delighted the youngsters to have the principal stumped by Jerry while the engineer was able to answer them.

The demand for tickets far exceeds the number available each week. At some high schools 2,000 have requested tickets; only 600 can be accommodated. Others hear the show in their own living rooms. After the broadcast the motion picture "Trees to Tribunes," telling the story of the making of tomorrow's newspaper, is shown. And then 100 selected students—usually those enrolled in journalism courses—are taken on a tour of THE TRIBUNE'S plant.

Three performances of "Citizens of Tomorrow" have been given. Eight more are scheduled prior to the end of the school year.

You're missing something if you aren't listening!

W-G-N Guest

This is Luella Gear, comedienne now starring in "The Streets of Paris" at the Grand Opera house. She will be heard with Bobby Clark, her colleague in the musical revue, on Fifth Row Center over W-G-N and the Mutual network from 7 to 7:30 p. m. Friday. They will do a comedy called "Career in Matrimony" on the broadcast.

CARTERS' TALENT HUNT IS NO SEARCH FOR ANOTHER OOMPH GIRL

Sponsors of the Carters of Elm Street, who are conducting a talent search thru W-G-N and 84 other Mutual stations, have announced that they are not necessarily seeking an oomph girl or a grandmother. [There are to be two winners—one between 15 and 25 and one over 25.]

Parts are to be written into the script to fit the talents, the acting ability, and the personality of the two winners. The winners are to get contracts for two weeks each at $112.50 a week with all expenses paid while in Chicago.

The search started on April 15 with local auditions to be held in each of the 85 cities and towns carrying the "Carters" program. Then, recordings of the voices of the local winners will go to regional centers, and those of the regional winners will go to Chicago for the national selections. Chairman of the national judges' committee will be Virginia Payne, who plays the starring rôle of "Carrie Carter" on the "Carters" program. One of the other judges will be one of the nation's outstanding motion picture talent scouts.

BOBBY CLARK, LUELLA GEAR ON 5TH ROW CENTER

Bobby Clark and Luella Gear, comedy headliners of "The Streets of Paris," will be co-starred in W-G-N and Mutual's program Fifth Row Center from 7 to 7:30 p. m. next Friday. They will be featured in a radio play titled "Career in Matrimony."

A Couple of the Theater.

In "Career in Matrimony" Clark and Miss Gear will play the parts of a married couple of the theater. Both are stars, and while in love with each other, they are tremendously jealous of each other's work. They decide to separate, but their careers bring them together again, thru a maze of complications.

Without His Teammate.

Bobby Clark is now making his second solo starring appearance. For three decades he was teamed with the late Paul McCullough.

Luella Gear made her debut in "The Love of Mike." Since then she has starred in many big shows including "The Gold Diggers," "Poppy," "Ups a Daisy," "The Gay Divorcee," "Life Begins at 8:40," and "On Your Toes."

'DEACON' TELLS WHERE HE GETS HIS FUNNY SLANT

The Deacon is a very funny man in the opinion of many W-G-N listeners. In reply to fan letters, commenting on his humor, The Deacon [John Howard] suggests that maybe his humor is at least partially due to his friendship with some of the great American humor writers, including Irving S. Cobb and the late Opie Read.

The Deacon's program is a monolog, with a verbal patter and songs. Howard has had many years of theatrical and radio experience behind him. He has appeared on the legitimate stage for the Shuberts, the Erlangers, and for Winthrop Ames. He appeared in one of Ames' companies of "The Mikado." Among his other stage works have been "The Farmer's Wife," "Robin Hood," "The Dutch Doll," "The Rivals," and "Expressing Willie."

The scene of the program is a mythical but nevertheless very real place called Echo Valley, where the Deacon discusses such friends as Lem Conover, Widow Belle Meakins, Onie Googins, and Bud Wilkins.

"Romance in Rhythm," directed by Harold Stokes, will feature Lawrence Salerno, Edna O'Dell, the Four Shades of Blue, and the chorus from 9:30 to 10 p. m. tomorrow on W-G-N and the Mutual network.

Salerno will sing the "Gaucho Serenade," and will join the chorus in "Yours Is My Heart Alone." Miss O'Dell will be heard in "Say It," from the musical picture, "Buck Benny Rides Again," and will join the chorus in "It Happened in Kaloha."

Jackie Palette to Sing 'On a Sunday Afternoon'

"On a Sunday Afternoon," under the direction of Harold Stokes, will present a guest soloist, Jackie Palette, contralto, with the W-G-N Dance orchestra, from 2 to 2:30 p. m. today on W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system. With Miss Palette will be heard the Four Grenadiers.

For her solo Miss Palette will sing "Between the Devil and the Deep Blue Sea," and she will join the Grenadiers in "You You Darling." The Grenadiers will sing "I've Got Music in My Heart," "All in Favor Say Aye," and "Way Back in 1939 A. D."

$150,000 CHURCH SCHOOL WILL BE READY IN FALL

A new school building is being erected by the Queen of All Saints church, at Ionia and Keene avenues, in Sauganash, which will be completed for the opening of the fall term. The main building will have 12 rooms in two stories and will be of Gothic architecture. Glass used in the windows will admit violet rays.

A public address system will connect all rooms. Vestibules and corridors will have six feet of tile with terrazzo floors, and the classrooms will have asphalt tile floors. A basement social room will be finished with knotty pine and will have a cafeteria, a stage, and a powder room. A portion of the first floor of the building will be used as a temporary church.

The kindergarten, in a separate building, will include a workroom and a playroom. A fireplace, a kitchen, a rock garden, and a play terrace will characterize this unit. Kindergarteners will be admitted from neighboring parishes.

The school will cost $150,000 and will be the first part of a $750,000 project which, when completed, will include a church and a convent. These will be constructed on church land already owned.

MAP LILAC SHARING DRIVE THIS WEEK

Fantasy and Skill to Lure Throngs.

What amounts to the Golden Gloves in the universal sport of kite flying will take place next Saturday morning in Grant park.

Three hundred and seventy-two semi-finals winners in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE kite contest will fly in the grand finals for the championship of Chicagoland. As in the Golden Gloves boxing tournaments, eight champions are to be crowned, one for each event.

Several thousand spectators are expected to gather at Hutchinson field near Balbo drive in Grant park to watch the 1940 championship finals. The contest, under co-sponsorship of the park district, will get under way at 10 o'clock in the morning. It is not expected to end before 1 o'clock. In the event of rain the grand finals will be held over to Saturday, May 4.

Each Makes Own Kite.

Spectators will see the city's most skillful kite flyers, boys and girls and adults, who have been selected from more than 5,000 preliminary contestants at local parks, and who have won in semi-finals held in six sections of the city. These contestants, who have been reduced to 372, are the most expert kite flyers in Chicagoland. Each has made his own kite, for the most part with materials furnished free in park district fieldhouses.

To the eight winners of the contest, will go eight loving cup trophies donated by THE TRIBUNE, as precious to kite flyers as the Golden Gloves insignias are to amateur boxers. Contestants will compete in artistic, novelty, solo box, messenger, mechanical winding, handwriting, strongest pulling, and largest kite events. To the runners-up and third, fourth, fifth, and sixth place winners, the park district will award ribbons.

More than a contest of skill, it will be a spectacle of color and creative ingenuity. Kites of all sizes and shapes will be dancing in the breeze at the ends of 75 yards of string, pirouetting and soaring before the judges.

Pinocchio and Gulliver.

There will be Pinocchio kites, kites depicting Gulliver's travels, huge tongued dragons, stately box kites, kites shaped like fish. stars and crescents, plain bow kites and Confucius kites blazoned with 1940 westernized orientalisms.

On the field a first aid station is to be set up for kites that are damaged in flight. Contestants will be able to repair their kites with equipment furnished by the park district.

F. E. Kardes, park district supervisor of crafts, will be contest director. S. J. Meuris is assistant director. R. V. Pierce will judge the artistic, novelty, strongest pulling, and largest kite events. Other judges are Paul Tornheim, handwinding; Frank Nekimken, mechanical winding; O. C. Sonntag, solo box kite, and J. E. Rosich, E. D. Harris, and R. C. Mitchell, messenger event.

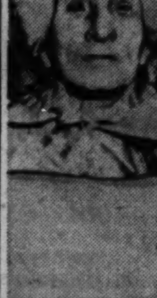
Eager, at 103, to Take Trip Injuns Spoiled

Last week Mrs. Jane McLaughlin got a permanent wave. So did thousands of other women. But there was extra special care taken with Mrs. McLaughlin's curls. She was being groomed for a celebration on Tuesday, her 103d birthday.



Mrs. Jane McLaughlin. [Leoni Photo.]

Mrs. McLaughlin, who resides at 4948 Rice street, is used to new fangled ideas. She was almost 50 before the public was riding in trolley cars. She was 39 years old before Alexander Graham Bell had the telephone working.

She was 27 years old the year Waterman gave the world the fountain pen and was a miss of 15 when Otis made it possible to go up and down in an elevator. For nearly a century she has made use of and has marveled at man's achievements from bathtubs to frozen vegetables.

Like a History Book.

When she's all fixed up with her white bobbed hair done in ringlets, Mrs. McLaughlin might not show her age if she didn't talk. When she begins to tell a story, it's as tho she were reading a history book out loud.

She can't remember her ride in the ox cart in 1840 from Columbus, O., to what is now Kankakee, Ill. But she can remember the log school she attended in Illinois and a rattlesnake bite.

She was 7 years old when her parents moved to Muscoda, Wis., and started a hotel. She was a bride in '59 when she made a trek toward Pikes Peak with her husband in the Colorado gold rush. She rode on the first steamboat to churn up the waters of the Wisconsin river, and she waved from an airy seat on the first train that chugged from Milwaukee to Prairie du Chien, the port on the Mississippi.

Hopes for Air Ride.

Three years ago when Mrs. McLaughlin was 100 years old she fell and broke three ribs. That fall cheated her out of an airplane ride. Altho she's been bedridden for two years, she's still counting on taking that ride.

"Maybe," she says, and her hope is born of experience in things that can happen, "they will soon figure out a way of landing the plane near the house."

Mrs. McLaughlin has outlived ten of her eleven sons and daughters. She makes her home with the youngest of the family, Mrs. Myrtle Talbot, from whom she has never been separated. She recovered from double pneumonia and intestinal influenza when she was 92 and again threw off the two afflictions at 97.

She is the oldest member of the Chicago Grandmothers' club. A long life has given her opportunity for trouble but Mrs. McLaughlin says, "I've had a happy life. There is nothing that can't be borne if you've a mind to it. If you just wait a while you're able to laugh after anything."

Husband Died in 1904.

Her husband, Jacob McLaughlin, an attorney of Boscobel, Wis., died in 1904. She has her memories of him and a packet of letters that he wrote her while he was away fighting in the civil war. Several describe Sherman's march to the sea.

Only a few close friends of the family will celebrate with her on Tuesday. Her family physician, Dr. Charles A. Armstrong, will come to visit again. She will probably ask him, as she usually does, "When will I be able to take my trip to Colorado and to California? You know the Indians scared me out when Jacob and I tried it in '59. I've had a mind to risk it again ever since."

ELMHURST CIVIC ARRANGES FOR ANNUAL MEETING

Annual meeting of the trade division of the Elmhurst Trade and Civic association will be held April 30 in Elks hall, 136 North York street, according to an announcement by William J. Morrison, acting secretary.

A vice president and treasurer and three members of the five man board of directors will be elected. Officers will be elected for a one year term, and the directors for two years.

Present officers of the trade division are Walter G. Rabe, vice president, and G. Roy Ramsay, treasurer. Board members whose terms expire this year are Lionel McDole, Roy Cooper, and Martin Steben. Other board members who will serve another year are C. C. Chambers and Larry O'Connor.

"Nora Nobody," three act comedy, will be presented by the Senior Walther league of Redeemer Evangelical Lutheran church, Elmhurst, on Friday and Saturday nights. Mrs. E. W. Marquardt is director.

'Hanging On to Romance' Theme for Church Lecture

"Hanging On to Romance," the fourth lecture in a series on "Love, Marriage, and the Home," will be presented by Mrs. Frances Bruce Strain at 8:15 o'clock Tuesday evening in the First Baptist church, Oak Park. The series was arranged by the Oak Park Y. M. C. A. and the Oak Park-River Forest Youth federation. Mrs. Strain is the author of books on sex education. Recently she conducted classes in "Family Relationships" at the University of Vermont.

Little 'Far Away Friends' to Dance

These three little "far away friends" are from Holland. The Dutch, the German and French, the Japanese, the Russians, and the Poles will shake hands and dance together Wednesday and Thursday afternoons on the stage of the Mason Elementary school. An operetta named "Far Away Friends" will be presented by a cast of 400 children as Mason school's contribution to Youth week. Mrs. Margaret B. Johnson is directing the musical and Mrs. Margaret L. Bauman is principal of the school, which is located at 1830 South Keeler avenue. The young Hollanders, left to right, are Lee Musserad, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Musserad, 4508 West 16th street; Doris Masin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Masin, 1626 South Pulaski road, and Elmer Hane, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hane, 1632 South Komensky avenue.

Catherine Is a Mother Again, for 81st Time

BY MILDRED WILDS.

Motherhood can be a life long career. There is the case of the mother who now proudly bears the name of Catherine the Great. Her once luxurious fur coat is a little shabby now, and her eyes are no longer the same glamorous green. But last week she became a mother again—for the 81st time.

Catherine is a cat. She has three new little kittens and their names are Census, Concensus, and Cataract.

There are many who know about Catherine. Her home is in Garfield park conservatory. Her friends say she came out of nowhere in 1913 before some of the park's younger horticulturists today weren't graduated from kindergarten. She has no last name.

Balthis Is Her Boswell.

Frank Balthis, senior horticulturist, who has been at the conservatory for 13 years, has been to Catherine what Boswell was to Johnson. He is the author of much of her biography. Paul Ludwig, who retired from the conservatory last Jan. 1, says the cat is 27 years old; that it was he who opened the door and let her in that long ago.

Her home is under the potting shelves and her days are spent among the flowers. Regularly four times a year Catherine has become a mother. In the days of her youth her annual progeny numbered 20. She only has six or so now.

A humane horticulturist has brought her hamburger every day and she rounds out her diet with mice. Her kittens, her grandkittens and her great-grandkittens have grown up. They became just cats, but she became Catherine the Great, queen of hearts and Garfield park's mascot.

Sends Regrets to Tommy.

Two years ago she became nationally known when she was invited in a 24 page booklet to the 24th birthday of Tommy Gould, aged tomcat and mascot of Seneca Falls, N. Y. Tommy's birthday was heralded by city officials of Seneca Falls and celebrated at an annual party until he succumbed to his old age last year. Catherine couldn't go to the party. She was having kittens.

Because of Catherine there have been numerous other cats at the conservatory. She alone has stayed nearly a quarter of a century. Her age as well as her chronicle of kittens has won her fame. Calculated into human years she is now 216, because one birthday ages a cat as much as eight birthdays ages a woman, on the authority of Mr. Balthis.

[Mrs. George D. Kessler, 3821 Jackson boulevard, president of the Beresford Cat Club of America, Inc., says of the whole story, "It sounds quite improbable that Catherine could be a mother so many times. But for alley cats it's quite possible. The Persians, however, are only permitted one litter a year."]

Mouser Is Champion Mother

It's not every cat that can pass a long and honorable life of mouse catching in a bower of flowers. But such is the story of Catherine the Great, Garfield park's candidate for catdom's maternity laurels. Horticulturists at the conservatory stake their reputations for veracity on the statement that her latest family is her 81st. Catherine poses here with Census, who arrived recently in company with Consensus and Cataract. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

NEW TEACHING AIDS TO BE DEMONSTRATED FOR PARENTS' BENEFIT

New things in the old job of learning how to read and write and do arithmetic will be explained to parents of the 1,500 pupils of Sumner school, 715 South Kildare avenue, on Thursday evening. From 9 o'clock in the morning until 3 o'clock in the afternoon there will be open house at the school with Amerigo R. Sansone, principal, as host.

Amerigo R. Sansone.

Pupils and teachers will demonstrate the use of the radio, the recording machine and sound pictures as teaching aids in modern education. Dr. Grace Munson, director of the Bureau of Child Study, will address the school members and guests.

Parents are invited especially to visit the rooms known as the "open window" classes. These cater to three groups of pupils, the children with heart ailments, the underweights and those who cannot stand the strain of uninterrupted classes without a rest period. A physician from the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium watches these children.

RIVER FOREST ORDERS DESIGNS FOR FIREHOUSE

Authorization for the village engineer to proceed with designs for a new fire house recently was approved by the River Forest board of trustees. Previously, the plan had been approved at a meeting attended by heads of local civic, social, religious, and educational groups.

Looking into the future, the board also authorized the village architect to draw plans for a municipal center, the new fire station to be a part of the complete project. The plans will be used whenever additional building is carried out.

Altho it was within the rights of the village board to take such action as it saw fit in the matter of a new municipal building, President John Brink favored the public meeting for the expression of sentiment on the part of villagers.

Plans call for a fire station to be built on the present site, costing $22,000, two stories high and of steel and concrete construction. On the second floor an apartment for the fire chief and exercise room for the men is provided.

President Brink said no money would have to be borrowed as there are sufficient funds on hand to take care of the project.

Downers Grove Play.

The Little Theater group of Downers Grove will present "Three Cornered Moon" Friday and Saturday nights. Bernard Corson is director.

Citizens' Rally Salutes Wells High for Week

Students of one of Chicago's youngest public high schools, Wells, located at 936 North Ashland avenue, will be guests Wednesday night at the fourth of a weekly series of radio half hour programs entitled "Citizens of Tomorrow," heard on W-G-N and sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. The program starts at 7 o'clock. Six hundred students and their principal, Dr. Paul R. Pierce, will attend the entertainment in the audience studio of W-G-N. Forty vocalists from the choral department, directed by Mrs. Myra Cook, will sing.

Dr. Paul R. Pierce.

The appearance of Wells High school will follow the debut of Lake View, Austin, and Parker on W-G-N. Next week Steinmetz will take over the half hour program. As special guests Wednesday night, "Charlie Jones," the school engineer of the "Citizens of Tomorrow" cast, has invited the school engineer-custodians of the 39 high schools in Chicago.

Jerry to Have Guests.

At their head is John Howatt, chief engineer of the Chicago board of education, who will be introduced by Philip Maxwell of THE TRIBUNE's editorial staff, who plays the rôle of "The Principal."

"Jerry" Gregory, the 16 year old senior of all Chicagoland high schools, will be back on the program after her turning the tables last week on Mr. Maxwell in a "news quiz" which also stumped the announcer of the broadcast, Pierre Andre. "Jerry," who in real life attends Maine Township High school, has quite a time attending rehearsals and keeping up her high grades which have marked her as an outstanding student. In her honor 30 students from Maine High with their dean, Einar J. Anderson, will attend the broadcast.

Honor Roll Students.

Assisting in the preparation of the script for the broadcast is Miss Lillian Novotny, the school's radio chairman and teacher of English.

On each Wednesday night's program several Chicagoland students who have achieved success in their work are mentioned by Mr. Maxwell.

Each Wednesday night after the broadcast the guests are shown the talking movie film, "Trees to Tribunes," and then a smaller group is taken on a tour of Tribune Tower. Most of these students are from classes in journalism. Coöperating each week with THE TRIBUNE in the presentation of "Citizens of Tomorrow" are the music and radio departments of the Chicago public schools.

90 CLUBS TO AID IN ASSEMBLING SPRING BLOOMS

Seek Blossoms from Every Grower.

What is the best way to cut lilac blossoms to prevent injury to the bushes? How can cut flowers be treated to delay their wilting? These questions are answered in a story and picture on page 4.

BY HOMER NIESZ.

While cool weather last week was further retarding the opening of lilac flowering buds in Chicagoland, officials of the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild furthered plans to distribute the blooms to sick and shut-ins in the city's hospitals in the twelfth annual "Share Your Lilacs" campaign.

The guild and THE TRIBUNE cooperate each year with lilac growers in sharing the lilac blossoms with the sick. Last year the bouquets were taken to 147 hospitals, settlement houses, old people's homes, and other institutions, caring for more than 22,000 patients.

Guild officials last week appointed committees to work with 90 community and garden clubs in the Chicago flower area in gathering the lilacs and loading them on suburban trains for free transportation to the city. The clubs have more than 2,000 members.

Will Meet Tuesday.

The guild committees of the garden clubs and the club presidents are to meet at luncheon Tuesday noon in Carson, Pirie, Scott tearoom to complete their organization for lilac day and to plan distribution of fruits and flowers to charity patients thruout the summer. It is only on lilac days that the guild attempts to take bouquets to all hospitals in the city.

The date for gathering and distributing the lilacs will be announced as soon as officials can determine when most of the blooms will be open. Theodore V. Purcell of Evanston, president of the guild, said yesterday the date likely would be later than usual because of the retarded spring season. Most years the blossoms are ready to cut around the middle of May.

Mr. Purcell said that, as in other years, all who have lilac bushes, whether few or many, are invited to use the guild's organization in sharing the blooms with the sick. Guild committees of garden clubs will supervise the assembling of the flowers at suburban railroad stations. Trains will bring them free to stations in the city where fleets of Tribune trucks will pick them up and take them to hospitals.

Mrs. Stanley D. Grace of Highland Park is chairman of the guild's general committee that will direct the work this year. She formerly was a division chairman in charge of the northern Milwaukee division of the Northwestern railroad area. Her work as division chairman has been assigned to Mrs. Warner K. Nelson of Glencoe.

Working under various divisions chairmen are guild chairmen of the garden clubs. A few of these still are to be selected. Names and addresses of club presidents and guild chairmen in this area are:

INVALID ENJOYS KITES.

Could you imagine how a kite contest could help an old lady? Well, it has. Twelve years ago I broke my hip and my days are spent by a window watching the seasons go by. Last week spring came. Some loud boys heralded it with lusty yells. They started down the sidewalk on the run, their kites caught the wind and rose with it high into the blue sky.

I forgot my broken hip and I ran with them. The kites dipped and swayed and bobbed their tails. One ended its high career ignominiously held tight by a grasping tree branch. When the night wind blew the kites out of the sky and the boys went home to supper, I came home to my wheel chair ready for a nap. MARIA.

PRAISES SCHOOL DANCE CLASSES.

My son is at the awkward age. He's mostly feet and hands and complexes. The sidewalks rise up to trip him and girls giggle at his gauche errors. But he goes to Marshall High school and not so long ago the school organized some dancing classes for boys. The gym instructor taught them.

Already I notice a difference in my son. He is yet no Pavlova but living is not quite so painful. When some one looks at him, it is not like a bullet wound. He's learning to walk among men and women by learning to dance. I can't thank Marshall teachers enough.

AN ADOLESCENT'S MOTHER.

FAST TRAFFIC IN PARKS.

Does life have to move so fast that boulevards must run thru the parks? Parks ought to have just walking paths and safe streets in which the motorist looks out for the child.

I am against directing traffic thru the tax paid parks. We want to enjoy a small corner of them. I wouldn't dare try to cross the thru boulevards in Garfield park because I don't want to commit suicide. MRS. P. D.

OAK PARK PUBLIC LIBRARY BRANCH HAS NEW HOME

Reception to Be Held Friday Evening.

The north branch of the Oak Park Public library was moved last week from a crowded storeroom at 208 Chicago avenue into new quarters on Augusta boulevard between Cuyler and Harvey avenues. Public inspection of the library will be held from 8 o'clock until 10 o'clock Friday evening.

Village officials and the donors of the building, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Dole, will be in the receiving line. The building was erected as the North Congregational church and later was used by Oak Park Junior college.

Miss Nancy Donaldson is librarian of the north branch, which had 9,000 volumes in the small storeroom. There was no space for a children's room, a storage or a mending room.

Presented to Village.

The former college building was purchased several months ago and presented to the village by Mr. and Mrs. Dole. The Doles stated that their gift should be used for either recreational or library purposes.

The library board was assisted in paying for the cost of remodeling by Mr. and Mrs. Dole. The large room on the east, which was once the college auditorium, is the adult reading room. To the rear of this room, facing west, is the children's room, with a large fireplace and wide windows looking out over a garden.

Off the adult room is the mending, binding, and storage room. There is also space for expansion later. The third floor will be shut off until more facilities are needed.

New Light Fixtures.

The heating plant has been repaired and all new lighting fixtures installed. New furniture was purchased for the children's room, for which a color scheme in pastel shades was selected.

W. H. Dangel is president of the library board and Samuel E. Bird is the architect in charge of alterations. It has been necessary to add a number of partitions and to enlarge the opening between the adult and children's rooms.

Placement of furniture and shelves was under the general direction of Miss Elsie McKay, head librarian, and Miss Margaret Chouffet, assistant.

CHICAGO GREEKS TO BEGIN RITES OF HOLY WEEK

Colorful Parade Is Set for Friday Night.

Today is Palm Sunday and next Sunday is Easter for a small sector of the west side. At Holy Trinity church, 1101 South Peoria street, the oldest Greek Orthodox church in Chicago and the second oldest in the United States, preparations are being made for Holy Week.

Following a route from the church to Taylor street, along Taylor to Harsted and north on Halsted to Harrison, there will be a parade Friday evening formed by some 1,000 members of Holy Trinity.

Along with them will be some 8,000 others who abide by the Julian calendar in choosing their Easter or who come out of curiosity. They will solemnly bear thru the streets the "Epitaphos," representing the body of Jesus, while the band plays funeral marches.

Candles in Windows.

For the last 43 years this sacred procession has followed a route marked by candles burning in the windows of Greek-American homes and business houses. Every year the parade has stopped three times in the same places, once in front of Andrew Spyropoulos' restaurant, once at Blue Island and Harrison, and once at Hull House. Every year Hull House has been blessed by the Greek-American men, women, and children which it has served.

Behind the "Epitaphos" there are boys or young men of Holy Trinity bearing a huge wood carving of Christ on the cross. The parade starts from the church after the special Good Friday service and continues for several hours.

Peter Malakate, a secretary of the Association of the Greek Community of Chicago, tells of a strange phenomenon. He says: "In 20 years not a drop of rain has fallen during the parade. It has rained before and after but the sky has been clear while the procession prayed in the streets."

Church Stands Alone.

Holy Trinity is the only Greek Orthodox church in Chicago that follows the custom of every village, town, and city in Greece of having a Good Friday parade. The nine other Chicago church memberships of this faith walk with Holy Trinity members.

At midnight Saturday every Greek Orthodox family will have a celebration at home. Easter eggs colored red will be given to friends and exchanged within the family. A pot of egg soup will be served. The traditional dish for the Greek Easter dinner is barbecued lamb.

The Rev. Averkios Demakopoulos is priest in charge of Holy Trinity and will lead the parade. Arrangements for the celebration are being made by Dr. George Karaflos, president of the Association of the Greek Community. Other officers are, in addition to Mr. Malakate, Peter Bougas, vice president; Aristatales Damianos, secretary, and George Koutsopanagos, treasurer.

List of Trustees.

The Association of Greek Community serves as an advisory board for Holy Trinity church and Socrates school, 742 South Ada street. The school, which is the oldest of its kind in Chicago, has a full elementary course and an enrollment of 350 children. Pentiles Papardes is principal. Many Greek-Americans who have been successful in professions, politics, and business remember their school days at Socrates.

Holy Trinity was organized in 1897 by the early Greek immigrants who came mostly from Sparta and Tripoli and brought their culture and customs to their new home. The first place of worship was a hall on Randolph street.

WOMAN DRIVES TO PAY DEBT ON VILLAGE CENTER

Major Aim of Citizens' Group Leader.

Lifting the mortgage from the community house has become the major objective of Mrs. Edith Hyler, first woman to be elected president of the Hollywood Citizens' association since its organization more than 20 years ago.

Mrs. Edith Hyler.

The community house was erected in 1920 and was made possible by a gift of $15,000 from Mrs. Avery Coonley. However, a structure costing $3,500 more was decided upon, and a mortgage was arranged to care for the balance. This balance has provided a problem thru the years.

Aimed to Pay Debt.

A year ago, when Mrs. Hyler was elected a member of the board, she became active with other board members—Lester Moore, Carl Altheide, and Clyde McPhee—and assisted by Ralph Hoyt, in an effort to reduce the $1,700 debt remaining against the property. Thru subscriptions from villagers $250 was raised.

At the recent annual meeting, the retiring board members were given a vote of thanks for their year's work which also included renovation of the building. Mrs. Hyler was chosen president, Lester Moore, vice president and house chairman; Miles Cunat, secretary, and Wendell Carrothers, treasurer.

As a result of a lively discussion, it was decided to change the name of the organization to the Hollywood Community association, inasmuch as the main objective is that of owning, managing, and improving the community house property.

Board Members Named.

Board members elected by what is termed an association of clubs were Clayton Zimmerman, representing the Hollywood Community church; Wendell Carrothers, the You Mar club; Mrs. Olga Manley, the Hollywood P.-T. A.; Mrs. Edith Hyler, Hollywood Woman's club; Alfred Pusch, Hollywood Boosters; Mrs. Gladys Haugseth, Campfire Girls; Miss Pearl Jacobsen, Hollywood Junior Woman's club; Lester Moore and Miles Cunat, Hollywood Citizens' association.

"We are determined," said Mrs. Hyler, "not only to lift the mortgage but adopt a policy that will prevent incurring new indebtedness."

LIQUID PLANT FOOD
During its first month Spring has stayed locked in Winter's grip. A whole month of plant growth has been lost — but it's not too late! Start using Kem right now — today! — on your lawn and garden. With 3 applications they'll make up for lost weeks and head for record growth!
Kem is a complete plant food, containing every needed mineral . . . in proper proportion and in liquid form permitting immediate absorption. Kem is a food (not a fertilizer, not a tonic). It promotes sure, steady, balanced, rapid growth.
Kem-fed plants manufacture their own vitamins. They grow anywhere—in soil or without soil. They survive transplanting and weather whims with ease. Thick, Kem-fed grass crowds out weeds.

MODERN DUPLEX HOUSE CONCEALS TRUE IDENTITY

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Just before spring came, a bit reluctantly, from around the corner this year, Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Woods moved into their new home at 6026 Bloomingdale avenue. At approximately the same time their aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. De Perro, moved into their new home at 6028 Bloomingdale.

As it happens, the two residences are under one roof, for the dwelling is a duplex town house, and a very good looking house, we can honestly say

The architect, Martin H. Braun, 1827 North McVicker avenue, has carried out the exterior walls in brick; tan and brown shades predominate, and the exterior trim, windows and doors have been painted an off white.

Advantages Are Told.

There are many definite assets to the modern duplex town house. Economy of land is one. And there is the impression of greater size since two small homes under one roof seem larger than a one size home of the same cubic content. Then, too, with a finely designed duplex on a 50 foot lot, each occupant pays for only 25 feet, is taxed for only 25 feet, and yet has the enjoyment of wide front and back lawns.

This is a home where every square foot of the interior has been made to give an excellent account of itself.

Mrs. Woods showed me thru her home the day I visited the duplex. She is a young woman who has every reason to be proud of her house. There are many interesting features upstairs and down, and Mrs. Woods has given the interior an atmosphere of unusual appeal.

Closet Near Door.

As you enter the hallway you see a convenient guest closet directly opposite the entrance door, and at the left there is the living room, with dining room beyond and an arch between.

The living room walls have been painted and stippled an off peach, while the dining room is papered, and the oak floors have a fine, natural finish.

The kitchen walls are painted an off white, and combine happily with white cabinets and blue linoleum top and blue linoleum floor. The breakfast set is carried out in lively red tones. And the cabinet spaces are a joy to behold—and to use.

Glass Block Over Tub.

There are Venetian blinds at all the windows and glass block has been used at several strategic points, including a panel over the tub in the bathroom.

Halfway up the stairs which lead to the second floor there are the electric door chimes, recessed in the wall. And at the right a cozy studio den, which is placed over the garage. This room could be used as a bedroom equally well. And it has the advantage of closet space which runs the entire width of the room.

Half a flight farther up is the second floor, with its two bedrooms and bath.

The master bedroom has an attractive small alcove corner and its walls have an unusual treatment.

SCHOOL LEADERS READY TO HOLD MEETING FRIDAY

National College of Education in Evanston will be host to 100 school administrators from the middle west at an all-day meeting Friday. This is the sixth year that superintendents, principals and supervisors have met at the college to discuss education problems of mutual interest. Miss Edna Dean Baker is president of the college.

The principal address will be made by Charles C. Stadtman, first assistant to the superintendent of public instruction in Springfield. He will speak after luncheon on "Organizing the School Program to Promote Child Development." Among the leaders of discussion groups will be David Walker, district 76 superintendent in Evanston; Lester Ball, Deerfield superintendent, and Miss Ethel Kawin, director of guidance in the Glencoe schools.

In the morning the executives will visit the college children's school and the reading clinic. A program will be planned for wives accompanying the superintendents.

Double Feature Town House

The handsome new duplex town home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Woods and Mr. and Mrs. DePerro at 6026 and 6028 Bloomingdale avenue. There are many interesting features to this two family dwelling, not the least a study den over each garage. The exterior walls are of brick in shades of tan and deep brown. Architect, Martin H. Braun, 1827 North McVicker avenue, Chicago.

LOVE FOR LILACS IS A TRADITION OF AMERICAN LIFE

Sprouts Came West in Covered Wagons.

Man's love for the lilac has been reflected in every step in the development of America. The Morton arboretum has traced the spread of the flower from the days it was brought to New England by the colonists.

The Arboretum reports that "a few carefully protected lilac sprouts were usually tucked away somewhere in the covered wagons of these pioneers as they set out to conquer the wildernesses of the west. Even today one may recognize old home sites by the remaining lilac clumps which still guard forgotten doorways."

Bushes Bloom Profusely.

The lilac has been found to be exceedingly tolerant of soils and exposures. It blooms profusely in the Chicagoland setting. Yet, if future flowering is to be considered there are certain simple rules to be followed.

At the arboretum, where there are 251 varieties of the blossom in all shades from deep purple and white to pink, these suggestions were made to home gardeners planning to participate in the Share Your Lilacs campaign sponsored by the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild, and THE TRIBUNE:

Don't break off the blossoms. It is advisable to use pruning shears or a sharp knife in cutting lilacs for bouquets.

Cut Close to Stem.

Cut as close to the main stem as possible so as to permit quick healing.

Do not cut promiscuously, damaging the symmetry of the bush. The blossoms should be cut in late evening, or early morning before the sun is up. Place them in cold water in a cool place over night.

It is possible to offset wilting by cutting away some of the leaves, thus reducing the amount of evaporating surface.

Proper cutting of blossoms is not injurious to the bush and does not affect its future productiveness.

Authorities point out that pruning in winter or spring delays a large part of the flower buds. It is explained that lilacs need pruning only to cut out dead or diseased wood, or renew old plants.

Asked the common question, "What is the best variety to plant?" an authority once answered: "The best 12 are any 12 which are most pleasing to you."

While it may be said that the lilac is tolerant of soils and exposures, the collection at the Morton arboretum was shifted four times in attaining the best results.

Wed 50 Years

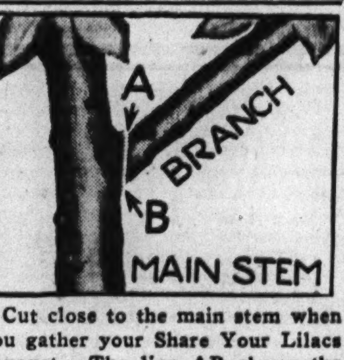
Sons and daughters of the couple are Frank Farrell, 5425 South Sawyer avenue; Patrick Farrell, John Farrell and Miss Alice Farrell, 1047 South Harlem avenue, Forest Park, and Mrs. Frank R. Leonardi, 644 Circle avenue, Forest Park. There are six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

P.-T. A. of Sumner School Elects Its Official Staff

Officers were elected at a recent meeting of the P.-T. A. of the Sumner school, 715 South Kildare avenue. They are Mrs. Louis L. Daniels, president; Mrs. J. V. Luppeno, vice president; Mrs. Harry Rose, recording secretary; Mrs. Nathan Fink, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Ben Osten, treasurer.

Gathering Lilacs



Cut close to the main stem when you gather your Share Your Lilacs bouquet. The line AB shows the correct method and it is best if point B is slightly closer to the stem than point A. Use pruning shears or sharp knife.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, April 22.

Without suitable soil, plants will not do well; poor soil must be corrected by adding plant food and humus. Humus improves the soil, holds moisture, aids in the manufacture of plant fod, and provides the best conditions for plant growth. Wherever there is room for a compost heap it should be kept going at all times. Every scrap of grass, clippings, manures, soft weeds, etc., should be put in the compost.

Tuesday, April 23.

Some annuals may be grown in a shady part of the garden, if the shade is not too dense. These include the aster, forget-me-not, hemophila, pansy, snapdragon, wishbone plant or torenia, sweet alyssum, and monkey flower. It is late to sow pansy seed, but short, stock plants can be obtained easily from supply houses. Seedlings raised in boxes are greatly benefited by transplanting at least once. Use annual vines wherever they can be used for they grow rapidly, cover unsightly objects or hide poor views if given some support, and they add much to the appearance of any place. The monvine is one of the best. Pot plants can be purchased. The hyacinth bean has large purplish beans and does well on the wire fence. Morning glories, cypress vine, scarlet runner, balsam apple, and cardinal flower all have a place. Sweet peas are best grown in full sun and supported with wire or brush.

Wednesday, April 24.

Fast growing annuals that require little attention include the alyssum, cosmos, marigold, larkspur, candytuft, nasturtium, mourning bride, pot marigold, and bachelor buttons. Keep all withered flowers removed to prevent formation of seed. Plant more of the graceful grasses for bouquets. They include cloud grass, quaking grass, Job's tears, fountain grass, and ruppeli. All of these are easily grown and do best in full sun. A group in perennial borders looks well.

Thursday, April 25.

A good soil for most plants consists of about one-half loamy garden soil, one-quarter rooted leafmold, some decomposed cow manure, and one-quarter sand. If the manure is unavailable, a four inch pot of high grade complete commercial fertilizer mixed with each wheelbarrow of soil is excellent. Do not put small plants in large pot; wait until the roots touch the sides of the pots and then shift.

Friday, April 26.

Gardeners who expect to plant a new perennial garden this spring should see that the soil is well prepared because of the permanent nature of the plants. Dig the soil to a depth of a foot or more and work in a complete commercial plant food; well decayed manures can be used if they are available. Perennials delight in a deep, well drained location. The first year a few plants should be purchased and seeds of other kinds sown. Sowing seeds in April or May will give good plants that can be transplanted to permanent beds next fall. Seedlings should be transplanted by late June.

Saturday, April 27.

Most perennials can be propagated by dividing the roots in early spring. Others can be increased by root cuttings taken during the middle to late summer. When a young tree is planted see that it has a guard to prevent injury from children or from the lawn mower. An injury to the trunk should be repaired immediately by cutting out all mutilated sections to the cambium and painting with coal tar. When ordering a tree for the yard select one with a straight trunk, without a crotch.

[Prepared in coöperation with Garfield park conservatory.]

BLIND HERSELF, SHE PLANS TALK ON BLIND AUTHOR

Mrs. Amy Hood to Review Book for Club.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

In consenting to give a book review tomorrow night before the friends of the library group meeting in the Brookfield library, Mrs. Amy K. Hood, a resident of the suburb, will undertake a new venture for her. Mrs. Hood is blind.

Mrs. Amy K. Hood.

Recently, Mrs. Fredricka Wiley, librarian, received the book, "I Begin Again," by Alice Bretz of New York City. Knowing Mrs. Hood, the librarian was impressed by the similarity of the author's biography and what she knew of the Brookfield woman's philosophy and experience. To both, blindness came suddenly in adult life.

Mrs. Hood had good sight until seven years ago. For 18 years she was a resident of Western Springs where she was active in the sixth district club federation, particularly at its conferences. She has retained her interest in club work and has spoken at meetings in recent years, but has neved attempted a book review.

Has New Judgment.

Having familiarized herself with Braille, Mrs. Hood has gathered notes from "I Begin Again" as read aloud by her son, Robert, altho she plans to speak extemporaneously.

"Mrs. Bretz and I agree except on one thing," said Mrs. Hood. "She terms sight as queen of the senses. When she says that blind persons do not have a sixth sense I agree, but when she says the loss of sight dulls the other senses I do not agree. Otherwise, we are very much in accord."

Mrs. Bretz lost only her sight, but Mrs. Hood also lost use of her right hand and hearing in her right ear. But Mrs. Hood has lost none of her vibrant personality, her courage, and her background of culture and keen interest in the better things of life.

"One gets a new judgment on good writing," said Mrs. Hood. "You read Braille by syllable or, letter by letter, and in mentally pronouncing the words you get a beauty or note the lack of it that does not go with sight reading. Some authors lose out in the process and others gain in charm. Galsworthy is an example in which the style suffers."

Agrees on "Don'ts."

Mrs. Hood fully agrees with the "don'ts" in dealing with blind persons as gathered from Mrs. Bretz' book and other sources as well as from her own experience. They include:

"Don't consider a blind man an abnormal specimen of humanity. He's abnormal to the extent he has four instead of five senses, but still human.

"Don't address conversation to a third party, for his mentality is quite able to answer for himself.

"Dont consider blindness an affliction. A handicap, yes, but a development of latent powers."

Mrs. Hood said that before losing her sight she had always enjoyed studying faces, but had found as much character expressed in the voice as in a face.

Chooses Her Clothes.

She enjoys movies, and is quite capable of making a choice of hats and dresses on shopping tours. She prefers to take her companion's arm rather than being guided by the arm of another, and she says it is a great help when the companion states the number of steps to be descended.

Mrs. Hood has two favorite quotations: "To what one is alive, akin, so flows one's life," and courage is fear that has said its prayer."

"One doesn't learn to do new things," she explained, "but a new way to do old things."

News and Queries Within and Without the Church
A Religious Voice of the People — Edited by the Rev. John Evans

". . . Before criticizing your wife's faults remember that it may have been those very defects which prevented her from catching a better husband."

Dr. Oswald W. S. McCall.

That is the warning of Dr. Oswald W. S. McCall, pastor of New First Congregational church, Ashland avenue and Washington boulevard, as, in a new pastor's journal, Sermons in Brief, published in New York, he argues that phobias, neuroses, psychiatrists, and psychologists can be forgotten in face of plain questions, such as:

"Should the husband rule in the home, or should the wife?

"If you wish an answer to such a tormenting question—or is it an entertaining question?—to come from actual case histories as our useful fashion now is, here's one: 'Before he was married he assured his friends he would be the boss in his own house or know the reason why. Now he knows the reason why.'"

The McCall contribution, called "Specters of the Mind," deals with religion's answer to phobias, neuroses, and the multitude of authors on morbid psychology who write in learned terms when, as Dr. McCall suggests, plain words may be better. The Chicago pastor is in good company in the magazine—Karl Barth, Archbishop Spellman, Archbishop Temple of York, Rabbi Wolsey, Muriel Lester, Archbishop Glennon, and Bishop Manning!

Sermons in Brief is edited monthly by friend Herbert H. Rugg.

When the Rev. E. M. Hegge of Oak Park Norwegian Lutheran church speaks this morning on the subject "Humanity's Archenemy—War!" he will speak out of experience. A world war veteran, in 1924-'27 he was a war correspondent in China for Peking and Hankow newspapers. Special prayers for Scandinavia this morning also.

W-G-N PROGRAM REVEALS YOUTH'S HOPE, STRENGTH

Tribune Via Air Salutes 'Citizens of Tomorrow.'

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

As a salute to youth's promise and accomplishment and to its high destiny under the American way, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE each Wednesday evening presents the program, "Citizens of Tomorrow," over W-G-N.

It is well worth a half hour's pause to watch this procession of youth passing thru the portals of W-G-N. For here one obtains a brief preview of the future of democracy. That glimpse is full of hope.

The manner of presenting "Citizens of Tomorrow" is in itself strictly in the democratic tradition. For this program is an anomaly in educational broadcasting—an informative and entertaining program that delights the boy and girl as well as parents and teachers and the countless others who listen to it. Too often radio programs that suit parents and educators are ignored by youth. The converse is true, too. Mothers and fathers are not always pleased with the radio preferences of their offspring.

To make "Citizens of Tomorrow" the success it is, high school students give their best; they set the pace for the show—and it is a show—and they flavor it with their rousing yells, their fine choral singing, their lively contributions to THE TRIBUNE news quiz, and their reverberating applause—with a higher decibel rating than many sponsored network productions are accorded. They have embraced it as their own show.

The fullest coöperation is given, too, by the public school system. The Chicago board of education lends its full support to the broadcasts. Valuable aid and advice is given in preparing the programs by the radio council of the board of education, directed by Harold Kent, and by the department of music, under the direction of Miss Helen Howe.

The contributions of the youngsters and of their teachers are deftly welded into a finished production by skilled writers, producers, and performers of W-G-N. The result: A weekly program that is educational, stimulating, inspiring—that reflects democracy at its best.

A Glimpse of Young America.

A visit to a broadcast of "Citizens of Tomorrow" provides a fine opportunity to observe Young America at close range. As 600 boys and girls from Parker High school—probably a good cross-section of the youth of the nation—poured into W-G-N's spacious audience studio last Wednesday, certain qualities stood out.

These youngsters are wholesome, hearty, and hardy. Vitality, health, exuberance, enthusiasm, eagerness, hope, confidence, and strength! These are but a few of the qualities brought to mind as they overflowed the big auditorium.

Chicago's youth is not regimented. Youngsters appear to be far more individualistic than their elders. That seems to apply particularly with regard to dress and manner. These high school folk wear an astonishing variety of clothes, with comfort and color competing as the keynotes. Footgear alone runs the gamut from Mexican huaraches and "wedgies" to patent pumps with high heels. The girls wear all manner of anklet socks, silk hose—or both.

They Are Democratic.

As they scramble for seats a minor uproar fills the studio. They make full use of the right of free speech and assembly. With regard to the latter it takes the form of trying to save seats for their late-arriving friends. With regard to the former, one hears from a husky lad such expressions as "Hey, good looking—you with the mirror—how about moving over a notch so we can sit down?"

These boys and girls are decidedly democratic. Already they reveal many potentialities of good citizenship. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools, touched on this point the other evening when he was a guest at the broadcast. He remarked about their willingness to serve and their capacity for enjoying friendship and fellowship with others thru sharing common privileges and responsibilities.

"You young people," he said, "can and do participate in your American citizenship long before you are eligible to vote. Ever since you started school you have been learning to work and play with your classmates and to contribute your best to group activities." These experiences in school he said, represent the best possible preparation for democratic living.

Understands School Youth.

"Citizens of Tomorrow" derives much of its success thru the enthusiasm and experience of Philip Maxwell, member of THE TRIBUNE staff and the master of ceremonies, who plays the rôle of the principal. Mr. Maxwell is director of the Chicagoland Music Festival. He knows and understands the high school youth. Each fall he addresses some 50,000 of them at school assemblies in connection with THE TRIBUNE'S R. O. T. C. awards. Out of this experience grew the "Citizens of Tomorrow" program which reaches out by radio to high school students everywhere thruout Chicagoland.

In recognition of the achievements of out of the city students, tributes are paid each week to five boys and girls in the five Chicagoland states who have already made their marks in leadership, scholarship, character, and service. Those saluted are selected by their high school principals in coöperation with local correspondents of THE TRIBUNE.

Quiz Arouses Applause.

Announcer Pierre Andre keeps the showing moving right along; Blair Walliser is the efficient director; Francis Coughlin does the smooth writing job, and Harold Turner is ever ready at the piano to furnish what is needed in the way of music.

THE TRIBUNE news quiz arouses plenty of spontaneous applause as six classmates, picked at random from the audience, fight it out for cash and glory. Those who survive the quiz-down get $5 each. There were three such winners for Parker last Wednesday, to the delight of Miss Nellie Quinn, the Parker principal. Answers of the youngsters indicate a good reading acquaintance with THE TRIBUNE. One girl raised a great cheer by correctly answering a Golden Gloves question—just to cite one example.

The demand for tickets far exceeds the number available each week. At some high schools 2,000 have requested tickets; only 600 can be accommodated. Others hear the show in their own living rooms. After the broadcast the motion picture "Trees to Tribunes," telling the story of the making of tomorrow's newspaper, is shown. And then 100 selected students—usually those enrolled in journalism courses—are taken on a tour of THE TRIBUNE'S plant.

Three performances of "Citizens of Tomorrow" have been given. Eight more are scheduled prior to the end of the school year.

You're missing something if you aren't listening!

In "Career in Matrimony" Clark and Miss Gear will play the parts of a married couple of the theater. They decide to separate, but their careers bring them together again, thru a maze of complications.

Without His Teammate.

Bobby Clark is now making his second solo starring appearance. For three decades he was teamed with the late Paul McCullough.

DR. NORMAN NASH TO BE SUNDAY EVENING SPEAKER

Dr. Norman B. Nash will speak on "Ambition or Devotion" on the Chicago Sunday Evening club broadcast over WIND from 8:15 to 9 tonight. Dr. Nash, who is the successor to Dr. Samuel S. Drury as rector of St. Paul's school in Concord, N. H., was born in Maine and educated at Harvard and Cambridge.

Music by the club's choir of 125 voices will be a feature of this meeting. Under the direction of Edgar Nelson they will sing selections by Gounod, DeLamarter, and Shelley. Stainer's "Love Divine" will be sung by Mary Ann Kaufman and Virginia Auyer.

Tony Wons to Be Guest on Becker Program Today

When Bob Becker goes on W-G-N at 1:45 p. m. today, radio listeners are in for a treat. Two notables will appear as Becker's guests. They are Tony Wons, poet, philosopher, and dog lover, whose radio scrapbook has made him one of radio's best known stars, and Michael von Motzeck, dog trainer and conditioner. Becker's Chats About Dogs rounds up its current spring series today.

CARTERS' TALENT HUNT IS NO SEARCH FOR ANOTHER OOMPH GIRL

Sponsors of the Carters of Elm Street, who are conducting a talent search thru W-G-N and 84 other Mutual stations, have announced that they are not necessarily seeking an oomph girl or a grandmother. [There are to be two winners—one between 15 and 25 and one over 25.]

Parts are to be written into the script to fit the talents, the acting ability, and the personality of the two winners. The winners are to get contracts for two weeks each at $112.50 a week with all expenses paid while in Chicago.

The search started on April 15 with local auditions to be held in each of the 85 cities and towns carrying the "Carters" program. Then, recordings of the voices of the local winners will go to regional centers, and those of the regional winners will go to Chicago for the national selections. Chairman of the national judges' committee will be Virginia Payne, who plays the starring rôle of "Carrie Carter" on the "Carters" program. One of the other judges will be one of the nation's outstanding motion picture talent scouts.

HOW TO LISTEN TO POLITICIANS, RADIO SUBJECT

Lee and MacDougall will utilize listeners' opinions on the question "When you listen to political speeches, how do you decide what is honest fact and accurate opinion?" as a springboard for suggestions concerning more intelligent listening to political speeches.

As semanticists they will warn against emotionally charged political speeches, and will present what they believe is an effective attitude for the citizen to assume in sifting fact from fancy during the campaign.

MacDougall is professor in the Medill School of Journalism of Northwestern university. Lee is a professor in public speaking and a special lecturer on semantics.

JEWS' PASSOVER WILL BEGIN AT EVE TOMORROW

Synagogues Again Will Welcome Throngs.

Tons of unleavened bread have been baked on the west side in obedience to Biblical command. It is in readiness for the area's 150,000 Jews who will sit down tomorrow evening to their Passover banquet, holding to a tradition 43 centuries old.

At sunset the eight day Passover holiday will begin and men, women, and children will crowd their synagogues to hear chanted the story of the children of Israel delivered from slavery in Egypt.

In remembrance of the trek thru the wilderness led by Moses toward the Promised land, sons, daughters, and grandchildren will travel from other cities to their father's home for the seder, the Passover feast.

Four Cups of Wine.

The feast will be held after the synagogue service when every member of the family will drink four cups of wine and every youngest child will ask of the eldest four questions. This they do in remembrance of the four divine signs received by Moses before the Exodus.

Services will be chanted thru the eight holidays in all orthodox synagogues at 8 o'clock in the morning and at sunset. The seventh day of the Passover will be the time for memorial services to deceased members in the family.

During the four intermediate days of the celebration, the 20 west side Talmud Torahs, religious schools, will be opened for registration. Some 2,000 children are expected to begin a new term of study during the Passover. The general theme of lectures, talks, the sermons will be "New Pharoahs Who Crush the Jews."

Cantors will chant the religious stories during the holiday services. One guest cantor, Louis Glantz from New York, will be at Knesses Israel Nusach Sfard, 1308 Independence boulevard. Rabbi David Kaminker is the spiritual head.

The volume, the result of research and effort by Henry M. Larsen, post historian, is being distributed to the 529 members of the organization and to thousands of other supporters thruout the country. The post has the unique distinction of having topped its previous annual membership record for 20 years in a row.

Among the listed achievements is the post's organization in 1927 of the La Grange Legion Sunday Evening club, bringing annually to La Grange world leaders in the fields of music, politics, exploration, education, and international affairs.

Helps Charity Fund.

Another civic contribution is the leadership furnished in creating the La Grange Community fund, now a model for village and smaller town philanthropic efforts thruout the middle west.

Starting 14 years ago the La Grange Legionnaires have awarded medals and honors to the outstanding graduates of the four public and three denominational schools of the community, supplementing this since 1937 with college scholarships to the outstanding graduates of Lyons Township High school.

In addition, the post for years has supported three Boy Scout and one Naval Scout unit; has sponsored the second largest Sons of the Legion squadron in Illinois, and has sent 10 youths annually to the Illinois Boy State at Springfield.

Aids Jobless in 1929.

Other achievements recalled by the history are La Grange post's organization in the dark days of 1929 of the first free employment bureau instituted by any veterans' group; its donation of the hundreds of American flags that form the inspiring flag way at Edward Hines Memorial hospital; its action over the years in furnishing millions of sheets of stationery and envelopes for the bedridden doughboys at Hines, and its prominent place in Legion athletic affairs.

The completed history recently was presented to La Grange post by its author, Henry M. Larsen, when he publicly delivered the first bound copy to J. Ben Field, the organization's 1940 commander. In attendance, among more than 200 other members of the post, were 15 of its 18 living past commanders.

DOWNERS GROVE CHURCHES TAKE VILLAGE CENSUS

Religious Survey Aids All Denominations.

This being census year for the government, churches in Downers Grove are planning to conduct their own census Tuesday, when a house to house canvass will be made of the entire village population.

Three questions will be asked:

Are you a member of a church in Downers Grove?

If not a member of a church, what is your church preference?

If a member of a church elsewhere, what is your local church preference?

The project is sponsored by the Ministerial union and representatives of coöperating churches. Members of the executive committee in charge are the Rev. Will L. Collin, president; Miss Lena Penner, secretary, and Valentine Claus, publicity.

The purpose of the census is not for church membership. Canvassers will not ask residents to change from one local church to another, nor will those who are not members of a church be solicited for church membership. The aim is to give the churches up-to-date information on the location of their members.

To carry out the census, the suburb has been organized into four divisions. The northwest division will include all territory north of the railroad and west of Main street, with Mrs. G. B. Brown as leader.

The northwest division will include all territory north of the railroad and east of Main street, with Mrs. Emerson Pugh in charge. The southwest division will include all territory south of the railroad and east of Main street, with Mrs. Amy B. Pirie in charge.

CHILDREN GROOM PETS FOR AUSTIN TRIPLE FEATURE

Hobbies will be displayed at the "Y" thru Sunday, and the pet show is scheduled for Saturday afternoon. Awards will be given for the best groomed, the best performing, the largest and smallest dogs. Pedigrees won't count in this show.

Saturday afternoon and Sunday evening the children will participate in an achievement show. There will be acrobatics, swing music, dancing, dramatic readers, vocal and instrumental musicians.

This week promotion committees, consisting of pupils from 16 public and parochial schools, will be appointed.

Schools represented are the Key, Byford, Young, Sayre, Lovett, Lewis, Hay, Howe, Nash, Spencer, Emmet, May, St. Lucy's, Resurrection, St. Paul's Lutheran, and Our Lady Help of Christians.

Harry J. Janson is hobby show chairman and Walter G. Wicklund is president of the Optimists. Members of the club's boys' work committee assisting Mr. Janson are Thomas B. Brown, Douglas, Monahan, Robert Horrocks, and Edward Rapp.

PARADE OF YOUTHS TO PROMOTE CLEANUP FOR GARFIELD PARK

More than one hundred Boy Scouts and seven schools will participate in the cleanup parade of the Garfield Park Business Men's association Thursday afternoon. The marchers will begin their mop and broom demonstration at Hamlin avenue and Madison street and will parade to Cicero avenue and back to Pulaski road and Madison.

Carl Stockholm.

Scouts in the parade are from 16 troops and 21 units in the Garfield park area. Each troop will carry its flag of identification in addition to American flags. School children will carry cleanup paraphernalia in a costume contest. Winners, the ones most cleverly arrayed in gingham aprons or overalls and armed with mops, brooms and cleaning tools, will be given merchandise prizes.

Carl Stockholm is president of the Garfield Park association. J. F. Conley, west side district scout executive, will assist in the drive. Others are T. H. Golightly, John F. Butler, and Walter J. Kelly, secretary of the association.

SCHOOL PUPILS TO FIGHT DIRT IN ANNUAL WAR

Spring Cleanup Is Due to Start Tomorrow.

A window box in every home and a garbage can in every backyard is part of the platform for thousands of west side school children in the 1940 Clean Up, Paint Up, Light Up campaign. A spring house cleaning drive from tomorrow thru May 4 will put dust cloths, mops, and paint brushes in busy hands.

The community service committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce and the Chicago board of education are making games, contests, and courses of study out of spring scrubbing time.

Projects range in scope from cleaning the forgotten apple cores from school lockers to dusting entire blocks of the community. Miss Ethel Foster, director of the community service committee, says: "The real goal of the clean up drive is good citizenship."

Girl Writes Slogan.

For the first time since the Chicago Clean Up Campaign league began in 1907 during the administration of Mayor Fred A. Busse, Chicago is using a slogan to focus city-wide attention on the spring drive of the year-round campaign.

The winning slogan in a contest conducted by the Association of Commerce was written by a west side girl, Irene Murdock, a senior at McKinley High school. Her slogan, which now appears on posters in store windows and on elevated platforms around the city, is "Team Up with Clean Up."

West side elementary school pupils who won honorable mention in the slogan contest are Aurora Corona, Dante school; William Clark, Grant school; Joe Anderson, Hayes school; Eddie Plonka, Syry school, and George Zak, Burns school. West side high school honorable mention winners are Harrison Tunstall and Evelyn Gay, Medill, and Ann Stachniak, Farragut.

Poster Contest Winner.

A northwest side girl won first award in the poster contest. She is Olga Martish of Schurz High school. The second award went to a west side boy, Albert Shemrinsky, Marshall High school.

The honorable mention posters were designed by the following west side students: Virginia Johnson, Flower; Stanley Mitrur, Harrison; Fred Berger, James J. Angarola, Herman Cohen, Irving Mark, Robert Saichek, and Raymond Sojovic, Marshall, and Willis Blackwell, Medill.

Student posters made by west side boys and girls who passed the preliminary judging committees were, in addition to the prize winners, those of George E. Diestel Jr. and George Hermach, Austin; Arthur Kasperski, Eleanor A. Jurca, and Virginia Louzensky, Farragut; Josephine Bullaro, Vera Golokowski, Daniel Kwasman, Rae Carasso, and Fannie Rosenstein, Manley; Lucy Del Ciello, Marshall; John Scotello, McKinley, and Isaac Green, Medill.

There is also competition in west side schools as to which student body will do the most for school and community beautifying.

Manley Again in Race.

Manley High school, 2935 Polk street, which has emerged after several year round clean up campaigns as the school with one of the most beautiful campuses on the west side, is again in the competition. This year Manley students have selected three blocks in three different wards to become model city blocks.

The students will interview the landlords and tenants, asking coöperation in making new lawns, building new fences or repairing the old ones. They will place window boxes and clean alleys. Elementary schools following the Manley plan are Chalmers, Ericsson, Lawson, Manley Elementary, Penn, and Shepard.

An organization called "The Green Hands" is making headway in McKinley High school, 2040 West Adams street. Boys and girls eligible for membership are those willing to plant green things. Posters announcing "Join the Green Hands" are appearing in the school corridors and thru the McKinley neighborhood. McKinley is also making a drive for a garbage can in every backyard.

Ask Clean Walks.

Calhoun school, 2850 West Jackson boulevard, is contacting storekeepers for coöperation in keeping front walks clean on the business streets. Students are also peering into alleys for rubbish and are writing essays on the topic "A Good Citizen Is Alert and Alive to Conditions Around Him."

Cameron school, 1234 North Monticello avenue, has a fernery project. Students are bringing plants for the ferneries and are placing hanging baskets in the school corridors.

An extensive survey is being made by Flower High school, 3545 Fulton boulevard, as to conditions of vacant property in the community. The girls will locate the owner of the property and offer to clean it for recreational purposes.

Flower school girls are being assisted by pupils from Cameron, Beidler, Morse, Ryerson, Tilton, and Sumner Elementary schools in the neighborhood. Officers of the general committee are Virginia Lee, Virginia Johnson, and Ora Spadafora.

The students have also taken down the soiled flags on the Flower's property and replaced them with new ones. In addition, there is a personal cleanliness campaign. Literature on the care of the finger nails, the hair, and the skin is being circulated thru the school. On Wednesday afternoon there will be a flower sale to raise money for the campaign.

ORT Dance Tonight.

The Chicago Junior American ORT will hold a dance this evening in the Gold Coast room of the Drake hotel. West side committee members are Ida Gollay, Gail Sanders, David Singer, and Florence Lieberman.

Fantasy and Skill to Lure Throngs.

What ar ounts to the Golden Gloves in the universal sport of kite flying will take place next Saturday morning in Grant park.

Three hundred and seventy-two semi-finals winners in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE kite contest will fly in the grand finals for the championship of Chicagoland. As in the Golden Gloves boxing tournaments, eight champions are to be crowned, one for each event.

Several thousand spectators are expected to gather at Hutchinson field near Balbo drive in Grant park to watch the 1940 championship finals. The contest, under co-sponsorship of the park district, will get under way at 10 o'clock in the morning. It is not expected to end before 1 o'clock. In the event of rain the grand finals will be held over to Saturday, May 4.

Each Makes Own Kite.

Spectators will see the city's most skillful kite flyers, boys and girls and adults, who have been selected from more than 5,000 preliminary contestants at local parks, and who have won in semi-finals held in six sections of the city. These contestants, who have been reduced to 372, are the most expert kite flyers in Chicagoland. Each has made his own kite, for the most part with materials furnished free in park district fieldhouses.

To the eight winners of the contest, will go eight loving cup trophies donated by THE TRIBUNE, as precious to kite flyers as the Golden Gloves insignias are to am eur boxers. Contestants will compete in artistic, novelty, solo box, messenger, mechanical winding, handwriting, strongest pulling, and largest kite events. To the runners-up and third, fourth, fifth, and sixth place winners, the park district will award ribbons.

More than a contest of skill, it will be a spectacle of color and creative ingenuity. Kites of all sizes and shapes will be dancing in the breeze at the ends of 75 yards of string, pirouetting and soaring before the judges.

Pinocchio and Gulliver.

There will be Pinocchio kites, kites depicting Gulliver's travels, huge tongued dragons, stately box kites, kites shaped like fish, stars and crescents, plain bow kites and Confucius kites blazoned with 1940 westernized orientalisms.

On the field a first aid station is to be set up for kites that are damaged in flight. Contestants will be able to repair their kites with equipment furnished by the park district.

F. E. Kardes, park district supervisor of crafts, will be contest director. S. J. Meuris is assistant director. R. V. Pierce wil judge the artistic, novelty, strongest pulling, and largest kite events. Other judges are Paul Tornheim, handwinding; Frank Nekimken, mechanical winding; O. C. Sonntag, solo box kite, and J. E. Rosich, E. D. Harris, and R. C. Mitchell, messenger event.

Not Yet 7, He's Veteran of 2 Voyages Alone

He grew two inches, lost two teeth, and forgot English. That is the summary of Gunnar Jenson's 19 month visit with his maternal and paternal grandparents in Skutskar, Sweden.

Gunnar Jenson.

Gunnar was born in Chicago Heights Sept. 20, 1933, the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Jenson. When he was 4 years old his parents decided to send him back to their native country so that his grandparents and other relatives might see him. A friend of theirs left for New York with the little boy on July 21, 1938. In New York the child was put aboard the Gripsholm in care of the nurse on the ship.

War Changes Plans.

He doesn't remember much about the trip over. He cried when his relatives met him at the boat, but, like a good little Viking, he soon did away with the tears and decided to enjoy himself.

He learned to chatter in Swedish, and he outgrew his clothes. His relatives made him small copies of Swedish sailors' suits. His parents planned to go to Sweden themselves this spring, but the war changed all that. They sent for their little boy, and once more Gunnar set sail all by himself.

His daddy met him in New York when the lad arrived on the boat, Drottholm, recently. Gunnar was shy; he'd forgotten his folks here. He was worried, too, about his grandparents and soon requested that tickets be sent to Sweden for them.

Learns English Again.

Now Gunnar is learning English again. He can understand it fairly well, but he still does his talking in Swedish. His parents formerly resided at 1410 Park avenue, Chicago Heights. He and his mother are now at 4950 Chicago Beach drive until they find another apartment in Chicago Heights.

NEW ENGLAND SCHOOL HEADMASTER TO GIVE SUNDAY EVENING TALK

Dr. Norman B. Nash, headmaster of St. Paul's school, Concord, N. H., will make his first appearance before the audience of the Sunday Evening club tonight in Orchestra hall. His topic will be "Ambition or Devotion." Clifford W. Barnes will introduce the speaker and preside at the meeting. Charles Ward Seabury, trustee of the club, will take part in the program.

Dr. Norman B. Nash.

Dr. Nash, who succeeded Dr. Samuel S. Drury as headmaster of St. Paul's school, was previously rector of St. Anne's Episcopal church, South Lincoln, Mass., and for some years president of the Massachusetts council of churches. For eleven years he was on the faculty of the Episcopal theological seminary at Cambridge, Mass. During the world war he served in the A. E. F. as lieutenant in the 150th Field Artillery.

YOUNG AMERICA HAS SPOTLIGHT IN WEEK'S NEWS

Schools, Parks Plan Special Events.

Chicago's annual Youth week—designed to illuminate the needs of more than a million local boys and girls, and to point the way toward satisfying them—will begin tomorrow and continue for seven more days.

Officially proclaimed by Mayor Kelly, the week will offer a diversified program reaching into almost every school, park, playground, settlement, club and church in each of the city's 75 communities. Individual programs will stress the importance of youths and adults working and thinking in harmony. Maj. John L. Griffith, chairman of the Youth week committee, has urged that every adult participate actively in his neighborhood program, in order to insure the fullest success of the plan.

Has Seven Aims.

Seven primary needs will be emphasized, according to the schedule outlined by Maj. Griffith. They are: [1] adequate health programs, [2] sound educational opportunities, [3] satisfying recreational experiences, [4] training for democratic living, [5] opportunities for economic security [6], racial and religious tolerance, and [7] maintenance of peace.

The program will open appropriately tomorrow when Mayor Kelly turns over his own job, together with those of the police commissioner, corporation counsel, fire marshal, fire prevention chief, health commissioner and chief justice of the Municipal court, to Chicago boys, who will rule until noon.

The boys chosen are Jack Michlin, mayor; Jordan Sieband, police commissioner; Ray Del Fava, fire marshal; Angelo Rico, fire prevention chief; Walter Thornton, health commissioner; Harry Kamlin, corporation counsel, and Robert Slaber, chief justice of the Municipal court. In addition, another group of boys will sit as advisers to judges in eight branches of the Municipal court.

Luncheon on Friday.

Climax of the educational phase of the program will occur Friday at a special civic assembly luncheon to be held under the sponsorship of the Executive's club in Hotel Sherman. On that occasion, it has been announced by Dr. Johnson, superintendent of schools, the outstanding boys and girls selected from all of the Chicago high schools' graduating classes will be special guests.

Tomorrow more than 60,000 local P.-T. A. members will help promote "Home and Family Day." Families will be asked to practice the P.-T. A. slogan, "The Family That Plans Together, Plays Together—the Family that Plays Together, Stays Together."

"Health and Athletics" will be publicized Tuesday when open house will be held in all school gymnasiums, parks and playgrounds.

Day for Job Study.

Wednesday will be known as "Vocation and Industry" day. Members of the Association of Commerce, directed by Royal D. Lee, and the Junior Association of Commerce, directed by Albert Hecht Jr., will try to help youth decide which rules should govern the wise choice of a career.

On Thursday city-wide attention will be called to the value of groups which encourage and further creative activities, pointing out benefits both to the individual and the community. William E. Poore, assistant superintendent of schools, will head the school and citizenship program Friday, which will indicate the need of an appreciation of Americanism by youth.

More than 150,000 boys and girls are expected to enter into the spirit of "Out-of-doors and Playground Day" on Saturday.

Church Day Program.

The Rev. L. P. Jensen, chairman of "Church Day," Sunday, has announced that the city's churches will stress the importance of church to youth and youth to church. Boy and Girl Scouts will attend services in uniform.

Jack Elder, director of athletics for the Catholic Youth organization, has announced that all C. Y. O. centers will participate in each day of Youth week.

More than 200 students will participate in the Fenger High school "Talent Show" as part of Youth week on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings. At Bowen High school special co-recreational game work will be featured on Tuesday, together with the finals of the volleyball contest.

Sites of Activities.

Youth week activities will be carried on at southwest playgrounds. Special programs are planned for: Barrett playground, 2022 Cermak road; Byrne athletic field, 5920 South Damen avenue; Murray playground, 1743 West 73d street; Moran, 5727 South Racine avenue; Sherwood, 327 West 57th street; 33d place playground, 1635 West 33d place; Trumbull, 2410 South Trumbull avenue, and Wilson, 1122 West 34th place.

Among those active in promoting the Youth week program are: Harry Berz, 3537 West 13th place; Judge Frank H. Bicek, 2526 South Ridgeway avenue; Emerson O. Bradshaw, 9141 South Leavitt avenue; John R. MacGregor, 10200 South Longwood avenue; Mrs. Harry Mulberry, 9345 South Winchester avenue, and Fred Henderson, 7712 Clyde avenue.

Wedding That's Based on Myth

"Tanya's Wedding," a scene based on a Ukrainian myth, is one of the events in the circus to be given at the Tilden school gymnasium from 7 to 11 o'clock Thursday evening. John Yarmola, kneeling left front, is the bridegroom, and Ruth Stevens, right front, is Tanya, the bride. Back of them are Maurice Husayko, violinist, and Elaine Watts, dancer. The girls are from Bowen High school. H. C. Kuehl is directing the circus, in which 300 students will take part.

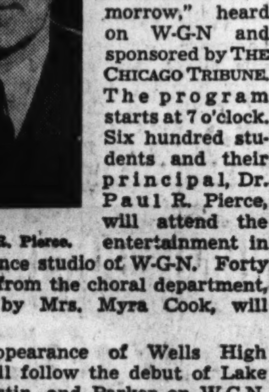
Citizens' Rally Salutes Wells High for Week

Students of one of Chicago's youngest public high schools, Wells, located at 936 North Ashland avenue, will be guests Wednesday night at the fourth of a weekly series of radio half hour programs entitled "Citizens of Tomorrow," heard on W-G-N and sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. The program starts at 7 o'clock. Six hundred students and their principal, Dr. Paul R. Pierce, will attend the entertainment in the audience studio of W-G-N. Forty vocalists from the choral department, directed by Mrs. Myra Cook, will sing.



Dr. Paul R. Pierce.

The appearance of Wells High school will follow the debut of Lake View, Austin, and Parker on W-G-N. Next week Steinmetz will take over the half hour program. As special guests Wednesday night, "Charlie Jones," the school engineer of the "Citizens of Tomorrow" cast, has invited the school engineer-custodians of the 39 high schools in Chicago. With them will be John Howatt, chief engineer of the Chicago board of education, who will be introduced by Philip Maxwell of THE TRIBUNE'S editorial staff, who plays the rôle of "The Principal" and is master of ceremonies on the program.

Jerry to Have Guests.

"Jerry" Gregory, the 16 year old senior of all Chicagoland high schools, will be back on the program after her turning the tables last week on Mr. Maxwell in a "news quiz" which also stumped the announcer of the broadcast, Pierre Andre. "Jerry," who in real life attends Maine Township High school, has quite a time attending rehearsals and keeping up her high grades which have marked her as an outstanding student. In her honor 30 students from Maine High with their dean, Einar J. Anderson, will attend the broadcast.

The Wells cheermasters, Lilyan Bender and Delores Gora, will open the radio show with their leading the 600 students in "Y-E-A W-E-L-L-S!"

Honor Roll Students.

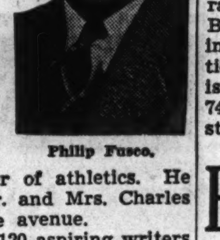
On each Wednesday night's program several Chicagoland students who have achieved success in their work are mentioned by Mr. Maxwell.

Each Wednesday night after the broadcast the guests are shown the talking movie film, "Trees to Tribunes," and then a smaller group is taken on a tour of Tribune Tower. Most of these students are from classes in journalism. Coöperating each week with THE TRIBUNE in the presentation of "Citizens of Tomorrow" are the music and radio departments of the Chicago public schools.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

APPARENTLY Our Towner Philip Fusco, who left an enviable extracurricular activity record at Leo High school a few years ago, has not slowed his pace in college. Word comes from Loras college, Dubuque, Ia., that the Fusco name is becoming a synonym for hustle around the campus, since Philip is sports editor of the college newspaper, a member of the varsity debating team, and a busy actor in the dramatic society. He also holds the sports editor's position on the "Purgold," school yearbook, and last year was undergraduate manager of athletics. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fusco, 7018 Lowe avenue.



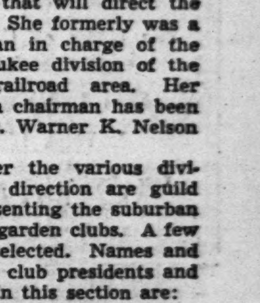
Philip Fusco.

Only 36 of the 120 aspiring writers who took the journalism test at Hyde Park High school were passed recently. They will be admitted to next semester's journalism class. Most of them also have hopes of becoming staff members of the school weekly newspaper.

Janice Brogue, 6133 Drexel avenue, made the highest grade, followed by Barbara Raymond, 5652 Kenwood avenue, second, and Helen Hayslette, 3834 Ellis avenue, third. Others who made superior showings are Dorothy Warshaw, Dorothy Duft, Shirley Lang, Lucille Wing, Milton Shulman, Rachelle Dubany, Edna Indritz, Lucille Pace, and Eve Solomon.

FIFTY-NINE years of wedded life were celebrated last Friday by Mr. and Mrs. William Heckler, of 7208 Constance avenue. Mr. Heckler was born in Chicago in 1852. They have one daughter, Mrs. C. R. Elliott, three sons, Herman, George, and Edward, four grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren. The couple have lived together in Chicago for the last 55 years.

FAME came to Fred Bednar, Gary's 13 year old life saver, recently. He was presented with a medal and certificate by the National Safety Council of America in a special program at Froebel High school auditorium. The award is given for saving a life by the Schafer prone pressure method of resuscitation.



Fred Bednar.

EDWARD C. MINAS, of Hammond, was congratulated by his employés recently for staying on the job 50 years. Mr. Minas had completed a half a century of being actively engaged in business in the community. At 75 years he still beats his 200 employés to work in the morning in his dry goods store on State street.

Miss Grace B. Hadley has been appointed acting director of religious education at the Bryn Mawr Community church, 7000 Jeffery avenue. Miss Hadley, who received her master's degree in religious education from the Chicago Theological seminary in 1938, has been associated with the church as a student worker.

FRED BOETTCHER of 1016 West 103d street will close a half century of employment at the Chicago Bridge and Iron company, 1305 West 105th street, next month. Boettcher was born in Germany in 1862 and he came to this country when he was 26 years old to settle on a farm in Iowa. He stayed there a year, married, and moved to Chicago.

He went to work May 7, 1890, at the Chicago Bridge and Iron company. His specific job now is helper on No. 78 punch. His son, Karl, works in the same plant. His grandson, Robert Boettcher, is a welder there, and his son-in-law, Ernest Johnson, is employed in the plant storeroom. The company is planning an anniversary party for Boettcher.

Three south side girls are chairmen of the annual mothers-daughters' tea which will be given by the Home Economics club of Rosary college, River Forest, from 2 until 5 o'clock Thursday. They are Miss Irene Hogan, 7819 South Park avenue, refreshments; Miss Marjorie McGurty, 508 West 78th street, tickets; and Miss Dolores Hoster, 4816 Dorchester avenue, decorations. Both Miss Hogan and Miss McGurty are seniors and dietetics majors. Miss Hoster is a junior and home economics major.

Isabella Circle to Give Dinner Feting Chaplain

90 CLUBS TO AID IN ASSEMBLING SPRING BLOOMS

Seek Blossoms from Every Grower.

What is the best way to cut lilac blossoms to prevent injury to the bushes? How can cut flowers be treated to delay their wilting? These questions are answered in a story and picture on page 5.

BY HOMER NIESZ.

While cool weather last week was further retarding the opening of lilac flowering buds in Chicagoland, officials of the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild furthered plans to distribute the blooms to sick and shut-ins in the city's hospitals in the twelfth annual "Share Your Lilacs" campaign.

The guild and THE TRIBUNE coöperate each year with lilac growers in sharing the lilac blossoms with the sick. Last year the bouquets were taken to 147 hospitals, settlement houses, old people's homes, and other institutions, caring for more than 22,000 patients.

Guild officials last week appointed committees to work with 90 community and garden clubs in the Chicago flower area in gathering the lilacs and loading them on suburban trains for free transportation to the city. The clubs have more than 2,000 members.

Will Meet Tuesday.

The guild committees of the garden clubs and the club presidents are to meet at luncheon Tuesday noon in Carson, Pirie, Scott tearoom to complete their organization for lilac day and to plan distribution of fruits and flowers to charity patients thruout the summer. It is only on lilac days that the guild attempts to take bouquets to all hospitals in the city.

The date for gathering and distributing the lilacs will be announced as soon as officials can determine when most of the blooms will be open. Theodore V. Purcell of Evanston, president of the guild, said yesterday the date likely would be later than usual because of the retarded spring season. Most years the blossoms are ready to cut around the middle of May.

Mr. Purcell said that, as in other years, all who have lilac bushes, whether few or many, are invited to use the guild's organization in sharing the blooms with the sick. Guild committees of garden clubs will supervise the assembling of the flowers at suburban railroad stations. Trains will bring them free to stations in the city where fleets of Tribune trucks will pick them up and take them to hospitals.

Mrs. Grace Heads Work.

Mrs. Stanley D. Grace of Highland Park is chairman of the guild's general committee that will direct the work this year. She formerly was a division chairman in charge of the northern Milwaukee division of the Northwestern railroad area. Her work as division chairman has been assigned to Mrs. Warner K. Nelson of Glencoe.

Working under the various division chairmen's direction are guild chairmen, representing the suburban and community garden clubs. A few still are to be selected. Names and addresses of the club presidents and guild chairmen in this section are:

SAFETY FOR STUDENTS.

It was with the greatest pleasure and relief that I heard Mayor Kelly's Keep Chicago Safe committee is going to send a man out to Hirsch High school to tell the students about traffic safety. What they don't know about safety on the streets would fill our main public library.

If those kids weren't so young I'd think they were trying to commit suicide, the way they throw themselves in front of autos, especially on bicycles. I have stopped driving my little daughter to school, because every time I get within a few blocks from the place I encounter children who seem to be staging a bicycle race directly in my path and when I tell them to watch where they're going they either pay no attention or laugh right in my face.

I hope the man from Mayor Kelly's safety committee tells them something good about riding bicycles, and I hope they remember it. MRS. E. P. Z.

TAXPAYERS' MEETING.

We are interested in having all southwest side residents know about the new South West Taxpayers association. This club is nonsectarian and nonpolitical. It was organized on April 5, and the third meeting will take place at the Matavosky hall, Archer and Cicero avenues, on May 3 at 7:30 o'clock. The association is devoted to creating and furthering civic pride and to working for local improvements, better transportation and more playgrounds for the southwest side.

REPORT REVEALS MOTOR HAZARDS IN SOUTH AREA

Suggests Better Lights at Danger Points.

The scout car staff of the Chicago Motor club discovered several dangerous traffic hazards in its jaunt thru the far south side last week in coöperation with South Area council leaders. As a result of such scouting trips in the city and suburbs by the club, area councils receive reports and send them to city, state, and county highway departments with suggested remedies.

Most important of the problems uncovered are:

George Barton, club engineer, recommends the installation of reflector posts and sodium vapor lights at 87th street and Cicero avenue to warn motorists of the impending curves and to assist in their vision at the crossing. The S-curve at this junction has been the cause of a number of fatalities.

Say Lights Needed.

Modern safety lighting is needed from a point west of Eggleston avenue along 87th street to a point east of the Belt railway. Club engineers also recommend the construction of a fence between the car tracks to outline the curve for drivers, cutting back the north curve and repaving some of the street car track area to facilitate traffic.

Complete repavement of 106th street from Indianapolis boulevard to Bensley avenue is needed, as has been pointed out at council meetings by Ald. William A. Rowan [10th]. The request is before the Cook county board.

Warning on 95th.

Since cars going south on Jeffery avenue pass under a long viaduct and suddenly enter 95th street, warning should be given traffic moving east and west on 95th street of possible danger. It is said that signals have been promised by the city.

WEST PULLMAN PARK PLAYERS TO OFFER FANTASY

A fantasy, "Snickerty Nick and the Giant," will be presented by the junior dramatic group of West Pullman park tomorrow afternoon and evening at the fieldhouse, 123d street and Stewart avenue. A special performance for children will be given at 4 o'clock and the evening show will start at 7:30 o'clock.

Corine Cosaro has been assigned the rôle of "Snickerty Nick," Frank Marshall, the Giant; Joan Leonard, Spring, and Richard Cosaro, the Boy. Supporting players are Freida Havener, Leigh Eichdahl, Lois Taylor, Sophie Kulig, Ragina Kehoe, Genevieve Kurzeja, Sylvia Szeuba, Linda Lee McReynolds, Arlene Gost, Ruth Jagers, Eugenia Zbylut, Viola Guinzeo, and Orland Sundona.

The entertainment will be staged and directed by Miss Florence Hickman of the park district drama staff.

CITIZENS TO HAIL LIBRARY JUBILEE AT MORGAN PARK

Branch's History Partly That of Whole Area.

Morgan Parkers will drink tea at their public library, Walker branch, 111th street and South Hoyne avenue, from 3 to 6 o'clock today. The occasion is the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the opening of the library. A history of the library is, to a great extent, a history of Morgan Park.

George C. Walker, a Chicago business man and president of the Blue Island Land and Building company, donated the property and put up the original structure at a cost of $12,000.

The formal opening occurred on April 22, 1890. He also gave $1,000 toward the initial purchase of books. Walker's residence was at the present site of the Congress hotel. A Baptist, Walker was responsible for the location of the first University of Chicago schools in Morgan Park.

Gave 300 Books.

Dr. Justin Smith, a teacher in the Chicago University Theological seminary, gave 300 books from his library. Other Morgan Parkers also gave books, and many bought memberships. Life members paid $50; corporate members paid $20 and an annual fee of $1; just members paid $1 a year.

Friends of the library went out after subscriptions, too, but still more money was needed. Financial aid came from what is now the Morgan Park Military academy. Explaining that means going in prelibrary Morgan Park history.

The Blue Island Building and Loan association plotted and incorporated the Morgan Park community in 1869. The name came from Thomas Morgan, whose homestead, purchased in 1844, was absorbed. The Chicago fire in 1871 brought on a depression, and no one moved out to the new area. No one bought lots.

Schools Are Established.

The building and loan association men decided to do something about the situation. They established schools. One was the Girls' Female college, later the Chicago Female college. The school was moved once in Morgan Park.

A boys' school was established in 1873 as the Mount Vernon Military academy under Col. S. S. Norton. Capt. E. N. K. Talcott purchased the school in 1876 and gave it the name it now bears, Morgan Park Military academy.

Records at the academy show that it was used as a co-educational preparatory school by the University of Chicago from 1892 to 1907, the term of presidency of Dr. William Rainey Harper. In that time, the library and academy came under one management. The school needed a library; the library needed support.

In 1894, the University of Chicago entered into an agreement with the village of Morgan Park to pay all expenses of operation and upkeep and buy new books for the library. According to the agreement, the library was to revert to the village if the University of Chicago left Morgan Park.

That happened in 1907, and once more the village owned the property. And the preparatory school became a military academy again. It functioned simply as a village library until 1914, when Morgan Park was annexed to Chicago.

Was First Librarian.

So far as is known, Miss Sarah Mills was the first librarian. She served until 1907 and was succeeded by Miss Irene Engle, who stayed until 1909. At that time, the library board asked Miss Clara German, daughter of Dr. W. H. German, Morgan Park's first physician, to take over temporarily.

Miss German was to work until the board could get some one to take the position. She retired from her post at the library in 1937. She and her father, both of 10924 Prospect avenue, will be at today's tea party.

Miss Louise M. Hanndgan has been librarian since Miss German resigned.

Three wings were added to the original structure in 1929, quadrupling the space. The original building and general construction lines were kept. Morgan Park residents say the architecture is of Norman style. It is dignified and impressive, evidently, for the librarians say strangers are always coming in to ask, "What church is this?"

Records Show Growth.

Old records show that the book circulation from March, 1909, to March, 1910, was 7,585. Last year, circulation was 134,310. From 1909 to 1910 there were 6,050 books in the library. Last year, there were 23,667 volumes. Thirty years ago there were 500 cards in force. Now there are 8,078.

The original registration book is still at the library. The first name in it is that of Miss Addie Thayer, daughter of Gilbert Thayer, the female college president. The second name is that of the veteran librarian, Clara German.

Many old Morgan Park family names are in the book. Among them are those of Dr. T. W. Goodspeed, J. S. Blackwelder and Mattie Herriott.

Members of the Morgan Park Garden club, the Morgan Park Woman's club, and all of the Parent-Teacher associations in the district are coöperating for this afternoon's event. Several of the older residents will be asked to talk about the early days of the library.

Has Role in Play

Miss Dorothy Kennedy, 7106 Lafayette avenue, a student at Chicago Teachers college, will play the role of Miss Shea in the Southtown Theater guild's production, "What a Life," in Hamilton park fieldhouse auditorium Friday evening. Robert S. Blakeslee is play director. In leading roles are Jack Morrissey, Daniel Riordan, and Dorothy Kennedy, all students at teachers college.

CHICAGO HEIGHTS NEGRO ELECTED TO SCHOOL BOARD

Most of His Adherents Ignore Others.

Election of the first Negro to be a school trustee in Chicago Heights was one of the surprises of the school elections of the southwest area. G. H. Hammond, colored undertaker, was elected to the grade school board of district 170, the Chicago Heights schools. Three members and a president were elected.

The candidacy of Hammond had been announced, but there had been little evidence of an active campaign on his part until the eve of the election. Many residents were surprised on election morning to find long lines of colored voters at the polling places. Most of these, apparently, voted for only one candidate, Hammond. The count showed he had 999 votes, and only 54 of these ballots were marked for any other candidate.

George Heads Board.

Reuben R. George was reëlected president of the board and H. W. Wilkening and Michael J. Prisco were elected members. Others who ran included John Olson, Andrew Hanson, Walter Lueder, and Leslie Morrill, who had been a member of the board.

R. A. G. Engelhardt.

R. A. G. Engelhardt and Carlton T. Bindley, both of Chicago Heights, were elected to the board of Bloom Township High school at Chicago Heights.

Louis Biedenkopf and Dr. Frank W. Tracy were elected board members for Blue Island Community High school. On the board of Blue Island grade school Dr. Leslie O. Damm is president and Perry F. Hoag and George Eck are members.

J. D. Coale was voted in as president of the Harvey grade school board, with Mrs. Claude Miller and Mrs. Earl Delano as members.

For Lemont Township High school Walter Buszkiewicz and Morrel Kiest were elected to the board.

In the Lyons grade school election Leo Meyer was made board president, Ernest A. Master and Frank E. Kohout members.

Oak Lawn Election.

Roy G. Wohlgemuth was elected president of the Oak Lawn grade school board. Byron G. Houston, John Fraser, and Mrs. Ruth Linhart were made board members.

CHURCH TO NOTE ITS BEGINNINGS IN PRISON CAMP

St. Mark's Episcopal Is 75 Years Old.

In 1865 several thousand confederate prisoners and a few score union guards in Camp Douglas agreed on one question—they needed a place for spiritual worship. Discussion grew into action and, under the leadership of the chaplain, the Rev. E. B. Tuttle, who succeeded in obtaining $2,300 from the government for the project, they busied themselves erecting a chapel inside the camp.

The Rev. W. D. McLean.

Next Thursday St. Mark's Episcopal church, 4427 Drexel boulevard, the direct descendant of that chapel, will celebrate its 75th anniversary with special services and a dinner. In charge of the observance, which is on St. Mark's day, will be the Rev. William Douglas McLean, 11th successor of the Rev. Mr. Tuttle as rector.

List Three Services.

Services will be held at 7 and 10:30 o'clock Thursday morning and at 8 o'clock in the evening. The Rev. Mr. McLean will preach the sermon at the early service and his son, the Rev. William D. McLean Jr., army chaplain stationed at Fort Barrancas, Fla., will be heard in the 10:30 o'clock service. The evening sermon will be given by the Rt. Rev. Edwin J. Randall, suffragan bishop of Chicago.

Location of Camp.

Camp Douglas was situated on the west side of Cottage Grove avenue from 31st to 35th streets and westward to South Park avenue. After the war the chapel, then on the outskirts of the city, was organized as St. Mark's congregation.

The Rev. Mr. Tuttle's successors were H. W. Woods [1867-'69], Brokholst Morgan [1869-'72], Daniel S. Warren [1872-'77], B. F. Fleetwood [1877-'89], Dr. W. W. Wilson [1899-1912], William G. Studwell [1913-'17], John Lloyd [1917-'20], W. J. Van Zandt [1920-'22], R. L. Piulbrook [1922-'24], W. A. Simms [1924-'30], and the Rev. Mr. McLean.

MODERN DUPLEX HOUSE CONCEALS TRUE IDENTITY

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Just before spring came, a bit reluctantly, from around the corner this year, Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Woods moved into their new home at 6026 Bloomingdale avenue. At approximately the same time their aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. De Perro, moved into their new home at 6028 Bloomingdale.

As it happens, the two residences are under one roof, for the dwelling is a duplex town house, and a very good looking house, we can honestly say.

The architect, Martin H. Braun, 1827 North McVicker avenue, has carried out the exterior walls in brick; tan and brown shades predominate, and the exterior trim, windows and doors have been painted an off white.

Advantages Are Told.

There are many definite assets to the modern duplex town house. Economy of land is one. And there is the impression of greater size since two small homes under one roof seem larger than a one size home of the same cubic content. Then, too, with a finely designed duplex on a 50 foot lot, each occupant pays for only 25 feet, is taxed for only 25 feet, and yet has the enjoyment of wide front and back lawns.

This is a home where every square foot of the interior has been made to give an excellent account of itself.

Mrs. Woods showed me thru her home the day I visited the duplex. She is a young woman who has every reason to be proud of her house. There are many interesting features upstairs and down, and Mrs. Woods has given the interior an atmosphere of unusual appeal.

Closet Near Door.

As you enter the hallway you see a convenient guest closet directly opposite the entrance door, and at the left there is the living room, with dining room beyond and an arch between.

The living room walls have been painted and stippled an off peach, while the dining room is papered, and the oak floors have a fine, natural finish.

The kitchen walls are painted an off white, and combine happily with white cabinets and blue linoleum top and blue linoleum floor. The breakfast set is carried out in lively red tones. And the cabinet spaces are a joy to behold—and to use. The cabinets over the sink have adjustable shelves, and the cases under the work top surfaces have sliding shelves which pull out for greater working convenience.

Glass Block Over Tub.

There are Venetian blinds at all the windows and glass block has been used at several strategic points, including a panel over the tub in the bathroom.

Halfway up the stairs which lead to the second floor there are the electric door chimes, recessed in the wall. And at the right a cozy studio den, which is placed over the garage. This room could be used as a bedroom equally well. And it has the advantage of closet space which runs the entire width of the room.

Half a flight farther up is the second floor, with its two bedrooms and bath.

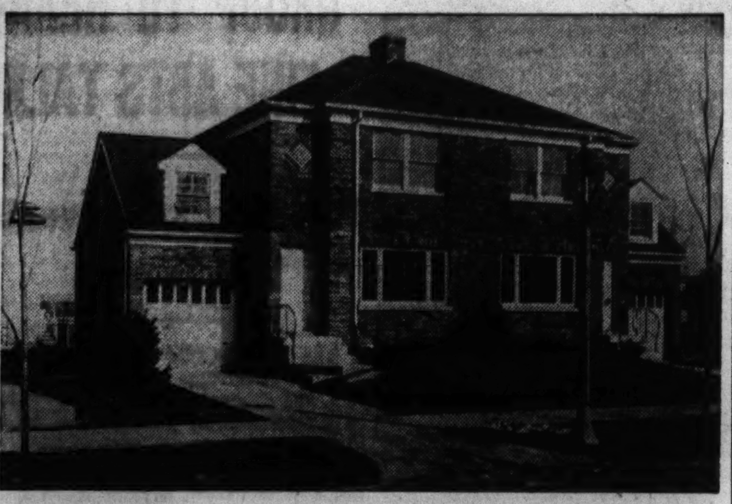
The master bedroom has an attractive small alcove corner and its walls have an unusual treatment. Walls on two of its sides are painted blue, and the other two walls have a white paper with a blue figure. The ceiling is a dark blue. The second bedroom is carried out with a yellow papered wall with a yellow ceiling. Light and sunny, these rooms!

Thruout the house the interior doors are the flush type of birch veneer, with a shimmering natural finish, and the trim around doors and windows has been specially designed.

Morgan Park Improvement Association Plans Dinner

The Morgan Park Improvement association's 47th annual dinner will take place at the Ridge Country club at 6:30 o'clock on Wednesday. David Magee is chairman of the committee on arrangements. Frank Cox is president of the association. A program of musical numbers is planned for the dinner hour, and an address on community activities will follow. There will be dancing later in the evening.

Double Feature Town House



The handsome new duplex town home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Woods and Mr. and Mrs. DePerro at 6026 and 6028 Bloomingdale avenue. There are many interesting features to this two family dwelling, not the least a study den over each garage. The exterior walls are of brick in shades of tan and deep brown. Architect, Martin H. Braun, 1827 North McVicker avenue, Chicago.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, April 22.

Without suitable soil, plants will not do well; poor soil must be corrected by adding plant food and humus. Humus improves the soil, holds moisture, aids in the manufacture of plant fod, and provides the best conditions for plant growth. Wherever there is room for a compost heap it should be kept going at all times. Every scrap of grass, clippings, manures, soft weeds, etc., should be put in the compost. Humus alone will not always supply all of the elements needed for growth. Analyze the soil to determine what elements are deficient and supply them with commercial fertilizers.

Tuesday, April 23.

Some annuals may be grown in a shady part of the garden, if the shade is not too dense. These include the aster, forget-me-not, nemophila, pansy, snapdragon, wishbone plant or torenia, sweet alyssum, and monkey flower. It is late to sow pansy seed, but short, stock plants can be obtained easily from supply houses. Seedlings raised in boxes are greatly benefited by transplanting at least once. Use annual vines wherever they can be used for they grow rapidly, cover unsightly objects or hide poor views if given some support, and they add much to the appearance of any place. The monvine is one of the best. Pot plants can be purchased. The hyacinth bean has large purplish beans and does well on the wire fence. Morning glories, cypress vine, scarlet runner, balsam apple, and cardinal flower all have a place. Sweet peas are best grown in full sun and supported with wire or brush.

Wednesday, April 24.

Fast growing annuals that require little attention include the alyssum, cosmos, marigold, larkspur, candytuft, nasturtium, mourning bride, pot marigold, and bachelor buttons. Keep all withered flowers removed to prevent formation of seed. Plant more of the graceful grasses for bouquets. They include cloud grass, quaking grass, Job's tears, fountain grass, and ruppeli. All of these are easily grown and do best in full sun. A group in perennial borders looks well.

Thursday, April 25.

A good soil for most plants consists of about one-half loamy garden soil, one-quarter rooted leafmold, some decomposed cow manure, and one-quarter sand. If the manure is unavailable, a four inch pot of high grade complete commercial fertilizer mixed with each wheelbarrow of soil is excellent. Do not put small plants in large pot; wait until the roots touch the sides of the pots and then shift. Try and have a new kind of plant or one you never have grown for it adds interest. House plants need food when growing. Apply a complete commercial food at intervals of from three to four weeks.

Friday, April 26.

Gardeners who expect to plant a new perennial garden this spring should see that the soil is well prepared because of the permanent nature of the plants. Dig the soil to a depth of a foot or more and work in a complete commercial plant food; well decayed manures can be used if they are available. Perennials delight in a deep, well drained location. The first year a few plants should be purchased and seeds of other kinds sown. Sowing seeds in April or May will give good plants that can be transplanted to permanent beds next fall. Seedlings should be transplanted by late June. Most perennials germinte readily during the cooler days of spring. Some kinds require a long time to germinate. Among these are monkshood, gas plant, baptisia, and peony.

Saturday, April 27.

Most perennials can be propagated by dividing the roots in early spring. Others can be increased by root cuttings taken during the middle to late summer. When a young tree is planted see that it has a guard to prevent injury from children or from the lawn mower. An injury to the trunk should be repaired immediately by cutting out all mutilated sections to the cambium and painting with coal tar. When ordering a tree for the yard select one with a straight trunk, without a crotch. Do not be in a hurry to plant tender kinds of plants like the canna.

LAWN GROWERS TO COMPETE IN ANNUAL CONTEST

Expect Entry List Will Set New Record.

"The man with the hoe" is the key figure in the sixth annual save the lawn campaign of the Chicago park district and associated groups, plans for which were announced last week.

Paul Schulze, chairman of the Municipal Art league and head of the citizens' committee in charge, declared that amateur gardeners were the mainstay of the annual drive to beautify the city's grass plots. Each year more and more participants enter, and arrangements are being made for a record participation this year, he said.

The purpose of the campaign is not only to preserve existing grass plots until the plants are hardy enough to stand trampling, but also to encourage the planting of lawns where none grew before. The growing popularity of the contest indicates it is helping to make Chicagoans "lawn conscious," Mr. Schulze said.

Aiding in Plans.

William H. McDonnell, publisher, has been appointed chairman of the south side committee that is aiding the general committee, Mr. Schulze announced. His collaborating community chairmen are:

Beverly Hills, Mrs. C. J. Farwell, chairman garden department of the Beverly Hills Women's club; Englewood, Mrs. William Johnson, president Englewood Women's club; Hamilton Park, Mrs. Joseph Schallerer, president Hamilton Park Women's club; Town of Lake, Mrs. Marian Schmidt, president University of Chicago Settlement Women's club.

Numerous Chicago leaders are aiding Mr. Schulze as members of the citizens' committee. These include: Gustave A. Brand, art chairman for the city; James H. Burdett, director National Garden clubs; Mrs. J. P. Edwards, state garden chairman Illinois Federation of Women's clubs; Miss Ethel Foster representing Chicago Association of Commerce; John Howatt, chief engineer for board of education; Mrs. F. Russell Lyon, president Illinois Federation of Parent-Teacher associations.

James B. McCahey, president board of education; Commander Ernest I. Pugmire of Salvation Army; Oakley V. Morgan, horticulturist for Commonwealth Edison company; Auxiliary Bishop Bernard J. Sheil; Mrs. George Plamondon, president Garden Club of Illinois; Bishop George Craig Stewart, Eugene S. Taylor, manager Chicago Plan commission, and Miss Harriet Vittum, head resident Northwestern University settlement.

Compete in Four Groups.

Competition in the approaching campaign will be divided into these four groups: Small homes, apartment houses, public and parochial schools, and police and fire stations.

Home and apartment house gardeners will compete for garden tools and supplies donated by Chicago merchants. Mr. McCahey of the Chicago school board has posted plaques to be awarded winners in the school section. The police and fire stations will vie with each other for a cup donated by Fire Marshal Michael J. Corrigan.

The Chicago park district, besides taking a leading part in sponsoring the annual drive for better lawns, has prepared two other aids. One is a pamphlet giving information on the proper planting and care of grass. The other is a special sign appealing for public coöperation in starting new lawns, urging all to "save this lawn for summer."

Both these aids are available without cost at park district fieldhouses thruout the city, it was announced by Layne Rogers, engineer in charge of landscape maintenance for the district.

GIRLS' CATHOLIC YOUTH GROUP TO SPONSOR FARCE

The Girls' Catholic Youth organization of SS. Cyril and Methodius parish is sponsoring a three act farce, "For Pete's Sake," this afternoon and evening in the school auditorium, 5017 South Hermitage avenue. In the cast are Marion Reigel, Adeline Knebel, Hermina Polek, Olga Peterek, Pearl T. Brom, and Mildred Klouda. Assisting them are members of the Acolyte guild, William J. Prajka, Edward J. Bohac, Albert Simandl, Ladd L. Polek, Vance Zdarsky, and Thomas Petrick. Miss Mildred Brom is the play director. Dancing will follow the evening's performance.

Morgan Park High Branch Will Have Talk on Safety

Pupils of Clissold branch of the Morgan Park High school, 2350 West 110th place, will hear George W. Fleming, general secretary of Mayor Kelly's Keep Chicago Safe committee, review traffic deaths among juveniles in 1939 at a safety program Wednesday morning. Two traffic safety sound films will be shown.

Kem is a complete plant food, containing every needed mineral . . . in proper proportion and in liquid form permitting immediate absorption. Kem is a food (not a fertilizer, not a tonic). It promotes sure, steady, balanced, rapid growth.
Kem-fed plants manufacture their own vitamins. They grow anywhere—in soil or without soil. They survive transplanting and weather whims with ease. Thick, Kem-fed grass crowds out weeds.

EARL'S GRANDSON DEVOTES LIFE TO POOR, SICK

Asks, at 70, for Few More Years of Service.,

When the Rev. George Hopkins, D. D., celebrated his 70th birthday recently he asked for the gift of "a few more years of service at Oak Forest." He has been Protestant chaplain at the Cook county infirmary for 12 years.

A grandson of Anthony Ashley Cooper, seventh earl of Shaftsbury, Mr. Hopkins carries on the tradition of social service established by his grandparent.

A white donkey marched in the earl's funeral procession. The beast was a gift of gratitude from East London costermongers to the man who fought for humane factory legislation, founded the Shaftsbury homes for orphons, and was called "friend of the poor," by Queen Victoria.

An Orphan at 12.

Mr. Hopkins was an orphan at 12, but he did not go to one of his grandfather's homes. Wishing to be independent, he went to work as a bottle washer in a factory for $1.75 a week. He continued his studies, and in 1892 he was graduated from the Baptist College of London and ordained into the Baptist ministry. He married that same year, and he and Mrs. Hopkins went into the slums of London where they did social welfare and missionary work for 17 years.

They came to this country in 1910 and settled in Minneapolis. Mr. Hopkins served as secretary of the Baptist Union. From 1918 to 1920, he was chaplain at Camp Farragut, Great Lakes. From 1920 to 1928, he was in charge of the south side branch of the Y. M. C. A. in Oak Park.

Appointed in 1928.

Chaplain Hopkins was appointed to Oak Forest in 1928 by the Chicago Federation of Churches. There he ministers to the sick and to the dying. He and his wife serve the 3,900 men and women whose age and condition have brought them to the poorhouse.

The chaplain's office is crowded with boxes and bags of little gifts for the patients. There are sugar lumps, colored candies, clothes.

The Rev. Mr. Hopkins conducts 20 church services a week, and he estimates that 2,400 men and women attend. He ministers to many nationalities and to "at least 25 different religious sects." He says that creed lines disappear at the infirmary. "It is the broadest kind of ministry," he explains.

Services for Paupers.

Unclaimed bodies at the county morgue are taken to Oak Forest for burial. Chaplain Hopkins and his wife give a Christian service for each of the dead.

One day is pretty much like another for the men and women who occupy the rows and rows of low cots, who wander thru the halls of the buildings and out over the grounds. The Hopkins do much to brighten the monotony. They distribute the little gifts which are sent in by church and club groups.

"But we must always have enough to go around the entire ward," Mr. Hopkins insists. "Often we receive insufficient supplies, and then we can't distribute at all."

Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins are American citizens. They are the parents of eight children, six of whom are living. Four of their sons were in service in the world war, two overseas.

MARBLE CONTEST DRAWS INTEREST OF 20,000 BOYS

Twenty thousand boys under 15 years old are expected to compete in the annual city-wide marble tournament sponsored by the park district. Community tournaments must be completed in all parks by Saturday. Boys who reach the finals in southeast side parks will vie in the area meet at Grand Crossing park on Saturday, May 4.

The six boys who reach the final ring in each of the 36 area contests in the city will be eligible to compete in the city-wide championships at Douglas park on Saturday, May 11. The 12 highest from this competition will enter the grand championships late in May against qualifiers from the board of education and municipal playgrounds, the Y. M. C. A., and Boys' clubs.

To win the United States marble crown the all-city champion then would be obliged to win the district contest in Detroit, Mich., and the national title playoff at Wildwood, N. J.

LOVE FOR LILACS IS TRADITION OF AMERICAN LIFE

Sprouts Brought West in Covered Wagons.

Man's love for the lilac has been reflected in every step in the development of America. The Morton arboretum has traced the spread of the flower from the days it was brought to New England by the colonists.

The Arboretum reports that "a few carefully protected lilac sprouts were usually tucked away somewhere in the covered wagons of these pioneers as they set out to conquer the wildernesses of the west. Even today one may recognize old home sites by the remaining lilac clumps which still guard forgotten doorways."

Bushes Bloom Profusely.

The lilac has been found to be exceedingly tolerant of soils and exposures. It blooms profusely in the Chicagoland setting. Yet, if future flowering is to be considered there are certain simple rules to be followed.

At the arboretum, where there are 251 varieties of the blossom in all shades from deep purple and white to pink, these suggestions were made to home gardeners planning to participate in the Share Your Lilacs campaign sponsored by the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild, and THE TRIBUNE:

Don't break off the blossoms. It is advisable to use pruning shears or a sharp knife in cutting lilacs for bouquets.

Cut Close to Stem.

Cut as close to the main stem as possible so as to permit quick healing.

Do not cut promiscuously, damaging the symmetry of the bush. The blossoms should be cut in late evening, or early morning before the sun is up. Place them in cold water in a cool place over night.

It is possible to offset wilting by cutting away some of the leaves, thus reducing the amount of evaporating surface.

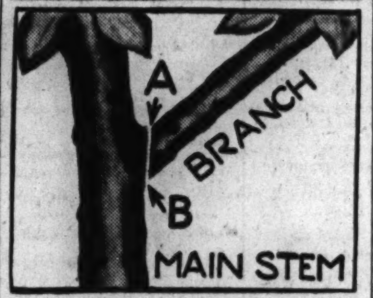
Proper cutting of blossoms is not injurious to the bush and does not affect its future productiveness.

Authorities point out that pruning in winter or spring delays a large part of the flower buds. It is explained that lilacs need pruning only to cut out dead or diseased wood, or renew old plants.

Asked the common question, "What is the best variety to plant?" an authority once answered: "The best 12 are any 12 which are most pleasing to you."

While it may be said that the lilac is tolerant of soils and exposures, the collection at the Morton arboretum was shifted four times in attaining the best results. The first spot was found too low and the blossoms were subjected to late spring frosts. The second spot was too shady, and the third too moist. The ideal site has been found to be one where there is proper drainage, no shade, and an elevation from frost.

Gathering Lilacs



Cut close to the main stem when you gather your Share Your Lilacs bouquet. The line AB shows the correct method and it is best if point B is slightly closer to the stem than point A. Use pruning shears or sharp knife.

Hear Safety Talk.

Sixteen hundred students at Hirsch High school will hear George W. Fleming, general secretary of Mayor Kelly's Keep Chicago Safe committee, discuss traffic fatalities among juveniles tomorrow morning. Two sound films, "We Drivers" and "Man At The Wheel," will be shown.

W-G-N PROGRAM REVEALS YOUTH'S HOPE, STRENGTH

Tribune Via Air Salutes 'Citizens of Tomorrow.'

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

As a salute to youth's promise and accomplishment and to its high destiny under the American way, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE each Wednesday evening presents the program, "Citizens of Tomorrow," over W-G-N.

It is well worth a half hour's pause to watch this procession of youth passing thru the portals of W-G-N. For here one obtains a brief preview of the future of democracy. That glimpse is full of hope.

The manner of presenting "Citizens of Tomorrow" is in itself strictly in the democratic tradition. For this program is an anomaly in educational broadcasting—an informative and entertaining program that delights the boy and girl as well as parents and teachers and the countless others who listen to it. Too often radio programs that suit parents and educators are ignored by youth. The converse is true, too. Mothers and fathers are not always pleased with the radio preferences of their offspring.

To make "Citizens of Tomorrow" the success it is, high school students give their best; they set the pace for the show—and it is a show—and they flavor it with their rousing yells, their fine choral singing, their lively contributions to THE TRIBUNE news quiz, and their reverberating applause —with a higher decibel rating than many sponsored network productions are accorded. They have embraced it as their own show.

The fullest coöperation is given, too, by the public school system. The Chicago board of education lends its full support to the broadcasts. Valuable aid and advice is given in preparing the programs by the radio council of the board of education, directed by Harold Kent, and by the department of music, under the direction of Miss Helen Howe.

The contributions of the youngsters and of their teachers are deftly welded into a finished production by skilled writers, producers, and performers of W-G-N. The result: A weekly program that is educational, stimulating, inspiring—that reflects democracy at its best.

A Glimpse of Young America.

A visit to a broadcast of "Citizens of Tomorrow" provides a fine opportunity to observe Young America at close range. As 600 boys and girls from Parker High school—probably a good cross-section of the youth of the nation—poured into W-G-N's spacious audience studio last Wednesday, certain qualities stood out.

These youngsters are wholesome, hearty, and hardy. Vitality, health, exuberance, enthusiasm, eagerness, hope, confidence, and strength! These are but a few of the qualities brought to mind as they overflowed the big auditorium.

Chicago's youth is not regimented. Youngsters appear to be far more individualistic than their elders. That seems to apply particularly with regard to dress and manner. These high school folk wear an astonishing variety of clothes, with comfort and color competing as the keynotes. Footgear alone runs the gamut from Mexican huaraches and "wedgies" to patent pumps with high heels. The girls wear all manner of anklet socks, silk hose—or both.

They Are Democratic.

As they scramble for seats a minor uproar fills the studio. They make full use of the right of free speech and assembly. With regard to the latter it takes the form of trying to save seats for their late-arriving friends. With regard to the former, one hears from a husky lad such expressions as "Hey, good looking—you with the mirror—how about moving over a notch so we can sit down?"

These boys and girls are decidedly democratic. Already they reveal many potentialities of good citizenship. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools, touched on this point the other evening when he was a guest at the broadcast. He remarked about their willingness to serve and their capacity for enjoying friendship and fellowship with others thru sharing common privileges and responsibilities.

"You young people," he said, "can and do participate in your American citizenship long before you are eligible to vote. Ever since you started school you have been learning to work and play with your classmates and to contribute your best to group activities." These experiences in school he said, represent the best possible preparation for democratic living.

Understands School Youth.

"Citizens of Tomorrow" derives much of its success thru the enthusiasm and experience of Philip Maxwell, member of THE TRIBUNE staff and the master of ceremonies, who plays the rôle of the principal. Mr. Maxwell is director of the Chicagoland Music Festival. He knows and understands the high school youth. Each fall he addresses some 50,000 of them at school assemblies in connection with THE TRIBUNE'S R. O. T. C. awards. Out of this experience grew the "Citizens of Tomorrow" program which reaches out by radio to high school students everywhere thruout Chicagoland.

In recognition of the achievements of out of the city students, tributes are paid each week to five boys and girls in the five Chicagoland states who have already made their marks in leadership, scholarship, character, and service. Those saluted are selected by their high school principals in coöperation with local correspondents of THE TRIBUNE.

Quiz Arouses Applause.

Announcer Pierre Andre keeps the showing moving right along; Blair Walliser is the efficient director; Francis Coughlin does the smooth writing job, and Harold Turner is ever ready at the piano to furnish what is needed in the way of music.

THE TRIBUNE news quiz arouses plenty of spontaneous applause as six classmates, picked at random from the audience, fight it out for cash and glory. Those who survive the quizdown get $5 each. There were three such winners for Parker last Wednesday, to the delight of Miss Nellie Quinn, the Parker principal. Answers of the youngsters indicate a good reading acquaintance with THE TRIBUNE. One girl raised a great cheer by correctly answering a Golden Gloves question—just to cite one example.

The demand for tickets far exceeds the number available each week. At some high schools 2,000 have requested tickets; only 600 can be accommodated. Others hear the show in their own living rooms. After the broadcast the motion picture "Trees to Tribunes," telling the story of the making of tomorrow's newspaper, is shown. And then 100 selected students—usually those enrolled in journalism courses—are taken on a tour of THE TRIBUNE'S plant.

Three performances of "Citizens of Tomorrow" have been given. Eight more are scheduled prior to the end of the school year.

You're missing something if you aren't listening!

They decide to separate, but their careers bring them together again, thru a maze of complications.

Bobby Clark is now making his second solo starring appearance. For three decades he was teamed with the late Paul McCullough.

Luella Gear made her debut in "The Love of Mike." Since then she has starred in many big shows including "The Gold Diggers," "Poppy," "Ups a Daisy," "The Gay Divorcee," "Life Begins at 8:40," and "On Your Toes."

CARTERS' TALENT HUNT IS NOT FOR AN OOMPH GIRL

Sponsors of the Carters of Elm Street, who are conducting a talent search thru W-G-N and 84 other Mutual stations, have announced that they are not necessarily seeking an oomph girl or a grandmother. [There are to be two winners—one between 15 and 25 and one over 25.]

Parts are to be written into the script to fit the talents, the acting ability, and the personality of the two winners. The winners are to get contracts for two weeks each at $112.50 a week with all expenses paid while in Chicago.

The search started on April 15 with local auditions to be held in each of the 85 cities and towns carrying the "Carters" program. Then, recordings of the voices of the local winners will go to regional centers, and those of the regional winners will go to Chicago for the national selections. Chairman of the national judges' committee will be Virginia Payne, who plays the starring rôle of "Carrie Carter" on the "Carters" program.

Constipation Relief That Also Pepsin-izes Stomach
When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food and your bowels don't move. So you need both Pepsin to help break up fast that rich undigested food in your stomach, and Laxative Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels. So be sure your laxative also contains Pepsin. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative, because its Syrup Pepsin helps you gain that wonderful stomach comfort, while the Laxative Senna moves your bowels. Tests prove the power of Pepsin to dissolve those lumps of undigested protein food which may linger in your stomach, to cause belching, gastric acidity and nausea. This is how pepsinizing your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. So see how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also puts Pepsin to work on that stomach discomfort, too. Even finicky children love to taste this pleasant family laxative. SCHOOLS START SPRING CLEANUP DRIVE THIS WEEK

Contests Spur Students in Civic Work.

Spring housecleaning, 1940, gets under way tomorrow with thousands of Chicago High school students and grade school pupils assisting in the annual city renovation. The annual scrubbing, dusting, brushing, and painting will continue to May 4 in a campaign that includes slogans, contests, and parties.

The community service committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce sponsored a slogan contest in preparation for the drive. Irene Murdock, senior at McKinley High school, sent in the winning slogan, "Team Up with Clean Up," which will be used to focus city-wide attention on the campaign. The Chicago board of education is coöperating with the community service committee to encourage cleanup programs.

Pupils Win Mention.

Southwest elementary school pupils who won honorable mention in the slogan contest are: Alfred Pentis, Armour school; Grace Messina, Gunsaulus; William Cusick, Gage Park; Norman Zibell, Bass; Grace Frey, Kershaw; Caroline Thackston, Tonti, and Harry Warner, Mount Greenwood.

The community service committee in coöperation with the art department of the Chicago public schools also conducted a poster contest. High school students winning honorable mention are: Margaret Stone and Henry Godshall, both of Fenger; Don Wagner, Calumet; Jerry Monti, Harper; William Rosel, Lindblom, and Virginia Gemeny, Doris Engstrom, and Elsie Boerner, all of Parker.

Chester Francis, a senior, and Connie Pruitt, a junior, have been elected king and queen of the clean-up work at Calumet High school. They will be crowned at an assembly on Friday morning, and they'll march in a parade Friday afternoon. They'll reign at a dance in the Ridge Park fieldhouse Saturday evening.

Emphasis in Spring.

The clean-up campaign is a year 'round project, but special emphasis is placed on the spring drive. Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of Chicago schools, said of the plan: "The association is furnishing us with a vehicle for the teaching of practical citizenship."

Freshmen at Armour Tech to Dance Friday Evening

Freshmen at Armour Institute of Technology will hold a "Green Cap Dance" at the Knickerbocker hotel beginning at 9:30 o'clock Friday evening. John E. Peterson is chairman.

Wins a Recital

Miss Marilyn Hiskey of 2829 East 76th place is one of the two winners of the talent contest sponsored recently by the Greater South Side Four Arts league. CALUMET CHIEF BEGAN CAREER 23 YEARS AGO

Glenn Worst Takes Over at High School.

Glenn Worst, new principal at Calumet High school, knows his school work from the ABC's to the college degree alphabet. He began his career 23 years ago in Chicago's elementary schools. He was assistant to President John Bartky of Chicago Teachers college for 18 months before going to Calumet recently. He succeeds Elzy Downey, retired.

Glenn Worst.

Teaching is a tradition in the Worst family. Glenn Worst is a nephew of Edward F. Worst, now retired, former manual training supervisor for the city.

Degree from Loyola.

The Calumet principal was reared in Plainfield, Ill. He won a Ph.B. in education at Loyola university and earned his master's degree there, also. He is now studying for his doctorate at Northwestern.

Beginning as an elementary school teacher, Mr. Worst was transferred to the continuation schools. He is not a newcomer to Calumet, for he was a mechanical drawing and history teacher there from 1931 to 1936. After that, he was head teacher in charge at Jungman school, 18th and Throop streets. Then he became assistant principal at Bowen High school, and he went from there to Teachers college.

Must Explain Absences.

Worst is insistent upon regular attendance in classes. Five days' absence, whether consecutive or scattered, must be explained by parents. There are 4,700 boys and girls enrolled at Calumet, and Mr. Worst wants 4,700 boys and girls there or good reasons why they aren't.

He insists on meeting a few fathers now and then. When a student is suspended, Mr. Worst asks that the father call around to talk over reinstatement. This method draws both parents nearer to the school and its activity, Mr. Worst believes.

The principal resides at 78th street and Winchester avenue.

News and Queries Within and Without the Church —A Religious Voice of the People— Edited by the Rev. John Evans

". . . Before criticizing your wife's faults remember that it may have been those very defects which prevented her from catching a better husband."

Dr. Oswald W. S. McCall.

That is the warning of Dr. Oswald W. S. McCall, pastor of New First Congregational church, Ashland avenue and Washington boulevard, as, in a new pastor's journal, Sermons in Brief, published in New York, he argues that phobias, neuroses, psychiatrists, and psychologists can be forgotten in face of plain questions, such as:

"Should the husband rule in the home, or should the wife?

"If you wish an answer to such a tormenting question—or is it an entertaining question?—to come from actual case histories as our useful fashion now is, here's one: 'Before he was married he assured his friends he would be the boss in his own house or know the reason why. Now he knows the reason why.'"

The McCall contribution, called "Specters of the Mind," deals with religion's answer to phobias, neuroses, and the multitude of authors on morbid psychology who write in learned terms when, as Dr. McCall suggests, plain words may be better. The Chicago pastor is in good company in the magazine—Karl Barth, Archbishop Spellman, Archbishop Temple of York, Rabbi Wolsey, Muriel Lester, Archbishop Glennon, and Bishop Manning!

Sermons in Brief is edited monthly by friend Herbert H. Rugg, who used to be in charge of national congregational publicity.

Capt. Roland R. Bach, resident chaplain of the 6th corps area, U. S. A., leads a 9:30 o'clock young adult discussion group this morning at Jackson Boulevard Christian church on the subject "The Army and Peace." . . . Harry G. Saulnier of Pacific Garden Mission and Chicagoland Easter Sunrise service, speaks of a June 2 rally of 100,000 Christians in Soldiers' field with Gov. Luren A. Dickinson of Michigan as a speaker. . . . A committee of 100 in charge held 24 hour prayer meeting in Garrick hall Friday and Saturday in preparation for the rally.

When the Rev. E. M. Hegge of Oak Park Norwegian Lutheran church speaks this morning on the subject "Humanity's Archenemy—War!" he will speak out of experience. A world war veteran, in 1924-'27 he was a war correspondent in China for Peking and Hankow newspapers. Special prayers for Scandinavia this morning also.

Homer Rodeheaver will lead the singing tonight at First Methodist church, Chicago temple. Yes, it's the Homer Rodeheaver of trombone and voice you'll remember from Billy Sunday revival days. Dr. John Thompson, pastor of the skyscraper church, said that Rodey [as Billy Sunday called him] will not only lead a service of song, but also preach a sermon. At 3 this afternoon Rodeheaver will be at St. James Methodist church, 46th street and Ellis avenue.

Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch announces the meeting of the National Conference of Catholic Charities for Chicago beginning Nov. 20. The national meeting of Societies of St. Vincent de Paul will meet concurrently.

MAP LILAC SHARING DRIVE THIS WEEK

Fantasy and Skill to Lure Throngs.

What ar ounts to the Golden Gloves in the universal sport of kite flying will take place next Saturday morning in Grant park.

Three hundred and seventy-two semi-finals winners in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE kite contest will fly in the grand finals for the championship of Chicagoland. As in the Golden Gloves boxing tournaments, eight champions are to be crowned, one for each event.

Several thousand spectators are expected to gather at Hutchinson field near Balbo drive in Grant park to watch the 1940 championship finals. The contest, under co-sponsorship of the park district, will get under way at 10 o'clock in the morning. It is not expected to end before 1 o'clock. In the event of rain the grand finals will be held over to Saturday, May 4.

Each Makes Own Kite.

Spectators will see the city's most skillful kite flyers, boys and girls and adults, who have been selected from more than 5,000 preliminary contestants at local parks, and who have won in semi-finals held in six sections of the city. These contestants, who have been reduced to 372, are the most expert kite flyers in Chicagoland. Each has made his own kite, for the most part with materials furnished free in park district fieldhouses.

To the eight winners of the contest, will go eight loving cup trophies donated by THE TRIBUNE, as precious to kite flyers as the Golden Gloves insignias are to amateur boxers. Contestants will compete in artistic, novelty, solo box, messenger, mechanical winding, handwriting, strongest pulling, and largest kite events. To the runners-up and third, fourth, fifth, and sixth place winners, the park district will award ribbons.

More than a contest of skill, it will be a spectacle of color and creative ingenuity. Kites of all sizes and shapes will be dancing in the breeze at the ends of 75 yards of string, pirouetting and soaring before the judges.

Pinocchio and Gulliver.

There will be Pinocchio kites, kites depicting Gulliver's travels, huge tongued dragons, stately box kites, kites shaped like fish, stars and crescents, plain bow kites and Confucius kites blazoned with 1940 westernized orientalisms.

On the field a first aid station is to be set up for kites that are damaged in flight. Contestants will be able to repair their kites with equipment furnished by the park district.

F. E. Kardes, park district supervisor of crafts, will be contest director. S. J. Meuris is assistant director. R. V. Pierce will judge the artistic, novelty, strongest pulling, and largest kite events. Other judges are Paul Tornheim, handwinding; Frank Nekimken, mechanical winding; O. C. Sonntag, solo box kite, and J. E. Rosich, E. D. Harris, and R. C. Mitchell, messenger event.

Lend Old World Color to Tilden Circus

If you know Ukrainian mythology, you'll understand this as a scene from "Tanya's Wedding." The play is part of the annual circus to be presented by Tilden Technical High school in its auditorium, 4747 Union avenue, Thursday evening. Ruth Stevens (seated) of Bowen High school enacts the role of Tanya and John Yarmola of Tilden is the groom. Elaine Watts of Bowen is cast as a dancer and Maurice Husayko of Tilden is the fiddler. Three hundred Tilden students will participate in the circus, which will last from 7 until 11 o'clock. The show also will include acts and stunts in the gymnasium and the school building. Citizens' Rally Salutes Wells High for Week

Students of one of Chicago's youngest public high schools, Wells, located at 936 North Ashland avenue, will be guests Wednesday night at the fourth of a weekly series of radio half hour programs entitled "Citizens of Tomorrow," heard on W-G-N and sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. The program starts at 7 o'clock. Six hundred students and their principal, Dr. Paul R. Pierce, will attend the entertainment in the audience studio of W-G-N. Forty vocalists from the choral department, directed by Mrs. Myra Cook, will sing.

Dr. Paul R. Pierce.

The appearance of Wells High school will follow the debut of Lake View, Austin, and Parker on W-G-N. Next week Steinmetz will take over the half hour program. As special guests Wednesday night, "Charlie Jones," the school engineer of the "Citizens of Tomorrow" cast, has invited the school engineer-custodians of the 39 high schools in Chicago. With them will be John Howatt, chief engineer of the Chicago board of education, who will be introduced by Philip Maxwell of THE TRIBUNE's editorial staff, who plays the rôle of "The Principal" and is master of ceremonies on the program.

Jerry to Have Guests.

"Jerry" Gregory, the 16 year old senior of all Chicagoland high schools, will be back on the program after her turning the tables last week on Mr. Maxwell in a "news quiz" which also stumped the announcer of the broadcast, Pierre Andre. "Jerry," who in real life attends Maine Township High school, has quite a time attending rehearsals and keeping up her high grades which have marked her as an outstanding student. In her honor 30 students from Maine High with their dean, Einar J. Anderson, will attend the broadcast.

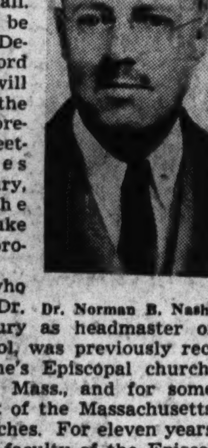
Honor Roll Students.

On each Wednesday night's program several Chicagoland students who have achieved success in their work are mentioned by Mr. Maxwell.

Each Wednesday night after the broadcast the guests are shown the talking movie film, "Trees to Tribunes," and then a smaller group is taken on a tour of Tribune Tower. Most of these students are from classes in journalism. Coöperating each week with THE TRIBUNE in the presentation of "Citizens of Tomorrow" are the music and radio departments of the Chicago public schools.

NEW ENGLAND SCHOOL HEADMASTER TO GIVE SUNDAY EVENING TALK

Dr. Norman B. Nash, headmaster of St. Paul's school, Concord, N. H., will make his first appearance before the audience of the Sunday Evening club tonight in Orchestra hall. His topic will be "Ambition or Devotion." Clifford W. Barnes will introduce the speaker and preside at the meeting. Charles Ward Seabury, trustee of the club, will take part in the program.



Dr. Norman B. Nash.

Dr. Nash, who succeeded Dr. Samuel S. Drury as headmaster of St. Paul's school, was previously rector of St. Anne's Episcopal church, South Lincoln, Mass., and for some years president of the Massachusetts council of churches. For eleven years he was on the faculty of the Episcopal theological seminary at Cambridge, Mass. During the world war he served in the A. E. F. as lieutenant in the 150th Field Artillery.

Church Recalls Its Beginning in Prison Camp

In 1865 several thousand confederate prisoners and a few score union guards in Camp Douglas agreed on one question—they needed a place for spiritual worship. Discussion grew into action and, under the leadership of the chaplain, the Rev. E. B. Tuttle, who succeeded in obtaining $2,300 from the government for the project, they busied themselves erecting a chapel inside the camp.

The Rev. W. D. McLean.

Next Thursday St. Mark's Episcopal church, 4427 Drexel boulevard, the direct descendant of that chapel, will celebrate its 75th anniversary with special services and a dinner. In charge of the observance, which is on St. Mark's day, will be the Rev. William Douglas McLean, 11th successor of the Rev. Mr. Tuttle as rector.

List Three Services.

Services will be held at 7 and 10:30 o'clock Thursday morning and at 8 o'clock in the evening. The Rev. Mr. McLean will preach the sermon at the early service and his son, the Rev. William D. McLean Jr., army chaplain stationed at Fort Barrancas, Fla., will be heard in the 10:30 o'clock service. The evening sermon will be given by the Rt. Rev. Edwin J. Randall, suffragan bishop of Chicago.

Two hundred persons are expected to attend the banquet at 6:30 o'clock which is being given by the Woman's guild of the congregation. Mrs. George Putnam, 4708 Drexel boulevard, is president of the organization, assisted by Mrs. Alec Harper, 5214 Kimbark avenue, vice president, and Mrs. Frank Thomas, 4462 Woodlawn avenue, treasurer-secretary.

Location of Camp.

Camp Douglas was situated on the west side of Cottage Grove avenue from 31st to 35th streets and westward to South Park avenue. After the war the chapel, then on the outskirts of the city, was organized as St. Mark's congregation.

In 1867, to accommodate the overflowing crowds the services were attracting, a new church was built at Cottage Grove avenue and 36th street. With slight remodeling the building continued as St. Mark's church until 1918, when the present location was selected.

YOUNG AMERICA HAS SPOTLIGHT IN WEEK'S NEWS

Schools, Parks Plan Special Events.

Chicago's annual Youth week—designed to illuminate the needs of more than a million local boys and girls, and to point the way toward satisfying them—will begin tomorrow and continue for seven more days.

Officially proclaimed by Mayor Kelly, the week will offer a diversified program reaching into almost every school, park, playground, settlement, club and church in each of the city's 75 communities. Individual programs will stress the importance of youths and adults working and thinking in harmony. Maj. John L. Griffith, chairman of the Youth week committee, has urged that every adult participate actively in his neighborhood program, in order to insure the fullest success of the plan.

Has Seven Aims.

Seven primary needs will be emphasized, according to the schedule outlined by Maj. Griffith. They are: [1] adequate health programs, [2] sound educational opportunities, [3] satisfying recreational experiences, [4] training for democratic living, [5] opportunities for economic security [6], racial and religious tolerance, and [7] maintenance of peace.

The program will open appropriately tomorrow when Mayor Kelly turns over his own job, together with those of the police commissioner, corporation counsel, fire marshal, fire prevention chief, health commissioner and chief justice of the Municipal court, to Chicago boys, who will rule until noon.

The boys chosen are Jack Michlin, mayor; Jordan Sieband, police commissioner; Ray Del Fava, fire marshal; Angelo Rico, fire prevention chief; Walter Thornton, health commissioner; Harry Kamlin, corporation counsel, and Robert Slaber, chief justice of the Municipal court. In addition, another group of boys will sit as advisers to judges in eight branches of the Municipal court.

Luncheon on Friday.

Climax of the educational phase of the program will occur Friday at a special civic assembly luncheon to be held under the sponsorship of the Executive's club in Hotel Sherman. On that occasion, it has been announced by Dr. Johnson, superintendent of schools, the outstanding boys and girls selected from all of the Chicago high schools' graduating classes will be special guests.

Tomorrow more than 60,000 local P.-T. A. members will help promote "Home and Family Day." Families will be asked to practice the P.-T. A. slogan, "The Family That Plans Together, Plays Together—the Family that Plays Together, Stays Together."

"Health and Athletics" will be publicized Tuesday when open house will be held in all school gymnasiums, parks and playgrounds.

Day for Job Study.

Wednesday will be known as "Vocation and Industry" day. Members of the Association of Commerce, directed by Royal D. Lee, and the Junior Association of Commerce, directed by Albert Hecht Jr., will try to help youth decide which rules should govern the wise choice of a career.

On Thursday city-wide attention will be called to the value of groups which encourage and further creative activities, pointing out benefits both to the individual and the community. William E. Poore, assistant superintendent of schools, will head the school and citizenship program Friday, which will indicate the need of an appreciation of Americanism by youth.

More than 150,000 boys and girls are expected to enter into the spirit of "Out-of-doors and Playground Day" on Saturday.

Church Day Program.

The Rev. L. P. Jensen, chairman of "Church Day," Sunday, has announced that the city's churches will stress the importance of church to youth and youth to church. Boy and Girl Scouts will attend services in uniform.

Jack Elder, director of athletics for the Catholic Youth organization, has announced that all C. Y. O. centers will participate in each day of Youth week.

More than 200 students will participate in the Fenger High school "Talent Show" as part of Youth week on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings. At Bowen High school special co-recreational game work will be featured on Tuesday, together with the finals of the volleyball contest.

APPARENTLY Our Towner Philip Fusco, who left an enviable extracurricular activity record at Leo High school a few years ago, has not slowed his pace in college. Word comes from Loras college, Dubuque, Ia., that the Fusco name is becoming a synonym for hustle around the campus, since Philip is sports editor of the college newspaper, a member of the varsity debating team, and a busy actor in the dramatic society. He also holds the sports editor's position on the "Purgold," school yearbook, and last year was undergraduate manager of athletics. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fusco, 7018 Lowe avenue.

He was presented with a medal and certificate by the National Safety Council of America in a special program at Froebel High school auditorium. The award is given for saving a life by the Schafer prone pressure method of resuscitation.

Fred Bednar.

He went to work May 7, 1890, at the Chicago Bridge and Iron company. His specific job now is helper on No. 78 punch. His son, Karl, works in the same plant. His grandson, Robert Boettcher, is a welder there, and his son-in-law, Ernest Johnson, is employed in the plant storeroom. The company is planning an anniversary party for Boettcher.

90 CLUBS TO AID IN ASSEMBLING SPRING BLOOMS

Seek Blossoms from Every Grower.

What is the best way to cut lilac blossoms to prevent injury to the bushes? How can cut flowers be treated to delay their wilting? These questions are answered in a story and picture on page 4.

BY HOMER NIESZ.

While cool weather last week was further retarding the opening of lilac flowering buds in Chicagoland, officials of the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild furthered plans to distribute the blooms to sick and shutins in the city's hospitals in the twelfth annual "Share Your Lilacs" campaign.

The guild and THE TRIBUNE cooperate each year with lilac growers in sharing the lilac blossoms with the sick. Last year the bouquets were taken to 147 hospitals, settlement houses, old people's homes, and other institutions, caring for more than 22,000 patients.

Guild officials last week appointed committees to work with 90 community and garden clubs in the Chicago flower area in gathering the lilacs and loading them on suburban trains for free transportation to the city. The clubs have more than 2,000 members.

Will Meet Tuesday.

The guild committees of the garden clubs and the club presidents are to meet at luncheon Tuesday noon in Carson, Pirie, Scott tearoom to complete their organization for lilac day and to plan distribution of fruits and flowers to charity patients thruout the summer. It is only on lilac days that the guild attempts to take bouquets to all hospitals in the city.

The date for gathering and distributing the lilacs will be announced as soon as officials can determine when most of the blooms will be open. Theodore V. Purcell of Evanston, president of the guild, said yesterday the date likely would be later than usual because of the retarded spring season. Most years the blossoms are ready to cut around the middle of May.

Mr. Purcell said that, as in other years, all who have lilac bushes, whether few or many, are invited to use the guild's organization in sharing the blooms with the sick. Guild committees of garden clubs will supervise the assembling of the flowers at suburban railroad stations. Trains will bring them free to stations in the city where fleets of Tribune trucks will pick them up and take them to hospitals.

Mrs. Grace Heads Work.

Mrs. Stanley D. Grace of Highland Park is chairman of the guild's general committee that will direct the work this year. She formerly was a division chairman in charge of the northern Milwaukee division of the Northwestern railroad area. Her work as division chairman has been assigned to Mrs. Warner K. Nelson of Glencoe.

Working under the various division chairmen's direction are guild chairmen, representing the suburban and community garden clubs. A few still are to be selected. Names and addresses of the club presidents and guild chairmen in this section are:

SAFETY FOR STUDENTS.

It was with the greatest pleasure and relief that I heard Mayor Kelly's Keep Chicago Safe committee is going to send a man out to Hirsch High school to tell the students about traffic safety. What they don't know about safety on the streets would fill our main public library.

If those kids weren't so young I'd think they were trying to commit suicide, the way they throw themselves in front of autos, especially on bicycles. I have stopped driving my little daughter to school, because every time I get within a few blocks from the place I encounter children who seem to be staging a bicycle race directly in my path and when I tell them to watch where they're going they either pay no attention or laugh right in my face.

I hope the man from Mayor Kelly's safety committee tells them something good about riding bicycles, and I hope they remember it. MRS. E. P. Z.

LIKES SPEED LIMIT.

Congratulations Ald. Olin and the south area council of the Chicago Motor club for securing the 25 mile per hour speed limit signs on 87th street between Cottage Grove and Stony Island avenue. It's a real protection for us out here, especially since we hear policemen have been assigned to enforce the new ruling.

"GRATEFUL."

REPORT REVEALS MOTOR HAZARDS IN SOUTH AREA

The scout car staff of the Chicago Motor club discovered several dangerous traffic hazards in its jaunt thru the far south side last week in coöperation with South Area council leaders. As a result of such scouting trips in the city and suburbs by the club, area councils receive reports and send them to city, state, and county highway departments with suggested remedies.

Most important of the problems uncovered are:

George Barton, club engineer, recommends the installation of reflector posts and sodium vapor lights at 87th street and Cicero avenue to warn motorists of the impending curves and to assist in their vision at the crossing. The S-curve at this junction has been the cause of a number of fatalities.

Modern safety lighting is needed from a point west of Eggleston avenue along 87th street to a point east of the Belt railway. Club engineers also recommend the construction of a fence between the car tracks to outline the curve for drivers.

Complete repavement of 106th street from Indianapolis boulevard to Bensley avenue is needed, as has been pointed out at council meetings by Ald. William A. Rowan [10th]. The request is before the Cook county board.

Recently Married

Miss Virginia Gilberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Gilberg of Whiting, was married recently to W. Stanley O'Hair of Canton, O., in the Whiting First Methodist church. Both are graduates of Indiana university.

LAUDS TEACHING AS HE PREPARES TO QUIT FIELD

A. M. Nichelson, Head of Hirsch, to Retire.

BY PAUL HEALY.

Stalwart, silver-haired Arthur M. Nichelson, who thinks teaching is "the greatest job in the world," will retire as principal of Hirsch High school on Tuesday, the day before his 65th birthday. The departure will end 37 years of school work, including 13 years in charge of smaller schools and 12 years as "the people's choice" at Hirsch, 7740 Ingleside avenue.

Arthur Nichelson.

"I've had a wonderful time," he says, in retrospect, "Yes—I feel pretty much as Mr. Chips did in that beautiful moving picture. I love to see a girl or boy develop, physically, morally, and mentally, and the greatest compensation I've had is the joy of working with them and seeing them get ahead. They're all so spirited, so active, and full of life!"

Frog Pond Area.

When Mr. Nichelson came to Hirsch the surrounding community was "just a frog pond and a lot of open prairie." Today, in the fast developing neighborhoods which have since bloomed around it, he is a popular, highly respected force, and in the high school which has swelled to an enrollment of 3,300 boys and girls he presides over an admiring student body. Faculty members are quick to describe him as "considerate, kind, and fatherly."

In tribute to his popularity, students have planned a special program for him in the school Tuesday and the faculty will fête him at a banquet Wednesday evening in the Congress hotel. The arrangements committee for the latter, consisting of Miss Suzanne Fisher, Miss Sue Mechterscheimer, Miss Alice Larson, and Russell McNally, expect well over 100 persons to attend, including the principals of many city high schools.

Tho most of his career has been passed supervising teachers, he still prefers to regard himself as a teacher, or a kind of head teacher. He feels it is his duty to keep in as close touch with each student as possible.

He Wants Results.

"I have no particular theory about others' teaching," he says. "I like to have a teacher feel that he or she can make use of a personal method or technique as long as it is on sound lines. What I want is results; a principal should be a sort of general director. However, I think the finest quality an instructor can have is sympathy and understanding of the child. Our problem today is to fit the curriculum to the students, dividing them into those who intend to go to college and those who don't."

Mr. Nichelson doesn't know specifically why he wanted to be a teacher, except that his father, an aunt, and two uncles had chosen such careers and he never thought of any other. Born in Allerton, Ia., his was educated at Allerton High school and Iowa State Teachers college, and took his master of arts degree at the University of Chicago.

After a year of country school teaching, he became principal of the school in Sioux City, Ia., and five years later he moved to Montana where he taught for three years in Great Falls.

In 1912 his local career began as superintendent of schools in Elmhurst. Three years later he went to Crane Tech to teach economics and government. In 1921 he was made principal of the Whittier elementary school, Lincoln avenue at 23d street, and four years later occupied the same rôle at the Howland elementary school, 16th street and Spaulding avenue, before coming to Hirsch, which was a junior high in 1929.

Most Interesting Event.

Probably the most interesting event of his career occurred in 1933 after Hirsch had suddenly become a senior high during the summer.

"On the first day of school in September," he recalls, "about 1,000 additional boys and girls appeared for school, most of them without transfers and few of them knowing what they were supposed to take. Needed for the bigger enrollment were 95 teachers and actually available were only 60, of whom 18 were former elementary school principals and 17 were former junior college instructors. Somehow or other we managed to organize ourselves in about one week."

A lover of literature, he nevertheless dislikes pedants and is enthusiastic about outdoor sports. Age has forced him to give up baseball, which he preferred as a boy in Iowa, but he has retained his interest in swimming, golfing, tennis, horseback riding, and fishing. He also enjoys the music of Heifetz and Kreisler and some radio programs. At his home, 154 North Mason avenue, his hobby is gardening.

Gary Girl Has Part in Play

[Victor Studio.]

Miss Lola Lehman of Gary will play the leading role in the Gary Civic theater's production of "Accent on Youth" beginning this evening at the group's playhouse, 2323 West 11th avenue. The play will run continuously up to and including next Sunday evening.

Wins a Recital

Miss Marilyn Hiskey of 2829 East 76th place is one of the two winners of the talent contest sponsored recently by the Greater South Side Four Arts league. With Irving Davidson of 1640 East 76th street, the other winner, she will be given a formal recital debut by the league next month. Miss Hiskey, a student at Loretto academy, plays the violin; Mr. Davidson is a bass-baritone. They survived a field of about 100 nonprofessional singers and musicians.

ILLINOIS MUSIC UNITS TO OFFER EIGHT CONCERTS

Eight concerts will be given in south side schools this week by five units of the Illinois music project. The Illinois Concert band will play Tuesday at the Avalon Park school, 8045 Kenwood avenue, and Thursday at the Sherwood school, 245 West 57th street.

The Columbia Concert band will play tomorrow at Doolittle school, 535 East 35th street; Tuesday at the Carter school, 5740 South Michigan avenue; and Wednesday at the Felsenthal school, 4101 South Calumet avenue.

The Dearborn Concert orchestra will play at the Scott school, 6435 South Blackstone avenue, Tuesday, and the Jubilee Singers will appear at Bright school, 10740 South Calhoun avenue, Tuesday.

On Friday the Chicago Operetta company will be heard at the Burke school, 5356 South Park way, under the sponsorship of the P.-T. A.

WOODLAWN NO. 1 CITIZEN (WOMAN) WILL BE FETED

Mrs. William Rothman a Resident Since 1895.

Mrs. William Rothman, as Woodlawn's "most distinguished citizen," will be fêted by 500 civic, educational and religious representatives of the community at 6:30 o'clock tomorrow evening in the Hayes hotel, 64th street and University avenue. In addition to community singing, Mrs. Rothman's hobby, the program will feature the story of her 45 years of service to Woodlawn as told by banquet members.

Mrs. William Rothman. [Helen Webster Studio.]

Mrs. Howard L. Ray and Mrs. Paul I. Pierson are chairman and co-chairman of the affair. Preliminary arrangements were made by a committee headed by Mrs. Ray and consisting of Miss Grace Chladek, Miss Netta B. Goss, Miss Verna Pierson, Miss Julia Baker, Miss Lenora Whittier, Miss Alma McMahill, Miss Elaine Miner, John Hayes, Leo Heid, A. E. Oleson, Albert Chapman, G. Williams Skeeles Jr., and Dr. George Knapp.

Daughter to Speak.

Mrs. Rothman's home life will be described by her daughter, Mrs. Harold Baker of Shaker Heights, O., and as a climax to the program she will be presented with a parchment naming her Woodlawn's No. 1 lady and signed by the dinner guests. Other guests, representing organizations to which Mrs. Rothman belongs, will relate how she came from Pontiac, Ill., in Sept., 1895, and with her husband, Attorney William Rothman, took an active part in the development of the Woodlawn section.

She became a member of the Hyde Park Baptist church 25 years ago. Since then the young people of the church have held Christmas eve parties at the Rothman residence at 6148 Woodlawn avenue and have sung Christmas carols and sipped sweet cider before the huge living room fireplace.

Aided Sunday School.

For 18 years Mrs. Rothman was superintendent of the primary department of the Sabbath school and for many years she was president of the Woman's association.

Chosen to be the first president of the Associated Clubs of Woodlawn, which was organized in 1927, she also has been chief executive of the Woodlawn League of Women Voters, the Arche club, and P. E. O. chapter. She was chairman of women's activities of the Woodlawn Golden Jubilee last year and is a member of the board of directors of the Woodlawn Property Owners' league.

The concert will be part of the current Young Artists' series. He will play the first movement of Saint-Saëns' third violin concerto with the orchestra, which is directed by Ralph Cissne and sponsored by the Illinois Music project.

NOT YET 7, HE'S VETERAN OF TWO SEA TRIPS ALONE

War Sends Young Gunnar Back to Parents.

He grew two inches, lost two teeth, and forgot English. That is the summary of Gunnar Jenson's 19 month visit with his maternal and paternal grandparents in Skutskar, Sweden.

Gunnar Jenson.

Gunnar was born in Chicago Heights Sept. 20, 1933, the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Jenson. When he was 4 years old his parents decided to send him back to their native country so that his grandparents and other relatives might see him. A friend of theirs left for New York with the little boy on July 21, 1938. In New York the child was put aboard the Gripsholm in care of the nurse on the ship.

War Changes Plans.

He doesn't remember much about the trip over. He cried when his relatives met him at the boat, but, like a good little Viking, he soon did away with the tears and decided to enjoy himself.

He learned to chatter in Swedish, and he outgrew his clothes. His relatives made him small copies of Swedish sailors' suits. His parents planned to go to Sweden themselves this spring, but the war changed all that. They sent for their little boy, and once more Gunnar set sail all by himself.

Learns English Again.

Now Gunnar is learning English again. He can understand it fairly well, but he still does his talking in Swedish. His parents formerly resided at 1410 Park avenue, Chicago Heights. He and his mother are now at 4950 Chicago Beach drive until they find another apartment in Chicago Heights.

MODERN DUPLEX HOUSE CONCEALS TRUE IDENTITY

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Just before spring came, a bit reluctantly, from around the corner this year, Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Woods moved into their new home at 6026 Bloomingdale avenue. At approximately the same time their aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. De Perro, moved into their new home at 6028 Bloomingdale.

As it happens, the two residences are under one roof, for the dwelling is a duplex town house, and a very good looking house, we can honestly say.

The architect, Martin H. Braun, 1827 North McVicker avenue, has carried out the exterior walls in brick; tan and brown shades predominate, and the exterior trim, windows and doors have been painted an off white.

Advantages Are Told.

There are many definite assets to the modern duplex town house. Economy of land is one. And there is the impression of greater size since two small homes under one roof seem larger than a one size home of the same cubic content. Then, too, with a finely designed duplex on a 50 foot lot, each occupant pays for only 25 feet, is taxed for only 25 feet, and yet has the enjoyment of wide front and back lawns.

This is a home where every square foot of the interior has been made to give an excellent account of itself.

Mrs. Woods showed me thru her home the day I visited the duplex. She is a young woman who has every reason to be proud of her house. There are many interesting features upstairs and down, and Mrs. Woods has given the interior an atmosphere of unusual appeal.

Closet Near Door.

As you enter the hallway you see a convenient guest closet directly opposite the entrance door, and at the left there is the living room, with dining room beyond and an arch between.

The living room walls have been painted and stippled an off peach, while the dining room is papered, and the oak floors have a fine, natural finish.

The kitchen walls are painted an off white, and combine happily with white cabinets and blue linoleum top and blue linoleum floor. The breakfast set is carried out in lively red tones. And the cabinet spaces are a joy to behold—and to use. The cabinets over the sink have adjustable shelves, and the cases under the work top surfaces have sliding shelves which pull out for greater working convenience.

Glass Block Over Tub.

There are Venetian blinds at all the windows and glass block has been used at several strategic points, including a panel over the tub in the bathroom.

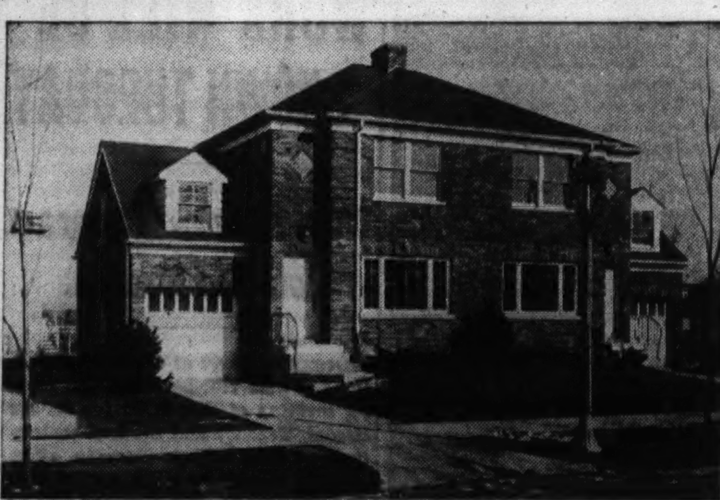
Halfway up the stairs which lead to the second floor there are the electric door chimes, recessed in the wall. And at the right a cozy studio den, which is placed over the garage. This room could be used as a bedroom equally well. And it has the advantage of closet space which runs the entire width of the room.

Half a flight farther up is the second floor, with its two bedrooms and bath.

The master bedroom has an attractive small alcove corner and its walls have an unusual treatment. Walls on two of its sides are painted blue, and the other two walls have a white paper with a blue figure. The ceiling is a dark blue. The second bedroom is carried out with a yellow papered wall with a yellow ceiling. Light and sunny, these rooms!

Thruout the house the interior doors are the flush type of birch veneer, with a shimmering natural finish, and the trim around doors and windows has been specially designed.

Double Feature Town House



The handsome new duplex town home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Woods and Mr. and Mrs. DePerro at 6026 and 6028 Bloomingdale avenue. There are many interesting features to this two family dwelling, not the least a study den over each garage. The exterior walls are of brick in shades of tan and deep brown. Architect, Martin H. Braun, 1827 North McVicker avenue, Chicago.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, April 22.

Without suitable soil, plants will not do well; poor soil must be corrected by adding plant food and humus. Humus improves the soil, holds moisture, aids in the manufacture of plant fod, and provides the best conditions for plant growth. Wherever there is room for a compost heap it should be kept going at all times. Every scrap of grass, clippings, manures, soft weeds, etc., should be put in the compost. Humus alone will not always supply all of the elements needed for growth. Analyze the soil to determine what elements are deficient and supply them with commercial fertilizers.

Tuesday, April 23.

Some annuals may be grown in a shady part of the garden, if the shade is not too dense. These include the aster, forget-me-not, nemophila, pansy, snapdragon, wishbone plant or torenia, sweet alyssum, and monkey flower. It is late to sow pansy seed, but short, stock plants can be obtained easily from supply houses. Seedlings raised in boxes are greatly benefited by transplanting at least once. Use annual vines wherever they can be used for they grow rapidly, cover unsightly objects or hide poor views if given some support, and they add much to the appearance of any place. The monvine is one of the best. Pot plants can be purchased. The hyacinth bean has large purplish beans and does well on the wire fence. Morning glories, cypress vine, scarlet runner, balsam apple, and cardinal flower all have a place. Sweet peas are best grown in full sun and supported with wire or brush.

Wednesday, April 24.

Fast growing annuals that require little attention include the alyssum, cosmos, marigold, larkspur, candytuft, nasturtium, mourning bride, pot marigold, and bachelor buttons. Keep all withered flowers removed to prevent formation of seed. Plant more of the graceful grasses for bouquets. They include cloud grass, quaking grass, Job's tears, fountain grass, and ruppell. All of these are easily grown and do best in full sun. A group in perennial borders looks well.

Thursday, April 25.

A good soil for most plants consists of about one-half loamy garden soil, one-quarter rooted leafmold, some decomposed cow manure, and one-quarter sand. If the manure is unavailable, a four inch pot of high grade complete commercial fertilizer mixed with each wheelbarrow of soil is excellent. Do not put small plants in large pot; wait until the roots touch the sides of the pots and then shift. Try and have a new kind of plant or one you never have grown for it adds interest. House plants need food when growing. Apply a complete commercial food at intervals of from three to four weeks.

Friday, April 26.

Gardeners who expect to plant a new perennial garden this spring should see that the soil is well prepared because of the permanent nature of the plants. Dig the soil to a depth of a foot or more and work in a complete commercial plant food; well decayed manures can be used if they are available. Perennials delight in a deep, well drained location. The first year a few plants should be purchased and seeds of other kinds sown. Sowing seeds in April or May will give good plants that can be transplanted to permanent beds next fall. Seedlings should be transplanted by late June.

Saturday, April 27.

Most perennials can be propagated by dividing the roots in early spring. Others can be increased by root cuttings taken during the middle to late summer. When a young tree is planted see that it has a guard to prevent injury from children or from the lawn mower. An injury to the trunk should be repaired immediately by cutting out all mutilated sections to the cambium and painting with coal tar. When ordering a tree for the yard select one with a straight trunk, without a crotch.

LOVE FOR LILACS IS TRADITION OF AMERICAN LIFE

Sprouts Brought West in Covered Wagons.

Man's love for the lilac has been reflected in every step in the development of America. The Morton arboretum has traced the spread of the flower from the days it was brought to New England by the colonists.

The Arboretum reports that "a few carefully protected lilac sprouts were usually tucked away somewhere in the covered wagons of these pioneers as they set out to conquer the wildernesses of the west. Even today one may recognize old home sites by the remaining lilac clumps which still guard forgotten doorways."

Bushes Bloom Profusely.

The lilac has been found to be exceedingly tolerant of soils and exposures. It blooms profusely in the Chicagoland setting. Yet, if future flowering is to be considered there are certain simple rules to be followed.

At the arboretum, where there are 251 varieties of the blossom in all shades from deep purple and white to pink, these suggestions were made to home gardeners planning to participate in the Share Your Lilacs campaign sponsored by the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild, and THE TRIBUNE:

Don't break off the blossoms. It is advisable to use pruning shears or a sharp knife in cutting lilacs for bouquets.

Cut Close to Stem.

Cut as close to the main stem as possible so as to permit quick healing.

Do not cut promiscuously, damaging the symmetry of the bush. The blossoms should be cut in late evening, or early morning before the sun is up. Place them in cold water in a cool place over night.

It is possible to offset wilting by cutting away some of the leaves, thus reducing the amount of evaporating surface.

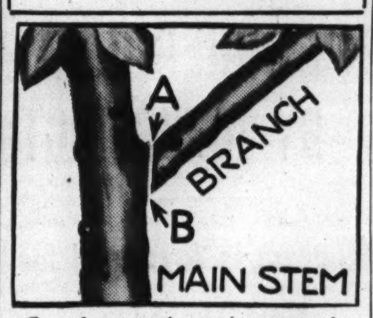
Proper cutting of blossoms is not injurious to the bush and does not affect its future productiveness.

Authorities point out that pruning in winter or spring delays a large part of the flower buds. It is explained that lilacs need pruning only to cut out dead or diseased wood, or renew old plants.

Asked the common question, "What is the best variety to plant?" an authority once answered: "The best 12 are any 12 which are most pleasing to you."

While it may be said that the lilac is tolerant of soils and exposures, the collection at the Morton arboretum was shifted four times in attaining the best results. The first spot was found too low and the blossoms were subjected to late spring frosts. The second spot was too shady, and the third too moist. The ideal site has been found to be one where there is proper drainage, no shade, and an elevation from frost.

Gathering Lilacs



Cut close to the main stem when you gather your Share Your Lilacs bouquet. The line AB shows the correct method and it is best if point B is slightly closer to the stem than point A. Use pruning shears or sharp knife.

OLD TIME PARK BALL PLAYERS PLAN ROUNDUP

Five hundred old time park baseball players and fans will gather at Bessemer park, 89th street and South Chicago avenue, Thursday evening for a "baseball roundup." The first complete rehabilitation of the park fieldhouse since its dedication in 1905 will be celebrated.

The program, which will begin at 8 o'clock, will include a Dutch lunch, Rube Appleberry, radio baseball character, and entertainment to the tune of "The Four Midnight Sons."

Jack Sheehan, park district supervisor, who played in 1905, is chairman of the roundup committee of 110 persons.

ISABELLA CIRCLE TO GIVE PARTY ON WEDNESDAY

A card party will be given by members of the South Shore circle, Daughters of Isabella, Wednesday evening in Our Lady of Peace parish auditorium, 2000 East 79th street.

Mrs. Fred C. Soth, 8050 Paxton avenue, is chairman of the arrangements committee, assisted by Miss Mary E. Howard, 7801 Union avenue. Individual committee chairmen are Miss Helen Kane, Mrs. John McGlave, Mrs. Denis Mahoney, Mrs. William Coyle, Mrs. Frank O'Reilly, Mrs. Mrs. Frank Vaughan, and Mrs. Edward Griffin.

LAWN CONTEST HERALDS SPRING FOR GARDENERS

Prizes to Await Winners in Four Divisions.

Hoes are flashing and seed is flying on the south side as scores of amateur gardeners prepare for the sixth annual Save the Lawns campaign now getting under way.

Plans for this year's competition were announced last week by Paul Schulze, chairman of the Municipal Art league and head of the citizens' committee that coöperates with the park district in promoting the yearly drive to bring beauty to the city's neglected spots.

Helps Beautify City.

Benefits of the plan are numerous and widespread, its supporters hold. It not only stimulates more amateurs into reclaiming barren and waste plots, they declare, but it also encourages public coöperation in staying off seeded areas until grass is sufficiently established to withstand trampling.

Walter Tredup, president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, has been named south side chairman of the campaign, Mr. Schulze announced. He will be aided by these community chairmen:

Chesterfield—Mrs. C. C. Lively, secretary of the Chesterfield Improvement association.

Roseland-Pullman—James R. Crane, publisher.

South Bryn Mawr—Mrs. C. F. Becking, president of the South Bryn Mawr Wednesday club.

Oakland-Kenwood — J. V. O'Neil, business manager of the Oakland-Kenwood Property Owners' association; John W. Gorby, business manager of the Woodlawn Property Owners' association.

Chatham Fields—W. R. Toyn, secretary of the Chatham Fields Improvement association, and Frazer T. Lane, civic director of the Urban league.

On Citizens' Committee.

These include Gustave A. Brand, art chairman for the city; James H. Burdett, director of the National Garden clubs; Mrs. J. P. Edwards, state garden chairman of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs; Miss Ethel Foster, representing the Chicago Association of Commerce; John Howatt, chief engineer for the board of education; Mrs. F. Russell Lyon, president of the Illinois Parent-Teacher congress.

Others on the citizens' committee are James B. McCahey, president of the board of education; Commander Ernest I. Pugmire of the Salvation Army; Oakley V. Morgan, horticulturist for the Commonwealth Edison company; Bishop Bernard J. Sheil; Mrs. George Plamondon, president of the Garden Club of Illinois; Bishop George Craig Stewart; Eugene S. Taylor, manager of the Chicago plan commission, and Miss Harriet Vittum, head resident of Northwestern University settlement.

Others on Committee.

Serving on the educational committee are Mrs. Charles W. Balch, state recreation chairman for the Illinois P.-T. A. congress; the Rev. D. F. Cunningham, Catholic superintendent of schools; Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of public schools; Mrs. G. A. Millard, president of the north side P.-T. A. High School council; Mrs. Levi S. Nelson, first district garden chairman of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs; President Michael O'Connell of De Paul university; Mrs. Milton Weiner, president of the south side P.-T. A. High School council, and President Samuel Knox Wilson of Loyola university.

Competition in the campaign will be divided into these four groups: Small homes, apartment houses, public and parochial schools, and police and fire stations.

Home and apartment house gardeners will compete for garden tools and supplies donated by Chicago merchants. Mr. McCahey has posted plaques to be awarded winners in the school section. The police and fire stations will vie for a cup donated by Fire Marshal Michael J. Corrigan.

Miss Ruth Hobbs, 4901 Ellis avenue, is chairman of the ways and means committee for the tea, assisted by Mrs. Gertrude Phillips, Mrs. Thelma Morrow, Miss Elizabeth Galbreath, and Mrs. Nelson Woodley. All campaign workers will be guests today. Music will be furnished by the National Youth Administration orchestra, directed by Irwin Fisher, between 5 and 6 o'clock.

Constipation Relief That Also Pepsin-izes Stomach

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food and your bowels don't move. So you need both Pepsin to help break up fast that rich undigested food in your stomach, and Laxative Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels. So be sure your laxative also contains Pepsin. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative, because its Syrup Pepsin helps you gain that wonderful stomach comfort, while the Laxative Senna moves your bowels. Tests prove the power of Pepsin to dissolve those lumps of undigested protein food which may linger in your stomach, to cause belching, gastric acidity and nausea. This is how pepsinizing your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. So see how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also puts Pepsin to work on that stomach discomfort, too. Even finicky children love to taste this pleasant family laxative. Buy Dr. Caldwell's Laxative—Senna with Syrup Pepsin at your druggist today!

W-G-N PROGRAM REVEALS YOUTH'S HOPE, STRENGTH

Tribune Via Air Salutes 'Citizens of Tomorrow.'

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

As a salute to youth's promise and accomplishment and to its high destiny under the American way, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE each Wednesday evening presents the program, "Citizens of Tomorrow," over W-G-N.

It is well worth a half hour's pause to watch this procession of youth passing thru the portals of W-G-N. For here one obtains a brief preview of the future of democracy. That glimpse is full of hope.

The manner of presenting "Citizens of Tomorrow" is in itself strictly in the democratic tradition. For this program is an anomaly in educational broadcasting—an informative and entertaining program that delights the boy and girl as well as parents and teachers and the countless others who listen to it. Too often radio programs that suit parents and educators are ignored by youth. The converse is true, too. Mothers and fathers are not always pleased with the radio preferences of their offspring.

To make "Citizens of Tomorrow" the success it is, high school students give their best; they set the pace for the show—and it is a show—and they flavor it with their rousing yells, their fine choral singing, their lively contributions to THE TRIBUNE news quiz, and their reverberating applause—with a higher decibel rating than many sponsored network productions are accorded. They have embraced it as their own show.

The fullest coöperation is given, too, by the public school system. The Chicago board of education lends its full support to the broadcasts. Valuable aid and advice is given in preparing the programs by the radio council of the board of education, directed by Harold Kent, and by the department of music, under the direction of Miss Helen Howe.

The contributions of the youngsters and of their teachers are deftly welded into a finished production by skilled writers, producers, and performers of W-G-N. The result: A weekly program that is educational, stimulating, inspiring—that reflects democracy at its best.

A Glimpse of Young America.

A visit to a broadcast of "Citizens of Tomorrow" provides a fine opportunity to observe Young America at close range. As 600 boys and girls from Parker High school—probably a good cross-section of the youth of the nation—poured into W-G-N's spacious audience studio last Wednesday, certain qualities stood out.

Chicago's youth is not regimented. Youngsters appear to be far more individualistic than their elders. That seems to apply particularly with regard to dress and manner. These high school folk wear an astonishing variety of clothes, with comfort and color competing as the keynotes. Footgear alone runs the gamut from Mexican huaraches and "wedgies" to patent pumps with high heels. The girls wear all manner of anklet socks, silk hose—or both.

They Are Democratic.

As they scramble for seats a minor uproar fills the studio. They make full use of the right of free speech and assembly. With regard to the latter it takes the form of trying to save seats for their late-arriving friends. With regard to the former, one hears from a husky lad such expressions as "Hey, good looking—you with the mirror—how about moving over a notch so we can sit down?"

These boys and girls are decidedly democratic. Already they reveal many potentialities of good citizenship. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools, touched on this point the other evening when he was a guest at the broadcast. He remarked about their willingness to serve and their capacity for enjoying friendship and fellowship with others thru sharing common privileges and responsibilities.

"You young people," he said, "can and do participate in your American citizenship long before you are eligible to vote. Ever since you started school you have been learning to work and play with your classmates and to contribute your best to group activities." These experiences in school he said, represent the best possible preparation for democratic living.

Understands School Youth.

"Citizens of Tomorrow" derives much of its success thru the enthusiasm and experience of Philip Maxwell, member of THE TRIBUNE staff and the master of ceremonies, who plays the rôle of the principal.

In recognition of the achievements of out of the city students, tributes are paid each week to five boys and girls in the five Chicagoland states who have already made their marks in leadership, scholarship, character, and service. Those saluted are selected by their high school principals in coöperation with local correspondents of THE TRIBUNE.

Quiz Arouses Applause.

Announcer Pierre Andre keeps the showing moving right along; Blair Walliser is the efficient director; Francis Coughlin does the smooth writing job, and Harold Turner is ever ready at the piano to furnish what is needed in the way of music.

THE TRIBUNE news quiz arouses plenty of spontaneous applause as six classmates, picked at random from the audience, fight it out for cash and glory. Those who survive the quizdown get $5 each. There were three such winners for Parker last Wednesday, to the delight of Miss Nellie Quinn, the Parker principal. Answers of the youngsters indicate a good reading acquaintance with THE TRIBUNE. One girl raised a great cheer by correctly answering a Golden Gloves question—just to cite one example.

The demand for tickets far exceeds the number available each week. At some high schools 2,000 have requested tickets; only 600 can be accommodated. Others hear the show in their own living rooms. After the broadcast the motion picture "Trees to Tribunes," telling the story of the making of tomorrow's newspaper, is shown. And then 100 selected students—usually those enrolled in journalism courses—are taken on a tour of THE TRIBUNE's plant.

Three performances of "Citizens of Tomorrow" have been given. Eight more are scheduled prior to the end of the school year.

You're missing something if you aren't listening!

BOBBY CLARK, LUELLA GEAR ON 5TH ROW CENTER

They'll Co-Star in 'Career in Matrimony.'

Bobby Clark and Luella Gear, comedy headliners of "The Streets of Paris," will be co-starred in W-G-N and Mutual's program Fifth Row Center from 7 to 7:30 p. m. next Friday. They will be featured in a radio play titled "Career in Matrimony."

A Couple of the Theater.

In "Career in Matrimony" Clark and Miss Gear will play the parts of a married couple of the theater. Both are stars, and while in love with each other, they are tremendously jealous of each other's work. They decide to separate, but their careers bring them together again, thru a maze of complications.

Without His Teammate.

Bobby Clark is now making his second solo starring appearance. For three decades he was teamed with the late Paul McCullough.

Luella Gear made her debut in "The Love of Mike." Since then she has starred in many big shows including "The Gold Diggers," "Poppy," "Ups a Daisy," "The Gay Divorcee," "Life Begins at 8:40," and "On Your Toes."

CARTERS' TALENT HUNT IS NOT FOR AN OOMPH GIRL

Sponsors of the Carters of Elm Street, who are conducting a talent search thru W-G-N and 84 other Mutual stations, have announced that they are not necessarily seeking an oomph girl or a grandmother. [There are to be two winners—one between 15 and 25 and one over 25.]

Parts are to be written into the script to fit the talents, the acting ability, and the personality of the two winners. The winners are to get contracts for two weeks each at $112.50 a week with all expenses paid while in Chicago.

The search started on April 15 with local auditions to be held in each of the 85 cities and towns carrying the "Carters" program. Then, recordings of the voices of the local winners will go to regional centers, and those of the regional winners will go to Chicago for the national selections. Chairman of the national judges' committee will be Virginia Payne, who plays the starring rôle of "Carrie Carter" on the "Carters" program.

CLEANUP DRIVE OPENED BY SOUTH SIDE STUDENTS

Posters Help to Arouse Adult Co-operation.

If the south side doesn't look noticeably cleaner and fresher after the next two weeks, it won't be the fault of thousands of public school boys and girls. They have pledged themselves to lead the war on dirt and ugliness in the annual spring Clean Up, Paint Up, Light Up campaign.

The "blitzkrieg" on rubbish, which will be waged thru games, contests and courses of study, will be sponsored jointly by the community service committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce and the Chicago board of education. Specific objectives are gathering litter from vacant lots, scouring homes, nourishing plants and flowers, and any other means of making Chicago a neater and more beautiful city in which to live.

Slogan Aids Campaign.

"Team Up and Clean Up" will be the refrain of children and youthful students in the drive whose origin dates back to the Chicago Clean Up league founded in 1907 at the instance of Mayor Fred A. Busse. The 1940 slogan, adjudged the best in a contest conducted by the association of commerce, was created by Irene Murdock, a senior at McKinley High school. The phrase now decorates posters on store windows and elevated platforms in an attempt to stimulate adult interest in the campaign.

South side high school students who won honorable mention in the slogan competition are Dorothy Wright and Edward Horvatio of Hirsch and Anna Mae Leveque of Bowen. Conchita Edon of the Raymond school, and Nettie Hawrylak of the Perry school also won honorable mention.

Awards for Posters.

In the poster contest conducted by the community service committee of the association of commerce in cooperation with the art department of the public schools, the following south siders won honorable mention: Margaret Stone and Henry Godshall of Fenger, Zoe Fischer and Dan Yacoe of Hirsch, Elizabeth Aldrich and Lorna Israel of Hyde Park, Virginia Gemeny, Doris Engstrom and Elsie Boerner of Parker, and Conrad Cochran of Phillips.

Park District Outing Club to See Des Plaines Valley

The Chicago Park District Outing club has planned an excursion thru the Des Plaines valley today. Hikers will leave the bus station at 20 East Randolph street at 9 o'clock for Lemont. John Hansen is the hike leader, and Frank Stegenga and Joseph Babyar are guides. The hike will be about 12 miles. On the return trip the bus will leave Willow Springs at 5:40. These week-end outings are open to the public.

Krazy Kwiz Chief

Prof. Harold Isbell, the quizzing master of the Krazy Kwiz program, new mirth provoking presentations aired on W-G-N at 1 p. m. each Sunday. The professor hands out cash for answers to the fantastic questions.

Preparing for Inspection

Preparations for the annual spring federal inspection of R. O. T. C. units include studying maps of review formations in Chicago public high schools. At Du Sable (left to right) Maj. Sidney Colin, Maj. Leroy Stephens, Maj. John McLean, and Lieut. Col. Raymond McEwen scrutinize the plan of where every company and every cadet in the Du Sable regiment will stand for the examination ceremony, which will take place out of doors next month.

News and Queries Within and Without the Church —A Religious Voice of the People— Edited by the Rev. John Evans

"... Before criticizing your wife's faults remember that it may have been those very defects which prevented her from catching a better husband."

Dr. Oswald W. S. McCall.

That is the warning of Dr. Oswald W. S. McCall, pastor of New First Congregational church, Ashland avenue and Washington boulevard, as, in a new pastor's journal, Sermons in Brief, published in New York, he argues that phobias, neuroses, psychiatrists, and psychologists can be forgotten in face of plain questions, such as:

"Should the husband rule in the home, or should the wife?

"If you wish an answer to such a tormenting question—or is it an entertaining question?—to come from actual case histories as our useful fashion now is, here's one: 'Before he was married he assured his friends he would be the boss in his own house or know the reason why. Now he knows the reason why.'"

The McCall contribution, called "Specters of the Mind," deals with religion's answer to phobias, neuroses, and the multitude of authors on morbid psychology who write in learned terms when, as Dr. McCall suggests, plain words may be better. The Chicago pastor is in good company in the magazine—Karl Barth, Archbishop Spellman, Archbishop Temple of York, Rabbi Wolsey, Muriel Lester, Archbishop Glennon, and Bishop Manning!

Sermons in Brief is edited monthly by friend Herbert H. Rugg, who used to be in charge of national congregational publicity.

Capt. Roland R. Bach, resident chaplain of the 6th corps area, U. S. A., leads a 9:30 o'clock young adult discussion group this morning at Jackson Boulevard Christian church on the subject "The Army and Peace." . . . Harry G. Saulnier of Pacific Garden Mission and Chicagoland Easter Sunrise service, speaks of a June 2 rally of 100,000 Christians in Soldiers' field with Gov. Luren A. Dickinson of Michigan as a speaker. . . . A committee of 100 in charge held 24 hour prayer meeting in Garrick hall Friday and Saturday in preparation for the rally.

When the Rev. E. M. Hegge of Oak Park Norwegian Lutheran church speaks this morning on the subject "Humanity's Archenemy—War!" he will speak out of experience. A world war veteran, in 1924-'27 he was a war correspondent in China for Peking and Hankow newspapers. Special prayers for Scandinavia this morning also.

Homer Rodeheaver will lead the singing tonight at First Methodist church, Chicago temple. Yes, it's the Homer Rodeheaver of trombone and voice you'll remember from Billy Sunday revival days. Dr. John Thompson, pastor of the skyscraper church, said that Rodey [as Billy Sunday called him] will not only lead a service of song, but also preach a sermon. At 3 this afternoon Rodeheaver will be at St. James Methodist church, 46th street and Ellis avenue.

Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch announces the meeting of the National Conference of Catholic Charities for Chicago beginning Nov. 20. The national meeting of Societies of St. Vincent de Paul will meet concurrently.

French Envoy Is Honored at Social Fetes

By Cousin Eve.

Spring shows signs of being around the corner, and floral wreaths are many, set slantwise on sculptured curls. It is a great year for funny little hats, and mostly they are bouquets of flowers plastered over one eye. White is the thing, and often these coifs are quite bridal with misty veils.

The rage for spring millinery is evident in Tuesday's party at the Esquire theater, which is to be a hat race with eminent judges making decisions. Mrs. Frank Hibbard is mistress of ceremonies, and contestants must come in their very best hairdo and whatever costume they most fancy for themselves. The judges are Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, and Mrs. Walter B. Wolf. Besides the hat race, there'll be a movie and exposition of things given for the White Elephant sale, which benefits the Children's Memorial hospital.

Another sign of spring is a general exodus early in May for the sunny south. Washington seems to be the convention center and besides the Red Cross convention, which opens May 6, the Colonial Dames of America meet there, and the Penwomen of America and the Garden Clubs assemble next door in Baltimore.

Many women from our north Riviera will motor to the Garden club convention this year, because the gardens old and beautiful on Maryland's eastern shore are to be open to visitors for inspection, something which doesn't happen often. There is much buying and building by northerners in Maryland, and among former Chicagoans who moved down there not long ago are the Marshall Clarks, who had been living at Oyster Bay. Virginia Clark was, in times past, a noted painter of children's portraits, and with great artistry she made over an old Maryland house. Then they sold at Oyster Bay and moved into the southern mansion. The fame of this restoration was noised abroad, and before long the Clarks had such a good offer for the old estate that they sold it. Bruce Clark, a cousin, who some time ago married Marjorie Thayer of Boston, is now living at Sarasota in a charming house, one of the numerous Chicago colony that includes the Stanley Fields and Potter and Honoré Palmer.

The French ambassador made a nice social flurry when he visited here the other day. Count René de Saint Quentin is a charming man, attractive looking and likable. He has been in Chicago twice in two years. Last week he made a whirlwind visit and in one day was lunched at the Chicago club by sundry members of the French societies. Later he took tea at the Historical society, dined at the Palmer House with the Council of Foreign Relations, and flew back to Washington. It was a companion visit to that made by his British confrère, Lord Lothian, early in January.

The Historical society is a large place and it seethed happily with vivacious French people at the reception. The ambassador was due to place a wreath upon the Gold book with the names of our valorous dead from the world war. Also, he wished to present at the same time a Cincinnati medal, this early American decoration being the only one he wears. But something devastating happened—it was like a happy bridegroom waiting at the altar without a wedding ring—the count had no Cincinnati cross to bestow. So there was a hurry-up search for this medal all over Chicago.

The Historical society received a medal from the French ambassador, but it really belonged to Capt. William Waters and was cherished by him as a relic of an illustrious grandfather. So one doesn't know where or how the Historical society is going to come into ownership of this historical souvenir. The Carter Harrisons, senior and junior, have this medal, and so has Harold Stuart.

Comte de Saint Quentin was presented by Charles B. Pike, president of the Historical society, and he spoke briefly in French. Then the guests filed past for the handshake, and the Frenchman showed himself a good ambassador, by remembering old acquaintances. He knew that Mrs. Charles Goodspeed likes painting. He remembered a man, who a year ago wore a line of miniature medals, calling them as the French do "junk" or ferraillerie. On meeting this man again, M. de Saint Quentin immediately said "How is the junk?" This junk included French military crosses and whatnots.

Mr. and Mrs. René Weiller received with his excellency, also Mrs. Charles Dewey, and Mrs. Ralph James, who is expected to be president of the alliance for another season.

Presiding at the three tea tables, decked with gayly flagged layer cakes, were Mrs. Carter Harrison and Diana Winston, Mrs. Goodspeed and Mrs. Walter Brewster, Mrs. John Crerar and Mrs. Thomas Hinde.

The dinner at the Foreign Relations was just half as crowded as the one for Lord Lothian. There were lots of flags draped over the envoy's head and he had Mrs. Laird Bell on his right, a brilliant conversationalist and fluent in French.

Donald McPherson presided, and the ladies selected to sit at the top table were dressed suitably in view of the state of war existing at French frontiers.

The ambassador read his discourse and very carefully avoided any reference to Lafayette, Rochambeau, de Grasse, La Salle, or Marquette, in which most of us who go to these French banquets are letter perfect. At the end he said that peace when it came would be a just peace and that there would be a fair division of the world's raw materials.

The audience was all set to give France a rousing ovation that evening but the quiet, modest manner of the ambassador put a damper on any emotional outbursts.

A book, the memoirs of Sir Henry Deterding, English oil magnate, is providing a thrill for its readers. Sir Henry, who lived in London most of his life, wrote that the present European war would be all about oil—oil in Afghanistan, Persia, Iraq, the world's greatest supply.

Chauncey McCormick was receiving congratulations on his recent plunge into grand opera. The chairmanship of the company was offered him months ago, and much pressure was brought before he consented to take this picturesque job. It may in a way balance the tremendous work of Polish relief, of which he is chief in America. The future of grand opera in Chicago is in the making, with a certainty of brilliant audiences once more and carefully built up programs. It certainly helps an evening soirée at opera no end to see pretty people on their toes arriving en grand gala. Opera has to be social to succeed, for it never was highbrow, and the day of sweaters and galoshes at grand opera, we think, is past.

Walter R. Kirk was elected president of the opera company, and when congratulated upon his elevation to high office said that he was sailing shortly for Narvik. Mrs. Kirk is chairman of the opera box committee, and knowing this lady as well as I do, I can foresee the happy hour when every box is sold and patrons are clamoring for more.

Jason F. Whitney, who has carried Chicago grand opera for four years, is now executive vice president of the new company, and Robert Hall McCormick chairman of trustees.

Carol Bush was a delightful bride, and her husband, Frederick Latham Emeny, is not only a rising young banker of Cleveland, but handsome as well. They were married by Dr. John Timothy Stone in Fourth Presbyterian chapel, and, according to her wont, Mrs. Charles W. Dempster offered the services of her white satin faldstool, which has helped to marry several generations of Chicago brides. The address given for the delivery of the faldstool was St. James chapel, which is quite another church, but fortunately not far from the Fourth Presbyterian. In the end, the little satin priedieu arrived on the dot.

I was one of a long queue at the reception in the Racquet club, which had branches of young flowering fruit trees, masses of them, in the black and white foyer and behind the bridal couple. Carol wore sweeping robes of white satin and her tulle veil had a novel flare like an 1830 bonnet. The bride thanked a guest for a beautiful antique silver inkwell and the new husband chimed in: "We'll keep it full of red ink for a while." The young couple will live in Cleveland.

The dining room had been cut in half by a green hedge. In the first half champagne was being passed as the crowd came in, filling, too, the small salon where Cornelia Conger has done a marvelous job. It is a north room, and paper with a wide gold stripe gives it life and charm. The decoration of the woman's half of the Racquet club is all Miss Conger's design and has great distinction. The second half of the dining room, with the bridal tea table set with candles, bride cake, and lilies, was reserved for dancing and soon the black and white floor was full of steppers. Dancing at a wedding is gay and happy, and one left the scene with a feeling of optimism in regard to the world in general.

The day after, Mrs. Harold Pynchon's tea for Boris Lovet-Lorski in the Michigan avenue studio of Pierre Morel went off with unusual bang.

There was a whole gallery full of things done by "Boris," as Mrs. Pynchon called the sculptor in introducing him. "This is Boris," said she, as we shook hands with the great artist. His works are done in several media—lava of Stromboli, rose marble of Milan, onyx of Mexico, black Belgian marble, copper, ivory Carrara, granite of Egypt, bronze, brass, marbles of Greece and Sweden. A lady asked the price of a little marble head, hearing that Lorski had a few bargains owing to the war. "Three thousand dollars," said the noted sculptor briskly, and I daresay that looks reasonable to a man who has received $10,000 for portrait busts.

Mrs. Pynchon's tea pourers were Mrs. Lewis F. Bernays and Mrs. Nathaniel Owings. A few of her guests were Mrs. Howell Erminger, Mrs. Chauncey Borland, Mrs. Samuel Rowe, Mrs. Samuel Rinaker, Charles S. Dewey, Mrs. James Offield, Mrs. Inez Stark, and Frederick Sweet.

The Paderewski broadcast from a north side studio brought a notable flock of society fans from early dinners Tuesday night. It was a triple show and the audience filed silently into the chamber where they were to hear the voice of the world's greatest pianist and first citizen of Poland, Ignace Jan Paderewski. They were then to hear Artur Rozinski's orchestra in Cleveland playing "Polonia." And then, as the climax of the evening, Artur Rubinstein's silent, unapplauded taking over of the piano. It was a breathtaking six minutes, when he played Chopin's Polonaise, opus 53, as none of us had ever heard it played before. In it was all the pent-up pathos of Poland, its brilliant temperament, its moments of despair, ending in a rippling coda of plaintive hope.

Gen. and Mrs. Robert E. Wood were in the audience and Chauncey and Mrs. McCormick. Gifts of money to Poland may be sent to Mr. McCormick; and others there were Col. and Mrs. George Langhorne, Mrs. Kersey Reed, Mr. and Mrs. James Ames, Mrs. Ira Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kirk, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Frank Mulford, Mrs. David Cooke Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Herbert S. Stone, Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, Mrs. Mary Mitchell, and Mr. and Mrs. E. Harris Brewer.

Springtime in Paris Brings Art Exhibit

By May Birkhead.

It is difficult to think of springtime in Paris without preparations for opening the united salons of painting and sculpture in the Grand Palais in the Champs Elysées. There, at the end of April, several thousand canvases and hundreds of pieces in bronze and marble have, for over a generation, except in wartime, been unrolled before the countless residents and visitors of the capital.

PARIS.

In order to sustain interest in the plastic arts and to provide the means of living for as many artists as possible, it was decided this year to group the autumn salon, that of the Society of Decorating Artists, and the Salon of the Tuileries in one showing. As nearly 700 canvases, sculptures and other objects were assembled, it was decided to bring them together in the Palais Chaillot, which occupies the site, since the exposition of 1937, of the former Trocadero. The daylight is better there, on the high ground, than in the Grand Palais, and the necessarily rigorous selection makes the present showing one of the best that Paris has seen for a long time.

As most of the work on view was prepared, or in preparation, before war broke out, little trace of the conflict shows in the subjects chosen. Also, the extremist tendencies, which for some time have been on the decline, are even less marked than at any time since the last war. The result is that the spectator can roam thru the spacious and well lighted curving halls and encounter at every step something well worth his attention.

Nearly all the subjects which the salon habitués expect to encounter, landscapes, portraits, family and café groups, still life, or fantasies, are present in abundance, many of the canvases signed by celebrated names, most of them French, altho Van Dongen, the Dutchman, is represented by a characteristically rich flavored bouquet of flowers, and Foujita, long a celebrity in Montparnasse, which he had deserted in recent years, by his remarkable studies of cats. One of the most notable of contemporary names, Utrillo, is signed to a picture of Notre Dame. A primitive glimpse of the western hemisphere is given in the view of Christopher Columbus discovering America, by André Bauchant.

Several forms of decorative and applied art make an excellent showing, altho the objects are not shown in a separate section, but grouped, in appropriate corners, with the paintings. Leleu exhibits a striking commode of Macassar ebony, on which are ornaments of gilded bronze, the kind of ensemble that suits a country place not too far from a city. A number of extremely handsome screens, with a lacquerish effect and much interweaving of colors, were to be seen in many parts of the great display.

Richness of design and of coloring marks many of the specimens of bookbinding, some of the best work having been sent in by women. A number of famous artists have contributed designs to an album which will be used for military postage stamps, such as an infantryman, by Dunoyer de Segonzac, a stamp for English troops in France, by Eric Gill, and for military almoners, by Maurice Denis, to mention only a few in a work which probably will turn out to be one of the finest war albums.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, March 11, 1892.

Dear Julia: Yes, we in Chicago read of Dr. Rainsford's severe criticism of Jay Gould and his minister. Does Dr. Rainsford express the feeling of most Episcopalians, when he thunders away at Mr. Gould's pastor for accepting an invitation to hold a church meeting in the Gould home? Of course he is right in objecting to the willingness of churches to defer to the merely successful, caring nothing for the manner in which success has been attained. But I wonder if there are no black sheep in Dr. Rainsford's own fold! Mr. Gould's pastor intimates that there are plenty of them, and says to the reporter who questions him about the controversy: "Ask Dr. Rainsford, in my name, where the wealthy men of his congregation get their money. Did they come by it any more honestly than Mr. Gould? They cannot hold up their heads and cast a single stone at him, if they are honest with themselves." He goes on to call Mr. Gould "one of the loveliest of men."

Who is to decide such questions? I am glad I am not a minister who must assume to judge whether his church members are making their money honestly. The thought suggested the words of Jesus: "Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?" and I stopped just now to read the 12th chapter of Luke's Gospel, in which those words occur, followed by the great parable of the rich man who had much goods laid up for many years. How little we heed the exhortations of that wonderful chapter!

Turning to a lighter and pleasanter subject, I must tell you that Martha Junior's sweet young friend, Grace Murray, has just been married in Paris to Arthur Meeker, representative of Armour and company in Europe. Tho quite a young man, Mr. Meeker has achieved an enviable position in the business world. Dark-eyed Grace Murray is a lovely and accomplished girl and will make him an excellent wife. A daughter of William H. Murray, of the board of trade, and a niece of Charles Schwartz, one of our wealthy Chicagoans, she has had a brilliant social career and is much sought after in Chicago society. Her mother's health took them abroad, and it is because of this that the wedding was so small and informal. I understand the young couple will visit Chicago in May, after a honeymoon spent on the Riviera.

This week will bring Denman Thompson and his "Old Homestead" to Chicago and of course Will and I shall go to see it, tho we know it by heart. It never grows old, tho it has been on the stage for six years and I suppose it may be called the most popular play of modern times. Many new touches have been added, the announcements say . . . a yoke of oxen drawing a load of hay across the stage; the farm kitchen, with logs blazing on the hearth; Grace Church [New York] by moonlight. It is simple enough in construction, but full of charm, with plenty of laughs and tears. Who was it that wrote about it:

"We see it all the picture that our memories hold so dear,
The homestead in New England far away,
And the vision is so nat'rul-like, we almost seem to hear
The voices that were hushed but yesterday."

It is good to know that the man who wrote it . . . Denman Thompson . . . has made a fortune from it. He tried for a long time to sell the play, Will says, before a producer would take a chance on its success. But Denman Thompson never lost faith in it. Moral: Hold on to your play, if you believe in it. Once in a while, it gets produced and is successful.

Much love,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Footnotes.

Pastor Wagner's Church.

John H. Lang, Kendallville, Ind., writes: "I attended the Zion Lutheran church, 19th and Peoria streets, in 1898. It was always referred to as 'Pastor Wagner's Church' and well do I remember this kind and noble man. The teacher of the school supported by the congregation was Hermann Ruhland, born in Germany, graduate of the University of Heidelberg, teacher of Latin and German in the Kendallville [Ind.] High school until he went to Chicago. Mr. Ruhland was a poet, a writer of splendid verse, and I have many clippings from the Illinois Staats-Zeitung which I value highly. He also translated Longfellow's poems into German."

Attic Treasures.

The Bangle Bracelet.

It was formed of monogrammed dimes, the donor's initials engraved thereon. These were joined to form a band for the wrist and from this band hung three more rows of dimes. A tuneful affair was this memory bracelet when the hand was moved ever so slightly. Tho greatly admired, while the fad lasted, the day soon came when the bracelet found itself discarded with other old souvenirs, in the attic. Long forgotten, it came to mind when silver and gold were asked for, to be melted and made into a chalice for a Chicago church. Today it is a part of one of the most precious altar vessels in the tabernacle of St. Thomas the Apostle church, 55th street and Kimbark avenue. The bracelet belonged to Miss Margaret M. Shea, 6916 Chappel avenue, of New England birth, and her niece, Claire Hayes, wrote its story for her school paper.

Scrapbook of Early Chicago.

Mrs. G. W. Schelm, Ogden, Utah, writes that she is making a scrapbook of the letters from the "When Chicago Was Young" column. We should be interested to hear of other readers who are doing this. Address Herma Clark, care Chicago Tribune.

Women Voters Probing Issues Facing Nation

By Betty Browning.

Problems confronting the nation at home and abroad will be studied with reference to the coming presidential campaign when the National League of Women Voters holds its biennial convention next week in New York. "Principles Behind the Issues" will be the theme of the meeting. Delegates from 550 local leagues in 31 states will adopt planks to be recommended to the platform committees of both major political parties. The delegates' action will follow months of study culminating in convention sessions devoted to still more study.

Mrs. George G. Bogert.

The five day meeting, to open next Monday at the Commodore hotel, will mark the 20th anniversary of this remarkable organization. By its own definition the league is a "nonpartisan, nation-wide educational institution to promote more intelligent and active citizenship thru the study and practice of government."

The words "study" and "practice" are clues to the organization's importance, which always has been out of all proportion to the numerical strength of its membership. The indomitable women who fought thru to success the battle for equal suffrage celebrated their victory by organizing the league in 1920 in Chicago. Their purpose was to educate women to make intelligent use of the vote, now that it was won.

The new organization profited by the hard-earned experience of the erstwhile suffrage leaders. Always careful study has preceded league action on a specific issue, and once decided upon, action has proceeded tirelessly and unfalteringly. Nor does the league rest on its laurels, once success is achieved. A painstaking "follow-up" to check results is its invariable procedure.

It is not surprising that such an organization has attracted women of exceptional ability. Its membership includes not only women prominent in public life and women of professional standing, but a great number of what might be termed amateurs in government, who have made themselves specialists by years of study and activity in the league.

In keeping with its purposes, the league has chosen to develop trained members rather than to "spread thin" and reach out for a larger and more casual membership. The result has been that the league is, in the truest sense, a working organization. In fact, it is safe to say that scarcely a league member but is a hard worker. There is little in the league program to attract others.

Next week's convention schedule bears out this statement. Business sessions at which the league's program for the next two years will be discussed and adopted will occupy most of the meetings. There will be three symposia in which experts will shed light on issues behind the 1940 campaign, all of which, of course, ties in with the league's program.

The first of these symposia, to take place Tuesday afternoon, will consider "Economic Society, Planned and Unplanned," with Dr. John M. Clark of Columbia university, former president of the American Economic association; Richard Gilbert, director of industrial economics of the United States department of commerce, and Arthur M. Macmahon, professor of political science at Columbia university, as speakers. Mr. Macmahon recently returned from Mexico, where he studied the administrative problems resulting from economic planning.

The second symposium, scheduled for Wednesday afternoon, will consider "Mineral Resources, Trade and Peace." Dr. Ernest Minor Patterson of the University of Pennsylvania, president of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, and Dr. C. K. Leith, professor of geology at the University of Wisconsin, will speak. Dr. Leith was mineral adviser to the United States shipping board and war industries board during the world war, and now is chairman of the mineral advisory committee of the army and navy munitions board.

"Fiscal Policies" will be discussed in the third symposium Thursday afternoon. Dr. Paul M. Sweezy of Harvard university will be among the speakers.

Encouraging to the members as they prepare their program for the next two years should be Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin's report on the league activities since the last convention in 1938.

The law placing postmasters of the first, second, and third class offices in the classified civil service; repeal of the mandatory embargo of the neutrality act and substitution of the cash-and-carry provision; extension of the reciprocal trade agreements for a three year period, and the new food, drug, and cosmetic law all were measures for which the league worked. Mrs. Baldwin, who is vice president of the league, and directs much of its activity in Washington, D. C., will submit her report Thursday.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, the famous 81 year old former suffrage leader who founded the league, and is its honorary president, will be the special guest at a League of Women Voters birthday celebration and reception Tuesday evening. "A Founder Looks at Her Work" will be the theme of this event.

"A Café Society" party staged by the league itself Wednesday evening, and a banquet Thursday evening, will be other special events. Preliminary department meetings are scheduled for Monday, with a drive and tea at historic homes in Westchester county, and a "know your board" clinic in the evening. A general council meeting will be held Tuesday morning and again Friday afternoon following adjournment of the convention. There also will be a tea for delegates Friday at the World's Fair.

Mrs. George G. Bogert of Chicago, president of the Illinois League of Women Voters, will head the delegation from this state. Mrs. Florence Fifer Bohrer of Bloomington, Ill., has been appointed chairman of the nominating committee, which is naming Mrs. Walter T. Fisher of Winnetka for reëlection as treasurer. Mrs. William G. Hibbard of Winnetka, national finance chairman, and Mrs. Louise Leonard Wright of Chicago, national chairman of foreign policy, are Illinois' other representatives on the national board. Miss Marguerite M. Wells, national president, also has been nominated for reëlection.

New on the league's program, as proposed by the national board of directors for the consideration of delegates to the convention, is "opposition to interstate trade barriers." "Relief, recognized as a long-time concern of government, with coördinated responsibility, federal, state, and local, for financing and administration," is another proposal. Interesting also for its emphasis on "long time" is "slum clearance and public housing for low income groups with due regard for long-term city planning."

"Government services protecting the public as consumers" follows up the league's earlier support of food and drug legislation. Other proposals in the federal and state group are "statutory guarantees of rights to bargain collectively; opposition to discrimination in public employment based on sex or marital status; removal of administrative discriminations and of legal discriminations against women by specific legislation; improved juries and jury administration."

Still other proposals are "qualified personnel in government service; executive responsibility for preparation of budgets and for effective control of their operation; development of a coördinated tax system thru scientific research procedure; organization of government to promote efficiency and responsibility; social security; old age assistance, measures affecting children, unemployment compensation; federal-state employment service, old age benefits; child labor legislation; a constitutional amendment authorizing federal child labor legislation."

In the field of foreign affairs are recommended "a foreign policy designed to maintain peace for the United States, promote world peace, secure the defense of the United States and its possessions in the western hemisphere, stimulate international trade, withhold aid from those nations which violate their agreements with the United States; participation in international efforts to achieve peaceful methods of changing the status quo, peaceful settlement of disputes, observance of agreements, limitation of armaments, economic coöperation, development of inter-American relationships."

Proposals, in the nature of recommendations to state leagues, are the municipal manager plan, preferably with council elected by proportional representation; strengthening of representative government thru permanent registration; the short ballot and direct nomination of candidates for office; units of school taxation and administration large enough for economy and efficiency; sufficient and scientifically apportioned public funds for public education; compulsory education for all children between the ages of 6 and 16, with free textbooks, and public education available to adults; coördinated state and local organization for public health, for public welfare; public protection for children and suitable guardianship for dependent, neglected, or delinquent children; progressive social legislation for dealing with women offenders."

Society Loath to Leave Sun at Palm Beach

By Helen Van Hoy Smith.

PALM BEACH, FLA.

Late April finds a large number of resorters still remaining under the palms, and gayeties continue. Those from Chicago who are loath to leave the beguilements of the sun, the surf, and the sand include Mr. and Mrs. Wolcott Blair, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Jelke, and Mrs. George Alexander McKinlock. Mr. and Mrs. George H. Malcolm and Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Hughitt expect to spend the month of May in Palm Beach. Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Davis will remain here until the middle of May. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson Davis, their son and daughter-in-law, are now their guests. Mr. and Mrs. H. Stillson Hart are leaving for New York on April 24. After enjoying a visit there, they will return to Chicago. Mrs. William Yager, who has been at the Everglades club all season, left Wednesday for Washington and New York before returning to Chicago.

The Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow has shaken the sands of Palm Beach from her No. 3 sandals, packed her size 12 dresses and betaken herself to San Francisco. Her divorce from her Danish count is not yet final. Robert Sweeney, her devoted suitor, left the same day for New York. The countess made the trip in a specially chartered compartment car with accommodations for 16. She expects to go to Honolulu later.

Mrs. Fontaine Le Maistre of New York and Palm Beach gave a luncheon on Friday at her Brazilian avenue villa in honor of Miss Janet Watt whose marriage to George Rasmussen will be celebrated in the early summer in Palm Beach.

Several Chicagoans attended the luncheon at the Bath and Tennis club given by Mrs. McAlpine Bell of New York, and one on Saturday at which Harry Skillman of Detroit was host. Mrs. Joanna Fortune of Chicago gave a cocktail party Thursday at her penthouse apartment on Worth avenue.

As a flower folds its petals at night, so Palm Beach is slowly but surely showing signs of "going to sleep." The Whitehall hotel, which so recently resounded with laughter, music, and the tinkle of ice, is now being closed. With the skill and knowledge born of experience and great executive ability, Miss Mary Reardon, housekeeper, is superintending these operations. Being major domo for an establishment like the Whitehall demands the patience of Job, the wisdom of Solomon, and the finesse of a diplomat.

This closing process also brings to light a new use for old newspapers, for they are used with a lavish hand. All season they were carefully laid aside. Every piece of upholstered furniture is wrapped in old newspapers. Mattresses and pillows on every bed also are wrapped, and the papers are held together with gummed strips. When Miss Reardon became housekeeper 10 years ago, they were using pins, and all during the next season stray pins were piercing the guests. The gummed strips solved the problem.

Camphor flakes are sprinkled on rugs. The smaller rugs are rolled while the larger ones remain on the floor. Every rug and every piece of furniture is treated to a spray of insecticide. Every article in the hotel to the last piece of bric-a-brac is carefully inventoried. In one huge room there are stacks of snowy sheets, pillow cases and towels, counted and on shelves as books in a library. Every season there is a terrific shortage on towels in every Palm Beach hotel. This fact is noted more in sorrow than in anger. After all, when a resorter pays $50 a day for a room you can't say too much.

Another room redolent of camphor was stacked high with blankets. Newspapers were placed between each blanket and the camphor flakes used on the paper.

Putting away linen is a more or less routine task, but taking care of the priceless lace curtains, brocade, velvet overdraperies, and tapestries requires a deft touch. The curtains in the original Flagler mansion are about 50 years old. These hangings are left stretched out on specially improvised tables. The handsome brocaded walls in the various rooms are all protected with muslin covers, while the windows which command some of the loveliest views in Palm Beach are covered with brown paper. Many of the openings also are boarded up. The original Flagler suite is all done up in gold brocade and royal blue. The bed is a huge canopied affair which would do credit to Louis XV. or Cecil B. De Mille. The bathroom is as large as an ordinary living room, and the lavatory is in genuine onyx. All the furnishings were used by the first Mrs. Flagler. The hotel is open a little over three months each year.

An intriguing thing to this observer were the stacks of telephone books, scarcely used at all, that were headed for the dump heap.

Night skeet shooting has become a favorite diversion with many. Mrs. Vilas Norton of Chicago is rapidly becoming as adept with shooting irons as with golfing irons. Charles A. Tilt of Chicago is another sharpshooter. Mrs. Norton, who will remain in Palm Beach until May, gave a cocktail party on Wednesday, and on Monday was seen at the Chambord, where she had as her guests Mrs. Elizabeth Shay Ricker and Miss Joanna Fortune of Chicago.

Mrs. Herbert Sheldon Johnson gave a breakfast on Wednesday followed by bridge, having a large number of the Chicago colony present.

Late spring style showings in Palm Beach feature the dependable polka dot in new versions. Lady Gladys Garthwaite of London, was lunching at the Bath and Tennis club the other day wearing an unusual pajama ensemble of red and white polka dot with the ever popular hood. Ruffled pinafores in stripes and dots are also liked by the younger set. Mrs. George Luke Mesker, New York socialite, looks stunning in black and white polka dotted pajamas with which she wears a halo band and huge white bow over her left eye.

One Chicago hostess gave a party this week in her home for bartenders, manicurists, and others who had served her in various capacities "over the counter."

With Kathryn Hammond Bride of Arthur Bridge Jr.

From Wauwatosa, Wis., comes the announcement of the marriage on April 13 of Miss Kathryn Merrick Hammond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis M. Hammond, to Arthur Bridge Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Bridge of South Milwaukee. Both Mr. Bridge and his bride are graduates of the University of Wisconsin. They have gone south on a wedding trip and will live in Chicago.

Announce Engagement of Catherine Griffith

Mrs. Milton Beardsley Griffith of 1516 East 54th street, formerly of Hinsdale, announces the engagement of her daughter, Catherine Celene, to Walter Makepeace Lillie, son of Prof. and Mrs. Ralph Stayner Lillie of Chicago and Woods Hole, Mass. Miss Griffith attended the University of Chicago, the Chicago Art institute, and the Atelier Andre L'Hote in Paris. Her fiancé was graduated from Colgate university and from the University of Chicago. The wedding is to take place late in May.

Remuda Ranch Attracts Many Chicago Guests

By Lolita Linn.

WICKENBURG, ARIZ.—In the tradition of the old west, no stranger was asked who or what he was back home. But neither was he accepted without reservation as a friend, particularly if he was an easterner and a dude.

But today in Wickenburg, mining and cattle center of old Arizona, a guest at one of the outlying ranches also is a welcome guest of the town. Townspeople participate in the ranch rodeos, and dudes are welcomed at the annual volunteer firemen's ball.

Ernest L. Simpson of London, who has spent many winters at the Remuda ranch, is regarded by the people of Wickenburg less as a distinguished visitor than as a neighbor with whom they can discuss the weather and the price of cattle. Mr. Simpson's granddaughter, Audrey and his secretary, Miss Lea Metral, have been with him at the ranch this winter.

Their house, built around a flower garden patio, blends into the architectural scheme of the other ranch buildings. The large living room, very western in its informality and simplicity, is dominated by a great mural painting of graceful red-tipped ocatillo. The mural was done by R. Farrington Elwell, at one time foreman of Buffalo Bill's ranch.

Visitors to the new Kettering home inscribe their names not in a book, but on the panels of a large folding screen. Among the signatures of early callers we noticed that of Miss Rose L. Dickinson of Chicago, who visited the ranch twice this season.

A strictly western touch is provided by the railroad spikes driven into the wall outside the front door—parking space for the ten-gallon hats of callers.

These cowboy hats, beloved by all dudes in Arizona, are not mere affectations or ornaments [altho they are vastly becoming so] but serve a real purpose as a protection against sun and brush. Women usually wear them with a leather thong, known as a "throatlatch," under the chin. This device would be a real boon to any Chicago lady trying to take herself and her new spring bonnet safely across Michigan avenue.

The John V. Farwells III. and their children, Joan and Johnny, had their first experience of ranch life in Arizona when they visited the Remuda this spring. Miss Helen Hazeltine of Chicago has spent three months on the ranch. Recent visitors were the Willard L. Kings of Chicago, and their daughter, Margaret; Miss Betty Hall of Evanston, and Mrs. Ralph W. Cornelison of Chicago and her daughter, Ann.

Mrs. Charles Kittle of Chicago called last week to greet Carl Stibolt, formerly of Lake Forest, and other friends at the Remuda ranch. She was on her way to the coast. Mrs. Hollis Kirk, who has spent the entire season at the Remuda, is postponing her return to Chicago until June. Mrs. Kirk is one of the star performers in the weekly ranch rodeos, and pairs up with Hank Aldrich, Remuda head wrangler, in goat-roping contests.

Guests who like to hear about the old days of Wickenburg, when the Vulture gold mine was running wide open, will be interested in the Remuda's newest addition, the Double R ranch, which lies just across the Hassayampa river. The ranch was a stop on the old stage coach route and one of the adobe buildings still standing once housed the "Last Chance Saloon." There is a tradition that anybody who drinks from the Hassayampa river never speaks the truth again, and apparently some old-time wag had partaken freely of river water, or something more potent, for an inscription on the wall of the saloon reads: "July, 1880—It snowed."

It is almost safe to say that few Phoenicians know as many interesting places to visit in the Salt river valley as Mrs. Hugo Dalmar of Chicago, who has made a hobby of "collecting" them on her many visits to Arizona. While the William H. Stanleys and the Oscar Heinemans of Chicago were staying at the Biltmore recently, Mrs. Dalmar took them to see what is perhaps the choicest item in her collection, the beautiful irrigated ranch outside Litchfield Park belonging to Colonel Dale Bumstead, formerly of Oak Park.

Many generations of Hopi Indians have called this particular bit of desert "Tal Wi Wi," meaning "the land which the sun shines on first," and it is an accurate description, for the most diverse plants from all parts of the world have made themselves at home here, and thrive in a fashion unknown even in their native lands. An Arab chieftain who had traveled a long way to see this desert garden told Colonel Bumstead that the palms, which he called by their first names and greeted as old friends, seemed far more happy and contented at Tal Wi Wi than their ancestors had ever been in Arabia.

The pride of Tal Wi Wi is the great vineyard of Thompson's seedless grapes, just now in its late adolescence, but visitors are equally fascinated by the tall cypresses, which have made their entire growth in nine years, and in the exotic trees now blooming in the arboretum. Probably the most interesting of these are the "tree of the crown of thorns" and the "tree of orchids," loaded with purple blossoms which are startling facsimiles of the rarer blooms of milady's corsage.

Mrs. Dalmar, who has been staying at the Biltmore with her son, Hugo, will not return to Chicago until the last of April. Mrs. August Von Glahn of Chicago, who came to the Biltmore in February, also plans to stay until about May 1. She has just returned from a trip thru the northern part of Arizona and the beautiful Oak Creek canyon.

Mrs. John Wineberg and her three daughters, Mitzi, Martha, and Ann, returned to Chicago recently. They had been at the Biltmore since January.

Among the late stayers at the Biltmore are Miss Nora Carney of Lake Forest, the James G. McMillans of Winnetka, the Joseph O. Watkins, Mrs. Morris L. Johnston, and Miss Mary Louise Anderson, all of Chicago. Miss Anderson has a home on the Biltmore estates.

The E. A. Tracys, the George R. Mitchells, Daniel Peterkin, and Jay C. McCord are new arrivals from Chicago.

Frank Bering of Chicago arrived in Phoenix last week for a short vacation. Recent arrivals at Camel Back Inn are Mrs. James McHugh of Chicago and her sons, Jim and Jack; Beverly M. Persons of Highland Park and his daughter, Joan.

Late spring has concentrated the attention of Arizona visitors on the northern part of the state and the "red rock country" south of Flagstaff. The A. M. Sheldons, the Elliott Donnelleys, and Mr. Donnelley's sister, Mrs. Charles C. Haffner, are among the Chicagoans staying at the Soda Springs ranch near Rimrock in the Verde valley. The Sheldon and Donnelley children have come to what is indeed a child's paradise, with its old cedar corral and barn; a bathing pool, fed by soda springs, in which it is impossible to sink; and all around the caves of prehistoric peoples inviting exploration.

They say in northern Arizona that there is no opening in the rock cliffs which has not been used at one time or another as a shelter for man. Away back when Europe was still in the so-called dark ages, a race of oriental origin carved themselves homes in the limestone cliffs above Beaver creek. Just a short drive from Soda Springs is the best preserved of these prehistoric dwellings, called Montezuma's castle by the Spaniards, the first white men to explore this country. Montezuma's castle is as sheer a structure as a Chicago apartment building, and served much the same purpose. Into the cliffs are carried layer upon layer of cubicles, which were used as homes and places of refuge from enemies. There were no steps, and apparently the castle dwellers ascended to their apartments by means of ropes when their day's work was done on the farms in the river bed. Virginia Lowdermilk, who, with her husband, Romaine, owns and manages Soda Springs ranch, remembers that as a child she played around the castle before it was declared a national monument, and used to climb up its sides on ladders made of leather thongs stretched between flimsy poles.

WEDS JUNE 1

Miss Virginia Louise Tindal, whose engagement to Joseph John Russo, son of John Russo of 1508 North Kolin avenue, is announced by her parents, Dr. and Mrs. John M. Tindal of 5515 West Fulton street. The wedding will take place on June 1 at the St. Thomas Aquinas church. [Hoffman Studios Photo.]

Contract According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1940: By Ely Culbertson.]

Every bridge teacher, lecturer, and quasi-authority is forced to listen to the following several times a week: "Oh, I don't need any pointers on the play of the hand—it is my bidding that needs a little brushing up."

Having watched the average player murder his hands for many years, I am naturally not too much impressed by the above announcement. As a matter of sober fact, average bidding is infinitely superior to average play. I cannot too strongly urge my readers to disabuse their minds of any such fiction that their play needs no improvement. Nothing is more injurious to one's game—of whatever grade it may be—than a smug, self-satisfied viewpoint. Just to prove that what I am getting at makes sense, test yourself out on the following hands. They are not trick hands, nor at all difficult. Simply study each layout and decide on a plan of play. Then glance at the end of this article and see whether you have taken into consideration the salient points.

How would you feel if you were South and your contract was six diamonds? You have taken the first seven tricks, but you have a certain heart loser and you have already discovered that West holds the guarded trump king in front of dummy's blank ace. Do you think your chances are very good to keep West from making a trump trick and defeating you? Well, anyway, do you throw in a sponge, or do you fight it out?

Answer: This six card problem is virtually an optical illusion. Apparently you must lose a heart and a trump trick, but actually to shut out West's diamond king is simplicity itself! Simply cash your two spade tricks and the heart jack, then exit with your low heart. East, thrown on lead, must return a club. You ruff with the diamond nine. If West overruffs with the king, dummy smothers him with the ace; if he underruffs with the eight, you naturally win the trick and dummy's ace is preserved for the last and fulfilling trick.

West leads the club king and East plays the five. How should South plan the play?

Hand No. 5.

3 no trump	Pass	4 spades	Pass

West leads the heart jack. How should South play the hand?

Answers.

1. It is useless to try the old flim-flam play of dropping the trump king and ace together on the first trump trick. On winning the first diamond, declarer should run his good hearts and hope for a 3-3 distribution in that suit. If the trumps are 2-1, the contract now cannot fail. On the fourth heart, dummy's losing diamond is discarded and whether this trick is ruffed by the deuce or a high trump, declarer's losses are held to two trump tricks and a club. If the three adverse trumps are bunched in one hand, the contract cannot be made.

2. Win the opening lead in the South hand and lead the spade king. Now try the heart king and when East's eightspot falls, go over to dummy's club king and lead a small heart. If East shows out, go up with the king and concede a heart trick to West. West's best defense is to return a trump which is won in the South hand and the fourth round of hearts is trumped with dummy's ace. Declarer's hand can now be entered with a diamond and the balance of the trumps are drawn, the fifth heart being established.

If East follows with the 10 or queen of hearts on the second round of that suit, declarer goes up with the ace, draws trump and concedes a heart. If East plays a small heart to the second round, declarer still goes up with the king, bearing in mind that it would have been fantastic for East to false-card with the eight, holding Q-10-8-x.

3. After ruffing the club ace in dummy, the diamond queen should be led. The only chance of making the contract is to find the singleton jack in the West hand. Dropping the singleton king is useless because a diamond trick still must be lost to the J-9 combination.

4. Although both major finesses run up to West, it does no harm to stay off the first club trick. West, by some mishap, might shift to a major suit. But West continues with the club queen and East shows out. West is therefore marked with a five card club suit. If West can be given the lead at the proper time to lead one of the majors, the ninth trick is assured. With this thought in mind, declarer should run just enough diamonds to exhaust West of that suit, and then throw West in with his own club suit. He will garner, in all, four club tricks but then must lead spades or hearts for the ninth trick. Declarer must not run all of dummy's diamonds or his own hand will be squeezed.

5. After winning with the heart ace, the trump ace should be led, followed by a small diamond to declarer's ace. At this point, a small spade should be led and not the jack or ten. If the adverse trumps are 3-3, any spade leads will exhaust the defensive trumps with the loss of only two tricks. But if the trumps are divided 4-2 with an honor in the doubleton holding, only a small spade to the second trump trick will fulfill the contract. The diamonds do not split—therefore a club trick must also be lost.

Fine Paintings Are Shown by Chicago Artists

By Eleanor Jewett.

April has been and continues to be a month filled with exciting and important exhibitions in the galleries. One of the most intriguing shows is that by artist members of the Association of Chicago Painters and Sculptors at the Chicago galleries, 215 North Michigan avenue. The association may have hung a better group of pictures in previous exhibitions, but we doubt it. The current show is superlatively fine; it represents the best and most virile work being done today in and about Chicago.

The first breath of the European war to have touched one of our exhibits is felt here. The exquisite portrait of "Miss Sheila Wyndham," by Charles Sneed Williams, reminds us that Mr. Williams has been in England since last June and that since the outbreak of hostilities he has been active in war work. He and Mrs. Williams are in London; their daughter, Virginia, is in the country. The portrait is one that was shown with great effect last winter in a one-man show of Mr. Williams' work at the Ackermann galleries. It has lost nothing of its charm and beauty since the first showing. Rarely has a more successful portrait been put on exhibit. Color, composition, likeness, simplicity of pose, all the qualities which make a portrait fine are found in it.

Entirely different in atmosphere and far removed in key is the superb, almost photographic "Chief Bread," an Indian portrait by Edward T. Grigware. Different again is the charming, unaffected head, "Portrait of Mrs. A. M.," by Benjamin S. Kanne, and still different, tho just as pleasing, is the meticulous and beautifully enameled "Portrait," by Claude Buck, it, too, a small head. Anna Lynch offers still another type of portrait in her "Portrait of Mr. Franklin M. Miller," a painting that betrays the miniaturist in the artist, but is solid and likeable. Winnifred Pleimling shows a portrait, a young woman, attractive in color and pose. Two studies in personality, "Waitin'," by F. R. Harper, and "Gran'ma," by Oskar Gross, are excellently handled; the colored girl resigned to any fate, "Waitin'," is particularly intriguing.

Harriet Krawiec shows a brilliant arrangement, colorful and strongly painted, "Gourds"; Walter Krawiec has a stunning group from the stockyards, "Herefords and Percherons," which overshadows in vitality and character the "Auction of Belgian Horses at Sugar Grove Farm," by Eugenie Glaman. Averil Courtney Conwell shows "Madonna," a bit of exquisite painting, and an oriental delicacy flavors "The Chinese Horse," by Gasper J. Ruffolo. Frederic Tellander has a superb "Marine" and Gianni Gilfone and Tunis Ponsen show strong along shore pictures, "A New England Harbor" and "Along the Shores of Gaspé," respectively.

Adolph Heinze, Holger W. Jensen, Lucie Hartrath, John A. Spellman, Marshall D. Smith, Frank C. Peyraud, Leo A. Marzolo, and Ethel Crouch Brown are among the other 59 artists who make this exhibition one of the most effective Chicago has seen.

A one-man show of portraits and flower studies by Alice Mason is at the Cordon club to April 30. It is a charming exhibit, light and colorful.

An exhibit of water colors by Andrew Wyeth [son of the noted American landscape painter] opened yesterday at the Carson Pirie Scott galleries, to continue to May 10. It is a most unusual show. The pictures are stunning; gay, fresh, brisk, fine in composition and technique as proving the ability of the young American painter of today, the show stands unexcelled. Here is the sort of art so rarely found at present and so greatly needed. Do NOT miss this exhibit.

The Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Decorators sponsors the brilliant loan exhibition of unusual antiques current thru today at 840 North Michigan avenue. Among the many interesting objects are three unique collections of pictures belonging to prominent Chicagoans. Particularly fine is the group of wax pictures lent by Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hamill; the group of cutout pictures lent by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brewster is one of the most complete collections of its kind in the country and is fascinating; the third different kind of picture is the group of amusing bead pictures lent by Mrs. Frank Mulford.

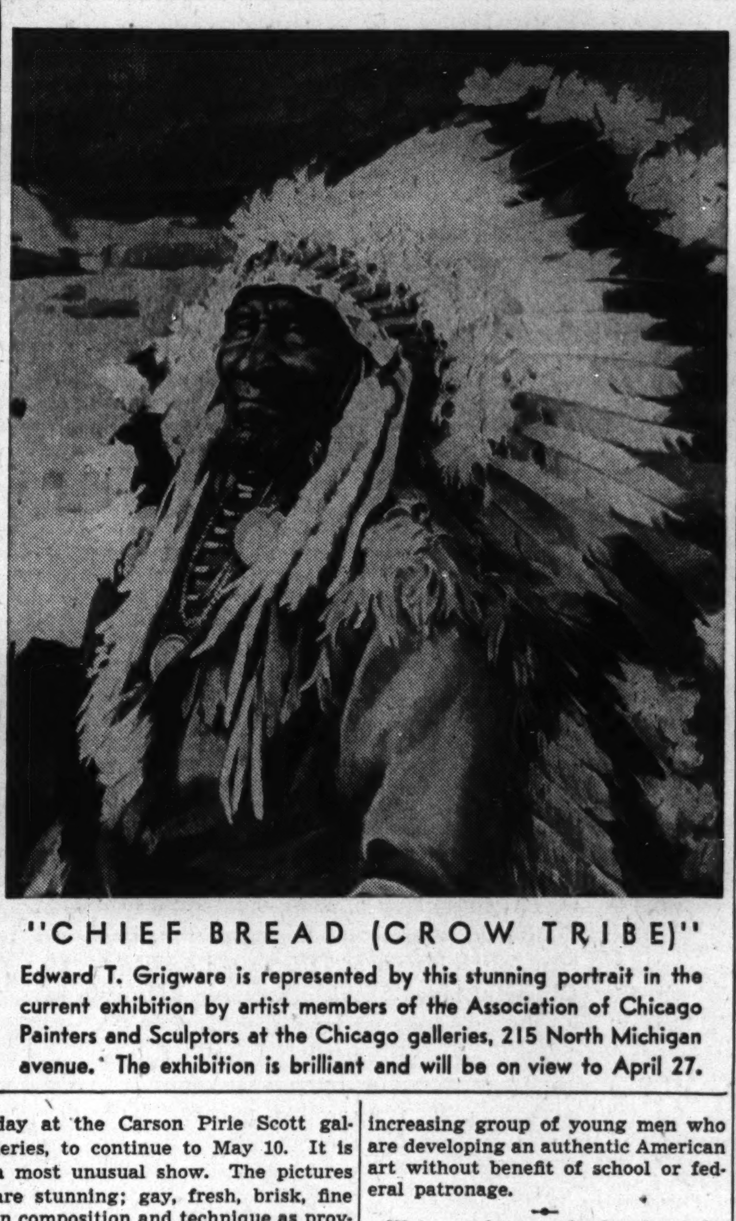
Two of Mrs. James Ward Thorne's latest miniature rooms also are in the show. These are part of her new American group which is to be displayed next autumn at the Art institute. The two tiny rooms represent the colonial periods in America with the most ravishing completeness.

An exhibition of new paintings of the ballet by Carl Austen is at the Leo Buntman gallery, 17 North Wabash avenue. The show is excellent. Young Mr. Austen has made an amazing advance in technique and craftsmanship. He is another of a slowly increasing group of young men who are developing an authentic American art without benefit of school or federal patronage.

Water colors and drawings by Theodore Glass is the exhibit thru April at the Drake hotel, sponsored by the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts.

The superb exhibit at the Arts club, Wrigley tower, "Origins of Modern Art," will hang to April 30. So many fine pictures are included in the show that it would be a pity to miss it. The title is misleading, at all events, the show does not prove the contention voiced in the title, but it scarcely matters under what pretense these paintings by Renoir, Degas, Chardin, Barye, Seurat, Monet, Manet, Jongkind, Corot, and Pissaro have been assembled. They are there and one may enjoy them to the full; there is no real need to make steps of them in an effort to account thru their beauty for the vagaries of Miro [his "The Flight of the Bird Over the Plain" is quite mad, but who wants to miss it?] and Picasso. Almost the farthest from the origins is Rouault with his sadistic orgies of religious negations, and Rivera with the hauntingly suggestive "Tree," one of those perverted pictures that repel while fascinating.

The Northwest Art league is holding its annual spring exhibit at St. Paul's house, 3830 North California, to April 27. Among the artists represented are Richard Chase, Josephine Eastman, Jessie Field, Julia Sulzer Griffith, Ted Vognild, and Margaret Selleck.



"CHIEF BREAD (CROW TRIBE)"

Edward T. Grigware is represented by this stunning portrait in the current exhibition by artist members of the Association of Chicago Painters and Sculptors at the Chicago galleries, 215 North Michigan avenue. The exhibition is brilliant and will be on view to April 27.

Complainer Is Chronic Bore Minus Charm

By Helen Bartlett.

At the risk of having the old taunt, "Physician, heal thyself," jeered at us, we want to talk things over with the chronic complainers who never have a kind word to say about anything. The risk lies in the fact that, in this weekly column, we spend at least half our time finding fault with some one or something, such as the store clerk who calls us "dearie"; the person on the other end of the telephone who introduces her conversation by asking "Who is this?"; the one who is always pushing, the one who, the one who, and on ad infinitum.

Looking back, we certainly have picked a lot of bones, professionally at least.

The thing we would like to accomplish today is some success in persuading those perennial pessimists that life for themselves and life for others who have to listen to them would be brighter if they looked for and found something pleasant to talk about. They also would make themselves much more charming, personable individuals whose company would be more enjoyable and sought after.

I'm not looking for a lot of boring Pollyannas. They show lack of intelligence and no sense of discrimination. A critical judgment is an admirable quality, but it doesn't necessarily mean that a critical attitude finds nothing but the worst. From intelligent persons I expect a good rounded opinion of things, and I expect them to give credit where it is deserved.

The persons I resent are those who refuse to see the general effect of a thing which may be favorable, but instead prefer to delve down into the depths in order to pick out some little flaw that really is very unimportant, either in itself or in relation with the whole picture. Compliments or sincerely favorable remarks from persons of this disposition are so rare as to be shocking. If you look for errors, mistakes and flaws, that is what you are certain to find to the exclusion of everything of a pleasant nature.

Being a complainer is one of the sure ways of losing friends, and the reason is that complainers make themselves such poor company.

April

By Eleanor Jewett.

The flutter of flowers in sheltered nooks,
The singing of birds, the rustle of brooks,
The glory of sunshine, the curtain of rains—
April is running along the lanes!

You cannot mistake that joyous dance,
The warmth of her touch, the light of her glance;
April, a maiden of infinite moods,
Is queen over gardens and meadows and woods!

Chicago Pianist Closes Miami Music Season

By Clarissa Greene.

MIAMI, FLA. Mary Hughes Call, Chicago pianist, as guest artist with the University of Miami Symphony orchestra, brought to a brilliant close a highly successful subscription series last Monday night. Generous response to encores served further to endear this artist with her audience. Repeated curtain calls testified to genuine appreciation of the presentation of Schumann's concerto in A minor for piano and orchestra.

It was the third appearance of the artist here, and many remember the beauty of her interpretation of a Saint-Saëns concerto in 1936. Many Chicago friends assembled at an after-concert party at the university.

On Wednesday Mrs. Call shared honors with her father, George A. Hughes, who came from Chicago for the concert, when Mrs. Hughes entertained with a luncheon for 60 guests. The event, observing birthdays of father and daughter, was an al fresco party where friends wandered indoors and out into adjoining patios.

Mr. Hughes' brother and sister-in-law, the William Hughes of Evanston; Mrs. Herbert W. Young, and Dr. and Mrs. William T. Gilman were among Chicagoans attending.

Mrs. Charles Deering of Chicago was among the guests at the annual gardenia party of Mrs. Robert H. Montgomery on Cutler road. Col. and Mrs. Montgomery are neighbors of Mrs. Deering and their estate is one of the most beautiful in the area. More than 500 varieties of palms, rare orchids, and other botanical treasures vie with the annual wealth of gardenias for attention and interests.

Mrs. Oliver Sollitt, Chicago and South Miami, was installed Thursday as a director of the Housekeepers' club of Coconut Grove, Florida's oldest woman's club. Installation followed a luncheon in the beautiful dining room of the International airport at Dinner Key, where arriving and departing airliners furnish a never failing thrill.

Mrs. Emily Battelle Offutt and her partner, Mrs. Leslie Buswell of Boston, Mass., were winners in last week's bridge tournament at the Surf club. So popular have the tournaments been that they have been continued after club services were suspended for the summer. Thursday a group of more than 30 gathered for a picnic luncheon before the tournament with the club, its patios, and terraces at their disposal. The trophy awarded Mrs. Offutt was her third in a row.

Mrs. John E. Burks and her mother, Mrs. George M. Patch of Oak Park, who has been visiting at the Burks' home, went to St. Petersburg Tuesday to attend the Florida League of Women Voters' first convention. Mrs. Burks responded to the welcome extended by the president of the Hostess league.

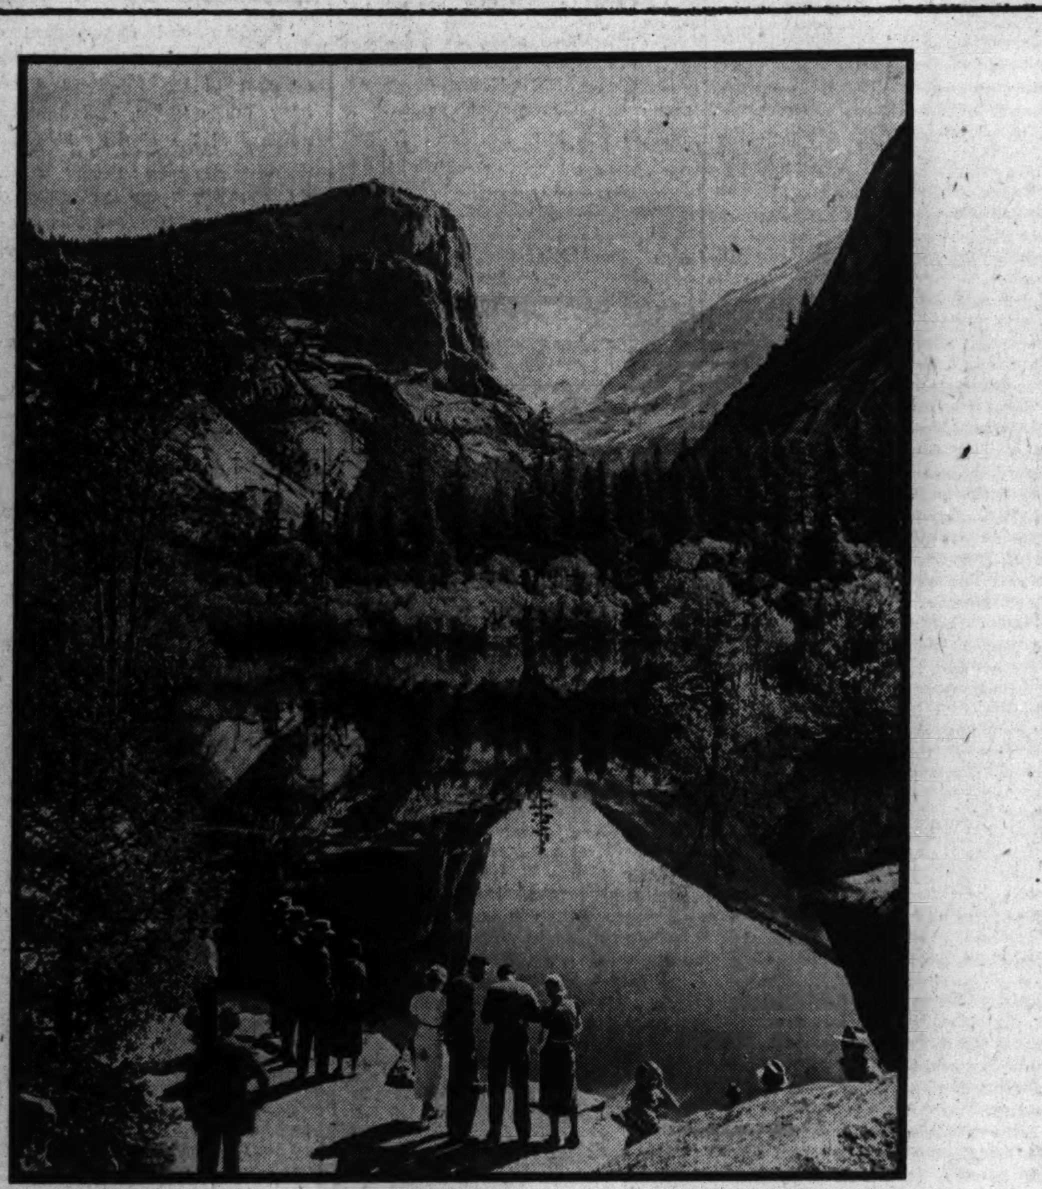
Mrs. Thomas J. Pancoast was re-elected president of the Miami Beach Woman's club, which will be good news to many visitors who have enjoyed the gracious hospitality of the club and its perennial president. Mrs. Pancoast, founder-president, has been returned to the chair annually since its organization.

Last Sunday saw the last of the luncheon-dances at the Surf club, but cabana and swimming pool as well as surf bathing have proven popular with members who linger later than usual to enjoy the springtime weather.

The 1940 horse show series was inaugurated Wednesday night with nine classes entered. The exhibit was held in the ring of the Coral Gables Riding academy. Privately owned gaited horses were shown in the first of the series which is sponsored by the Greater Miami Horsemen's association. The children's division leads, tho the number of horsemanship classes has been greatly increased since last year's series.

Large Islands.

The size of some West Indies islands surprises many tourists. Cuba is three times as big as Holland, Haiti-Santo Domingo is twice the size of Switzerland, and the combined land area of all the islands is larger than Great Britain.



TIME OUT FOR A BIT OF REFLECTION

Havana's Prado Crowded as a Result of War

HAVANA, CUBA. With London's famed Piccadilly Circus and Paris' Rue de la Paix and other European thoroughfares virtually deserted, the Prado, this city's picturesque artery, today is thronged with cosmopolites from the corners of the world.

One of the few world-famous avenues to still retain its color and charm is ablaze with more life and color than it has enjoyed during the last decade. For the next few weeks, with a spectacular sports program under way and the annual Cuban carnival in full swing, the Prado is perhaps at the peak of its gayety. With its picturesque sidewalk cafés, leafy vistas, and carnival atmosphere, this historic avenue has become the Mecca of thousands of tourists.

The Prado stretches from Fraternity park to the blue shores of the Gulf of Mexico. Along its green and inviting way are dozens of delightful outdoor cafés, reminiscent of Paris and of old Madrid. All of Havana's colorful carnival parades, pass along its broad expanse. Tropical trees and shrubs lend an exotic atmosphere.

Famous for its music and particularly the Cuban rhumba, which has taken the smart spots of North America by storm, heard from the windows of fascinating Havana clubs, that border the Prado, makes the avenue a favorite with American visitors.

Famous, too, is the Prado as the center of Havana's holiday life with dark eyed señoritas and handsome caballeros always in evidence and smart travelers from all over the world crowding into the clubs, theaters, and fine shops.

From Havana's Prado may be seen the lights of the Cuban capitol, one of the handsomest buildings in the new world, and the busy life of its beautiful harbor.

TIPS TO TOURISTS

I have often seen Yellowstone referred to as America's largest national park. Which is the smallest? And how does its size compare with that of Yellowstone? E. F. S.

The distinction of being the smallest is claimed for Abraham Lincoln National park at Springfield, Ill. Its area is only .17 of a square mile, as compared with Yellowstone's 3,438 square miles.

When is the blossom festival to be held at St. Joseph and Benton Harbor, Mich.? J. G. W.

May 5 to 12.

Please tell me when the spring garden tours will be held at Santa Barbara, Cal. M. B.

Private gardens in both Santa Barbara and Montecito are to be open to visitors each Friday evening until May 3.

What can you tell me about St. Helen's Island in the St. Lawrence river? D. K.

It is one of Montreal's finest parks. In the early days it was the strategic defense point for that city. The old barracks still stand in the shadow of the steel superstructure of the Jacques Cartier bridge, linking the island to the city. There also is a blockhouse dating back to the war of 1812. The fortifications have been repaired, and an elaborate beautification program is being carried out by the government. Under a reclamation project recently started, the area of the island will be increased from 148 acres to 400.

We wish to visit Hot Springs, Va. How hot does it get there in the summertime? T. A. H.

The thermometer there rarely goes above 85 degrees. The average night temperature from June to October is 55 degrees.

Where can I get detailed information about the summer vacation possibilities in Wisconsin?—D. C. D.

"Dead Man's Chest."

The "Dead Man's Chest" of the old pirate's chantey with the refrain, "Yo-ho-ho, and a bottle of rum!" is a barren rock in the Virgin Islands, on which the pirate, John Teach, marooned 15 of his men without rum or water, as discipline.

Fishing in Puerto Rico.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico.—The sport of trolling from fast launches is becoming a leading tourist attraction off Mayaguez, on the western coast of this island. Amberjack, bonito, sailfish, barracuda, and giant tuna are found there.

This Is "Travel America Year" for Americans

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, D. C. The government is after the New Yorker who's never been west of the Hudson river. It's after the Iowa storekeeper who's never been east, the Alabama planter who's never been north, and the Michigan factory hand who's never been south.

The lines are out, too, for señores and señoras of Latin America, who spent $140,000,000 last year on pilgrimages to Paris, the Swiss Alps, and elsewhere in Europe.

This is "Travel America Year," by proclamation of President Roosevelt and the United States travel bureau is out to sell America to Americans.

Hotels, railroad, air, and bus companies, hot dog dealers, sporting goods stores, and filling stations long have looked sadly on the nation's $500,000,000 annual "adverse travel trade balance"—the difference between what foreign travelers spend in America and what American tourists spend abroad.

Now, with the watering spots of the old world clouded by war's uncertainty, the travel industry in this country is looking for the biggest summer business in history.

If the tourist agents can get Americans to look over such attractions as the Grand Canyon, the Great Smokies, and the Golden Gate, they believe they can look for "repeat orders" on American travel in future years.

"It's an opportunity we may never have again," said Director Bruce McNamee of the travel bureau. "It's our big chance to get Americans to stay in America for their vacations."

McNamee predicts that more than $6,000,000,000 will be spent on travel in the United States this year. In 1939 the sum was $5,830,000,000.

McNamee's sales talk boosts the United States as a land with more varied and wonderful scenic attractions than any other nation on earth.

"The scenic splendors of the old world have a fence around them," he says, "and you pay so much a look. In the United States, areas containing some of nature's greatest wonders—with good fishing, hunting, swimming, and boating to boot—are enclosed in national parks and national forests, where the workman is blood brother to the millionaire. There you can camp in tent or cabin for a small fee—or you can live in style at a luxury hotel.

"From the splendors of Alaska to those of Hawaii and Puerto Rico, we have everything for the tourist."

The last flip of a fin and another beauty is landed. The scene is typical of those enacted each year in the streams thruout the province of Quebec.

U. S. Trapping Deer in North Carolina National Parks

ASHEVILLE, N. C.—Box traps, many times larger but of the same general type that small boys use for trapping rabbits, are being used in the Pisgah national game preserve to trap live deer. So far 18 of the animals have been captured and transferred to other game preserves in western North Carolina and nearby states to form the nucleus for future deer herds, according to H. B. Bosworth, Pisgah national forest supervisor.

Deer seldom roam far from the forests in which they were born, and for this reason, game propagation experts state, it is necessary to transfer them bodily to new refuge areas. The deer herds in the Pisgah refuge grew too large for the food supply, but the deer didn't leave. So the new trap was designed. Baited with apples, it lures the deer into a dark box where the animal cannot hurt himself. Then he is transferred to a crate and taken to a new home.

Bears are sometimes caught in the traps, but the trapped bear leaves a demolished trap behind him. About 100 deer are trapped each winter season in the Pisgah game preserve.

English in Mexico.

MEXICO CITY.—Testimony of the increasing numbers of tourists entering Mexico is the fact that most newspapers in the capital now publish a regular section in English.

Trans-Andean Tunnel Links Two Countries

SANTIAGO, CHILE. The famous tunnel of the Trans-Andean railway, which pierces the backbone of the Andes and unites Argentina and Chile, has just been opened to motor car traffic.

This Trans-Andean tunnel is two miles above sea level, and just under two miles in length. When first opened in 1909 there was no thought of automobile traffic between these two republics, but since the Andean motor highway has been constructed, auto traffic, both by car and truck, has increased surprisingly.

It was not found difficult to adapt the tunnel to auto traffic. The tunnel itself is about 15 feet wide, but the railway track is of the narrow "meter gauge"—about 40 inches between tracks—and there is plenty of room for an auto road. Trains go thru the tunnel only three times a week. Motor cars and trucks, using this tunnel, will save an additional climb of over 3,000 feet over the crest of the pass which is 13,300 feet high and is apt to be blocked by snow eight months out of the year.

The new International Trans-Andean motor highway from the Chilean capital to Mendoza in the Argentine is about 250 miles long, and cars easily make the run in one day. From ocean to ocean, that is from Valparaiso to Buenos Aires, it is a little over 900 miles. During their summer season [our winter months] many cars make this journey as a vacation jaunt.

At the crest of the pass above the tunnel is the famous "Christ of the Andes" statue, which stands on the boundary between these two nations, erected in 1904 as a symbol of eternal peace.

A new, five mile auto tunnel thru the Andes, at a much lower level than the existing railroad tunnel, is now being discussed as an important link in the Pan-American highway.

A Jaunt Into the Heart of Land of Zulus

By Mason Warner.

DURBAN, NATAL SOUTH AFRICA. This port is the entry to the land of the Zulus, the fiercest and bloodthirstiest natives encountered by the white man in Africa.

It required 50 years of almost constant warfare to subdue the savage nation, which numbered among its leaders treacherous Dingaan, murderer of thousands of whites and blacks, and Chaka, the devilish leader with the military organizing genius of a Napoleon. Chaka caused to be massacred 7,000 men and women as a token of grief at the death of his mother.

Cetewayo was another leader of Zulu rebellions against white domination. In the course of one of these, on June 1, 1879, the prince imperial of France, Napoleon Eugene, son of the Empress Eugénie, and serving with the English troops, was ambushed and killed. The young prince died fighting bravely. In his body were 18 assagai wounds, any one of five of which would have been fatal.

Queen Victoria erected a stone cross as a memorial to mark the spot where the prince imperial fell. The monument was later visited by Empress Eugénie, who made the pilgrimage to the remote place to spend eight days there in tribute to the memory of her son.

We took a motor drive of less than 40 miles from Durban into the heart of Zululand, the great native reservation. A huge section of it is known as the Valley of a Thousand Hills. It is not misnamed. We did not count the hills, but they looked as if they numbered 10,000. They stretched far away and all around into a panorama by high rolling peaks and twisting valleys.

In the valleys and on the hillsides were numerous kraals — circular, thatch roofed huts of reeds, poles, and mud, affording shelter for chickens, goats, and humans in the one large room. Meals were cooked in pots and pans placed over a fire in the center of the hut. We viewed the interiors of three kraals. In none was there a bed, chair, or table. Primitive mats on the ground, with wood blocks for pillows and skins for covers, apparently answered the purpose of all furniture. With chickens and goats running in and out of the huts, one did not expect to find cleanliness. The majority of the women were naked from the waist up; the youngsters wore even less.

Zulus measure their wealth in cattle, which graze on the grass covered slopes and require no shelter in the warm climate. A chief may own herds of 1,000 or more, with a trading value of $4 to $5 a head.

With only one day at our disposal, we could learn little of the life and customs of the Zulus, but we were informed their standards of morality were unusually high. Polygamy is the general custom, wives being obtained by giving cattle to the bride's family—from five to 50 cows per wife. We were assured that immorality was severely punished. Judging from the number of children, the subject of birth control receives no attention in Zululand.

"The Zulus are the fightingest and the beer-drinkingest people on earth," we were told by a long time resident of Durban. A "beer drink" is a festive occasion, participated in by all the members of the community. They gather at a chosen spot, the women bearing two—and even five-gallon jars of beer on their heads, and they drink to satiation.

"Kaffir beer," the drink of the Zulus, is made from Kaffir corn. I drank it, and found it mild and refreshing, but it is no secret that it grows stronger with age and that the natives are not above spiking it with alcohol to make it more potent.

It was difficult to realize that the Valley of a Thousand Hills was within a two hour drive from Durban, one of the leading cities of the 20th century. Durban is a happy combination of Atlantic City and Miami, with block after block of tall, imposing, up-to-date hotels, and a warm surf breaking over a beach more than a mile long.

Notwithstanding its variegated population, the city is English—decidedly so, with everything dear to the heart of the Englishman, from bowling on the green to horse racing. Its 260,000 inhabitants are classified as: European, 95,000; Asiatic, principally East Indian, 88,000; native black, 69,000; colored, 8,000. The small proportion of mixed blood is notable.

Durban has a cosmopolitan air, but is nevertheless clean and attractive. The paved streets are beautified by rows of jacaranda, flamboyant, spathodea, and other flowering trees, while the homes and lawns are adorned with poinsettias, bougainvillaea, "red hot pokers," golden shower, and blooms that give the scene a holiday atmosphere.

Riverside, Burman drive, and Snell parade offered particularly interesting promenades. Our walks there were enlivened by wild and free monkeys—wild but not timid. In fact, they were rather friendly, for they suspected every passerby of being bent on feeding them peanuts or bananas.

My daughter provided herself with peanuts at the first opportunity. The creatures swarmed over her in such numbers that she tossed the bag in the air for them to scramble for while she rearranged her hat and coat.

The monkeys will take peanuts from your hand, but it is well to be careful that they do not snatch too roughly. When a motorist stops, they will emerge from the bushes and trees alongside the road and climb on the hoods and tops of cars, where they squat fearlessly while they eat.

NOT VERY WARLIKE

This view of mother and child in Zululand does not conform with the idea of the fierceness of the natives of that South African area.

Propose Park at Cumberland Gap

Washington, D. C., April 20.—Legislation to create a 50,000 acre Cumberland Gap national historical park in Tennessee, Kentucky, and Virginia has been indorsed unanimously by the house public lands committee.

Under terms of the bill the land either would be donated, or purchased with donated funds without cost to the government. The bill is a revision of previous ones which contemplated a park of much larger area. The revised measure carried the approval of the interior department and the budget bureau.

The park would embrace property in the Cumberland Gap-Cumberland Ford areas.

Giant Lily Pads.

Winston-Salem Restoring 18th Century Town

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. An 18th century Moravian village, unique in America's "restoration" programs, is being preserved here. The heart of the old city of Salem, almost intact, will be "conserved" against encroachment of heedless progress, and an area almost three blocks square will perpetuate the charm of the colonial settlement.

Several blocks of the Moravian settlement have been little changed by the times. Surrounding Salem college and the town square stand the dwellings, stores and public buildings of a century and a half ago, standing not by benefit so much of sentiment or benefaction as by benefit of their sturdiness and utility. To Salem's historical value is added a very practical use value which lifts the village from the musty category of a museum.

The present program, now about five years old, is sponsored by the Wachovia Historical society and aims at conservation rather than restoration, which is little needed in the settlement. A zoning ordinance will protect the defined section against encroachment.

While most of the old buildings are in the hands of Salemites themselves, a few have been acquired by the society, including the old church tavern, which is now occupied as a dwelling but which once more may become a colonial inn.

The program calls for a vigilant guard over the score of buildings in the district, the acquisition of endangered property, and the good care and repair of other buildings of historical interest.

Nucleus of the district is Salem college and the square, the college itself comprising many old and interesting buildings. Nearby is the Home Moravian church [1800] and across the street stands the "Brothers' house," owned by the church, a sturdy, thick-walled tribute to the Moravian artisans who settled the section.

One of the most magnificent buildings in the village is the Belo home, a huge southern town house of a later period. This mansion has been incorporated in the "conservation" plans. Other well-known buildings are the Reich house, 1792, the beautiful John Volger house, 1819, the tobacconist shop of 1771, and the Sisters' house, 1784. All of these, and many more, are standing much as they did a century or more ago, livable, in good condition and apparently destined for a long life.

Salem takes good care of its things, and as a consequence, the Wachovia Society's museum, occupying two buildings on the square, is said to contain the largest collection of local antiquities in America. Part of the collection is housed in the old Boys' school, built in 1792. This building is of historical and architectural interest, with its great walls, its Flemish brick chimneys and self-supporting stairs. Its rooms have been largely given their original appearance. The kitchen on the first floor has been refurnished, and two rooms upstairs have been furnished with authentic local colonial furniture. A schoolroom has been restored, complete with benches, old maps, books, and the pedagogue's table and chair.

Other rooms in this building give the visitor a graphic glimpse of the ancient village and its activity. The Moravians were artisans—the first in this wilderness—and here are preserved the evidences of their ingenuity and industry. There is a pottery, with wheel and samples of native ware; also a textile room which is breathtaking—here are the ancient machines and instruments for preparing flax, cotton and wool, and also a machine for making spinning wheels.

The machinery used in the original paper-making factory is on view, also the tools of the gunsmith, the tinner, and many other skilled workers, even the silhouette artist.

Connected with this building is the Hall of History, which contains one of the first fire engines in America, a stage coach, and relics of every period of the village's history, ranging from aboriginal exhibits to toys of the civil war period.

THEY'RE SACRED THERE

By imperial decree the thousands of deer in Nara, Japan's scenic national park, are not to be molested. They roam the playground at will and are far from shy.

School for Totem Pole Craftsmen Started at Sitka

Most visitors to Alaska consider their trip incomplete unless they bring home a real, old-fashioned, hand carved Indian totem pole to place beside the clock on the mantel.

This need not be a full grown pole 30 feet high, for a young or child's size, specimen, about three feet long, is equally satisfactory—and much easier to pack.

In the past genuine poles, the work of recognized Indian craftsmen, have been rather difficult to find. So the government has established a school for craftsmen in the Sitka National park. There, when the steamer calls at Sitka, one finds Indian boys making copies of the cedar poles carved many decades ago by their forefathers. These are for the museum. In their spare time the boys also turn out authentic, miniature copies for the tourist trade.

STEAMERS & PLANES

This Attraction Lives Up to Its Advance Notice

By Frederic Babcock.

PATZCUARO, MEXICO.

Eight to a crude dugout canoe, the Tarascan Indians come gliding across the lake. . . . Reaching the shore, they take up their burdens and prepare for the long trek to the village. . . . In sandaled feet and bare feet they trude along—limpng old squaws and sturdier old bucks, and the younger element, and the inevitable bevy of sleeping papooses carried on the backs of mothers and big sisters. . . . All of them [except the papooses] are loaded down, on top of their heads or across their shoulders; with fruits, vegetables, fish, textiles, mats, and rugs. . . . It is market day in Patzcuaro.

There are parts of Mexico not worth raving about. This is not one of them. The self-contained land of the Tarascans exhausts your supply of all the overworked adjectives such as "picturesque" and "colorful." It is one attraction that lives up to its advance notices.

The night train from Mexico City by way of Morelia leads past lakes dotted with fishermen and fringed with Indian huts that are little more than holes in the ground. The hills are ghostly in the moonlight. As the train approaches, or starts up from, each jerk-water station the natives jump on for a free, but brief, ride. They seem to take great pride in the fact that they —the people—own the railroad.

From the Patzcuaro station an auto takes you to Roberto Calderon's Hotel Posada de Don Vasco, and there the picture is literally breath-taking. In a region that is as primitive as anywhere else in North America, the inn [opened up only a little more than a year ago] comes close to being the final word in Mexican modernism. It is built in the form of two hollow squares, with patios for hollows, and when you sit in one of them, amid the trees and shrubbery, and watch the white clouds shooting across the moon, you could swear the whole scene was faked. It is too real to be true.

Patzcuaro means "place of rest." You can, if you wish, go angling for black bass and whitefish, or rowing, or hunting for mallards, canvasback, deer, or jaguar, or driving to the heights of El Estribo, there to take in the whole panorama. But most visitors prefer merely to sit still and drink in the scenery. [Warning: Unless you can speak Spanish or Tarascan, don't go wandering off by yourself. This visitor tried it by hiking from the hotel to the town by one road and essaying to return by another. We got lost in the hills, and had to follow a non-English speaking Indian, and his burro, all the way back to town.]

The one trip everybody must take is the ride to the Island of Janitzio in Lake Patzcuaro. You make your way among mudhens and seaweed, and native fishermen wielding little round paddles, and your boat leaves in its wake weird patterns in the pale green waters. Stepping ashore, you start straight upward.

Janitzio is so steep that it is traversed entirely by switchbacks. You don't walk there; you climb. It is like a tiny mountainside nation, set off by itself and not interested in what's going on in the rest of the world. The islanders, dignified and preoccupied, greet you coolly—if they greet you at all. They're more concerned about weaving their fishnets out of thread than they are about entertaining, or selling curios to, intruders. The thread, strung out on and between trees all over the island, gives you the impression of being a system of telephone or electric light wires in Lilliputia.

Atop the blue misted hump that is the island, and therefore dominating the countryside, is a statue of the Mexican hero, Morelos, done [in 1934] in heroic proportions. His hand is lifted as if in benediction of his people. He is only a shadow of his former self, inasmuch as his interior is hollow. The inside walls are covered with murals depicting the fight for freedom from Spain. Critics disagree as to the statue's artistry, but nobody denies it is spectacular.

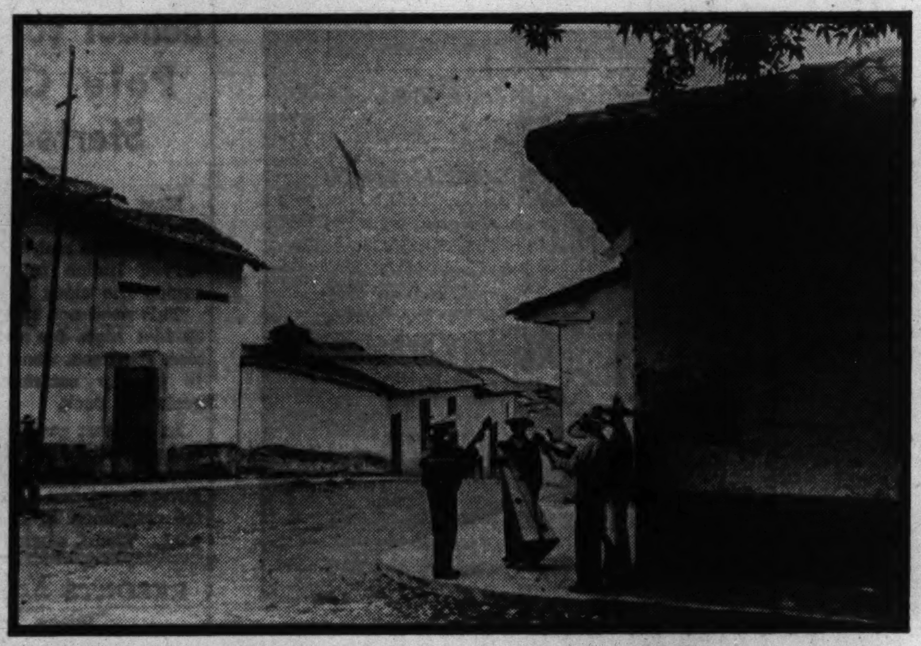
The town itself is not particularly clean. The homesteads are alive with pigs, chickens, and pigeons. The older generation carries on just as its forefathers have been doing for centuries. But the younger folk, learning to read and write, and to appreciate some of the finer things of life, give promise of some day bringing about a peaceful revolution.

When that day arrives, Janitzio will be cleaner, but, by the same token, much less atmospheric. It no longer will look like a picture out of a book of Mother Goose rhymes.



THEY SHALL HAVE MEXICAN MUSIC

Roaming musicians in Patzcuaro, Mexico, two miles from the lake of the same name. The village is the Mecca of Indians crossing the lake with their wares on market day.

New Vatican City Coins Will Honor Pius XII.

ROME, Italy.—The Vatican State is about to put into circulation the new coins bearing the head and armorial bearings of Pope Pius XII., together with the year of his election. In all other respects these coins will be exactly the same as those minted for the papacy of Pius XI. The minting of the Vatican currency is regulated by a special financial convention with Italy, concluded in August, 1930, and ratified the following January. The Vatican coins are of the same value, material, and dimensions as the Italian coins, the only difference being in the minting.

President's Visit to Panama Stirs Interest in Canal

COLON, PANAMA.

President Roosevelt's recent trip to Panama has awakened more interest than ever in the "crossroads of the world," according to travel officials. Like the President himself, no American can fail to thrill with patriotic pride as he views the mighty locks and lakes of the famous canal, the culmination of four centuries of dreams, plans and discouraging effort.

Thanks to American engineering and sanitation genius, this city on the Atlantic and Panama City on the Pacific are now model cities, as healthy as any in the United States or Europe. Modern plumbing, electrification, and a fine water supply provide every comfort available in any up to date community.

The Canal Zone is a strip of land extending five miles on either side of the canal itself, but excluding the cities of Colon and Panama City, which still remain under Panamanian control. The zone has an area of 553 square miles, and has a civilian population of about 29,000, not including military and naval personnel.

Trains running across the Isthmus are equipped with observation cars, making it easy to view the canal from various points along the route. Traveling from the Atlantic to the Pacific in little more than an hour and a half over a 48 mile track, visitors see Gatun lake, an artificial lake second in size only to the one formed by Boulder dam, the Chagres river, which "feeds" the lock operations; Pedro Miguel, and other towns created by the canal, as well as vivid tropical scenery and virgin jungle.

Vacationists to Be Shown How Films Are Made

Hollywood, Cal., April 20 (AP).—Tourists who want to see how the movies are made will have to go to San Francisco, not Hollywood, this summer.

Few tourists get into the studios here. But Actor Neil Hamilton, figuring that most tourists who visit Hollywood this summer also will visit the Golden Gate Exposition, is going to show, on Treasure Island, just what goes on in the Hollywood film factories.

"We're going to call it 'Hollywood Show—Stage 9,'" he says.

"The audience will watch Marian Marsh and myself working before cameras in a musical film with a cast of 20 dancing girls.

"It will be, in effect, a 45 minute vaudeville show. A narrator will point out to the audience the cameraman and other technicians, and will describe the various lenses used, the angle shots, closeups, dolly shots, and so on.

"Part of the show will be to run off the 'rushes' of what we will call 'yesterday's work.' These will be the untrimmed screenings, including the 'blowups' and other features which are eliminated from the finished film.

"After each show the patrons will be permitted to come down to the stage with motion and candid cameras to take all the pictures they want."

THE VOICE OF THE TRAVELER

CAROLINA SYMPHONY.

Chicago, April 16.—To the Travel Editor: I have just returned from Hendersonville, in western North Carolina, and I am anxious to have my fellow Chicagoans know of that El Dorado. My daughter, seriously ill with asthma, regained her health there. Many others might do likewise, were not the place so poorly publicized.

I don't want this to sound like a page from an atlas, but perhaps I should say that the altitude of Hendersonville [25 miles from Asheville] is 2,225 feet. It is on a little plateau, surrounded by beautiful mountains. A short ride in any direction leads over roads of almost unbelievable splendor to the tops of peaks as high as 6,635 feet. The climate is unexcelled in this country. The days are warm, but seldom hot, and the nights are cool.

That section has long been recognized by health authorities as a beneficent one for all sorts of ailments of body, mind, and soul. There are many government hospitals and sanitariums there. The water is unlike any I have ever tasted—just plain cool, soft, mountain elixir. [Please pardon me if I rave; on no other subject have I ever been so enthusiastic.]

Now that I have the climate settled, I shall proceed to the real features. The flowers, the lakes, the birds, the trees—these subjects are inexhaustible.

At present the mountains are a mass of pink and white dogwood, wild plum, apple, peach, and grape blossoms. The ground is carpeted with wood violets, thrift, and all kinds of small flowers. Later there will be delicately tinted ivy, laurel, rhododendron, and wild azalea, and the fantastic mimosa blossoms that look like fans of pink feathers and have an exotic and delightful odor.

Midsummer is a tangle of wild honeysuckle and roses, perfuming the air for miles around. I have seen trees completely covered with these plants, the red roses seeming to blossom from their branches. When all this is in full swing, and the mocking birds are joining other songsters in the calm atmosphere of a summer day, we have a Carolina symphony that I should like to preserve, and to present to every weary, discouraged person on earth.

I should like to mention briefly the wild berries and fruits that abound in July and August, and the market that the woman's club has built for the mountain people who formerly had no market for their amazing produce. This market, in season, is a highly unusual sight, the people coming in from remote places with every conceivable type of food and novelty, as well as flowers and trees from their farms.

I am returning there soon. I just couldn't miss it. I know a Kansas girl who married the head ranger of Pisgah National forest six years ago and who has never been willing to take time to return to her old home for a visit. She says that not for worlds would she miss springtime there; that summer is priceless, fall is best of all, and winter is peace and happiness and rest. That tells the story.

If you can print that story in THE TRIBUNE, I shall be the proudest woman from "them thar mountings" [that's the way they talk].

You are invited to visit this Land of the Sky. Be sure to bring along your color photographer, Edward Johnson. He wouldn't want to miss it.

New Road Links 6 National Parks

Vacationists with two weeks or more at their disposal this summer will find a new travel experience—a tour of six national parks in the Rocky mountains on both sides of the international "peace boundary."

By the end of June engineers and builders will have completed the last gap in a road linking Glacier, Waterton Lakes, Banff, Kootenay, Yoho, and Jasper parks—the last five situated in Canada.

Portions of this tour have been available for several years. To make the "short cut" between railroad points at Glacier park and Banff, motor coach service is maintained on daily summer schedules. This summer the service will be extended north to Jasper, over the new Columbia Icefields highway.

Second Oldest.

Visitors to Bermuda are permitted to attend sessions of the island parliament, second oldest in the British empire. Bermudians have not changed their form of government since 1620.

Clotilde Children's Pattern

If your daughter's clothes budget is beginning to assume proportions larger than you expected, the time has come to make her wardrobe yourself. It's an economy measure worth considering, and sewing will give you as much pleasure and relaxation as it does wonders for the purse. What is more, modeling her own clothes and seeing them in the making is good training for your girl's clothes sense.

A dress that is easy to make in a pattern that is simple to follow is offered today. At the left, a version with ready-made ruffling, lace, or other edging trimming the collar, sleeve caps, and interesting pockets, which are large and capacious like those a small girl's older sisters are wearing. Buttons are used down the front. All types of washable silks and cottons, including cotton sheers, make up well in this inexpensive and dressy model.

The same pattern fashions a sturdy daytime dress for school and ordinary wear. It is trimmed with contrasting collar, the trimming material also being used down the front and on the big pockets. The sturdier and less expensive the material selected for this version, the better.

Style No. 3251 is designed for sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14. Size 8 requires 1⅞ yards of 39 inch material, with ⅝ yard of contrasting for long sleeved dress; 1½ yards for dress with sleeve caps.

Address orders for Clotilde Children's Fashions to Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Annex, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred — wrap it carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be certain to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired; and write your name and address plainly.

Curtains of Lace Net for New Windows

"New Curtains and Draperies," a booklet by Claire Winslow, offers many helpful suggestions for window treatments. Price, 5 cents by mail, 3 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby.

By Claire Winslow.

Women are often bothered by several puzzlers when they begin to think about new curtains for the house. The most frequent question they ask is, "What is the correct length for glass curtains?"

The length depends on several things: the height of the window; whether or not over-draperies are going to be used; and the color of the woodwork in the room. Short windows can be made to appear taller if curtains do not stop at the sill but come to the floor. However, if the woodwork in the room is dark in tone this effect will not be pleasing, as it will show thru the thin material of the curtains. Therefore, unless you have white or cream toned woodwork have the curtains end at the lower edge of the window frame, itself.

One infallible rule is: Never, under any circumstances use curtains that stop half-way between the window frame and the baseboard.

If the window is tall it can be made to appear shorter by having the glass curtains made sill length. This is a good idea, too, when a radiator is just beneath the window, or when a bookcase or table is placed there.

Almost always, when over-draperies are used, the curtains hang level with the sill. The other correct length in such a case is to have them come to the floor.

Now, about width. If the curtain material is very sheer and fine allow for plenty of fullness. Twice the width of the window is not too much. If the fabric is less fine one and one-half times the width is satisfactory.

In practically every case a pair of curtains, not a single panel, should be used. In a group of bay windows, where the side windows are rather narrow and the center one is wide, the curtains are made accordingly, but a pair is hung at each window.

Since it is so easy to buy charming curtains that are ready-made it is no longer necessary to spend hours cutting them and hemming them at home. Both fine meshed and coarse weaves are being used. One of the most attractive patterns in a fine meshed curtain comes in a lace net in white with a lovely pattern of slender Grecian columns, like stripes. The columns are twined with laurel.

A little coarser in mesh is a revival of a Victorian type of curtain which has a fine, circle-weave background splashed with an elaborate leaf and flower design in sharp contrast with its sheerness. Much like the beautiful old lace curtains of our grandmothers' day, this would be ideal in the "front parlor" of a red brick Victorian home, and there are thousands of these houses all over the country.

The photograph today shows an elaborate drapery treatment at a window. Under tierlike chartreuse moire, curtains of lace net in a modern design of interlacing leaves are used. As there is no window sill they are made to hang level with the lower edge of the window frame. In creamy white, they make a pretty spring-like contrast with the over-draperies.

A spring-like window treatment calls for lacy white net curtains. These are hung under over-draperies made in tier effect.

The Geographic Society to Hear Sidney Shurcliff

The Geographic Society of Chicago will have Sidney Shurcliff as speaker at its annual meeting Tuesday evening at Orchestra hall. Mr. Shurcliff will show motion pictures, "Skiing America First," which will depict many of the country's leading winter sports centers. Robert J. Thorne has been nominated for reëlection as president of the society. Other candidates are William B. Greenlee, first vice president; Dr. Nathan S. Davis III., second vice president; Charles H. Behre Jr., third vice president; Miss Elma Marie McRae, secretary; Burt A. Massee, treasurer. Chauncey B. Borland, Charles C. Colby, William S. Monroe, George B. Utley, and Wallace F. Worthley are nominated as directors.

Sarasota Bay Skyline Treat to Fishermen

By Marion Hobson.

SARASOTA, FLA.

Seeing Sarasota's moonlit skyline from the bow of a boat is a special pleasure that comes often at this time of year when kingfish and tarpon are vying for attention.

Because the sight possesses an unusual power that charms the most hardened fisherman, it's highly rated as an attraction, and small wonder. As a climax to a spring deep sea fishing trip it's impossible to beat. If you've had little luck there's a certain soothing quality about it and if a string of fish as long as the boat hangs alongside, there's no end to the satisfaction that coming home to such a skyline imparts.

So Mrs. Werner Wieboldt of Highland Park found it when she and Pearl Anne Wieboldt returned from their recent kingfishing foray. For a couple of days the 15 pound king she landed led the spring tournament lists, but C. W. Mills of Sodus, N. Y., and Sarasota has smashed her hopes for one of the prizes. He landed a king that tipped the scales at 28 pounds.

The Mills yacht was one of the six private boats that formed an aquacade over Sarasota bay waters Saturday afternoon with passengers who were guests of the Pall circle of the Federated Garden Clubs at Siesta Key. The station wagons of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Black, Mr. and Mrs. Samson D. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Billings, and Mr. and Mrs. Christy Payne took them to tea at several beach cottages, among them being the one belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Homer Galpin, formerly of Chicago. Mrs. W. L. Van Dame, Mrs. Malcolm Whitelaw, Mrs. Richard T. White, Mrs. W. J. Vanderkloot, and Mrs. John M. Tuttle were among those from Chicagoland enjoying the cruise.

But this is the spring when the mainland offers Sarasota bay waters —with its intriguing fishing possibilities—a strong counterattraction. Those who haven't declared themselves in line for a political job are being earnestly and daily solicited for votes.

The vote fishing has caused strong currents, below and atop the public stream of political consciousness. It boiled over at the Myakka state park all-day rally and fish fry, an event that may not have been very social from the pink tea angle, but was most satisfying from the vote fisherman's viewpoint.

Most of the guests came in cars to the picnic headquarters in the heart of the former Potter Palmer holdings, but one came complete with boots, spurs, and a good looking horse, reminding his fellow partygoers that the Myakka section abounds in cattle lands, and is equipped with cowboys.

There are ranches aplenty thruout this area and if one were determined to dude ranch for a couple of months, the possibilities are limitless. The late Mrs. Palmer was particularly fond of riding thru this part of her holdings and took a special interest in farming and cattle raising, two occupations for which the areas are nicely suited.

The Palmers' Myakka holdings are not the only ones that offer horsewomen and escorts excellent riding territory. There's another part of the country near the Ringling circus quarters that's nearly perfect. Siesta Key is also a favorite riding rendezvous. The Valla Elam academy's sixth annual horse show this week proved this sport's growing popularity here. Among the trophies was the R. Boynton Rogers memorial trophy won by Prudence Wadsworth. The trophy was presented by Mrs. Malcolm Whitelaw of Chicago, mother of the late R. Boynton Rogers Jr., prominent young horseman who died several years ago. "Bunny" Rogers was the winner of the first blue ribbon in the advanced horsemanship class at the first of the six Valla Elam horse shows. Among those competing for prizes was young James Ringling of Evanston.

Many of those riding in the school's roundup mounted their first horses while attending the out of door school here which opens in the fall at Manchester, Vt., where bridle paths are frequent and delightful and closes in their screened in, out of doors classroom buildings on Siesta Key.

Little Miss Helen Gaylord, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gaylord of Rockford, and the Clark girls, Nancy and Virginia, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Austin Clark of Winnetka, are among the several youngsters who hail from Chicagoland.

Lovely Crocheted Vestee

Below: This week's notable opening is Lillian Hellman's drama of the south, "The Little Foxes." It comes to the Selwyn theater tomorrow night with a distinguished cast, including Tallulah Bankhead.

Right: "The Streets of Paris" offers a host of entertaining performers, not the least of whom are Gower and Jean, dance duo. The revue is at the Grand Opera house.

Shirley Booth is in the top notch cast, headed by Katharine Hepburn, that nightly unfolds "The Philadelphia Story" at the Erlanger theater.

Right: Lily Pons, coloratura soprano, and her conductor-husband, Andre Kostelanetz, will give a concert in the Civic Opera house next Sunday afternoon, assisted by an orchestra.

She's a gangster's moll, that's what she is! Miss Dorothy Lamour—as you will see her in "Johnny Apollo." The picture is at the Chicago theater.

Tallulah Bankhead Opens Tomorrow in "The Little Foxes"

Drama Provides Star with Best Role of Career

By Cecil Smith.

Tallulah Bankhead, of the deep voice and magnetic presence, comes to the Selwyn theater tomorrow evening, the last arrival in April's triumphal procession of theatrical celebrities. With Patricia Collinge and Frank Conroy, Miss Bankhead begins an indefinite engagement in Lillian Hellman's powerful drama, "The Little Foxes."

Miss Bankhead has appeared twice previously on the Chicago stage, in George Kelly's "Reflected Glory" and in "I Am Different," an alleged comedy derived from Hungarian sources by Zoë Akins. In both cases the star's "box office strength," as the trade papers put it, constituted a tribute to her own special talents, for the consensus of popular and critical opinion seemed to be that neither play would have justified the effort and expense of a production without Miss Bankhead.

In "The Little Foxes" matters are quite different, as I can testify from first hand experience with the play. The star, in this case, does not have to "carry" the play. Indeed, the play is so strong that it provides Miss Bankhead with impetus for the most telling performance she has ever given on the American stage.

Lillian Hellman, whose microscopic and incisive gift for characterization made "The Children's Hour" memorable, has written in "The Little Foxes" an even more relentless study of an outstandingly disagreeable American family. Miss Hellman does not believe in sugar coating the truth, and her new play dominates the mind and imagination to an exceptional extent.

Miss Bankhead's Regina Giddens is certainly not a lovable woman, but she is a forceful one. She is the center of a southern family of industrialists who, at the turn of the twentieth century, are just beginning to reap profits from the newly introduced manufacturing in the southern agricultural area. To her and to her two self-promoting brothers money is more important than anything else on earth. "The Little Foxes" is a story of the struggle between greed and avarice on the one hand, and on the other the frustrated dream of a modest, peaceful, happy life shared by Miss Collinge, Mr. Conroy, and Eugenia Rawls.

While Miss Bankhead's return to Chicago in a meritorious drama will, of course, call out her admirers in full force, Miss Collinge's presence is no less a source of pleasure. One of the most fragile and appealing actresses on the American stage, Miss Collinge has remained a stranger to Chicago for nearly eight years—since she played the part of Stella Hallam in "Another Language" in the fall of 1932.

Mr. Conroy, who enacts the sympathetic rôle of Regina Giddens' invalid husband, will be vividly remembered by those playgoers who were wise enough to see "On Borrowed Time." He played Mr. Brink, the personification of death who was lured up into a tree and kept there by Dudley Digges. Other supporting players in a well balanced cast are Charles Dingle, Carl Benton Reid, Lee Baker, Eugenia Rawls, Dan Duryea, Abbie Mitchell, and John Marriott. The New York cast is unchanged, tho Miss Rawls did not act the rôle of the young daughter during the first months of the 51 week engagement at the National theater. The drama is produced by Herman Shumlin. Settings were designed by Howard Bay, and period costumes by Aline Bernstein.

In "The Philadelphia Story," currently at the Erlanger theater, Chicago audiences are becoming pleasurably acquainted with an excellent specimen of the form of dramatic production known as "high comedy." The purpose of any comedy, of course, is to be amusing, by presenting a conflicting situation or series of situations in such an objective way that the audience—tho not always the characters—can see the incongruity of things. In a farce or low comedy the incongruity may exist purely for the sake of the momentary fun its exposure may occasion.

A "high comedy," on the other hand, centers its attention upon the development of a central theme, hoping by means of comic device to clarify the thinking of the audience upon that theme. In "No Time for Comedy," another intelligent "high comedy," the plot and dialog were focused upon the evaluation of the right of an author of comedies to his sense of humor in a period of world crisis. The theme of "The Philadelphia Story," less social and more purely psychological, has been well defined by Elmer Kenyon: "Can a kind of spiritual pride render us incapable of genuine feeling in human relationships?" This is the problem Katharine Hepburn, as Philip Barry's heroine, seeks to solve.

Of course, if a "high comedy" were as ponderous as the discussion of it, it would not be a comedy at all. Mr. Barry writes exceptionally well, with a real love for a fast quip for its own sake, and with even an occasional descent into gentlemanly slapstick, as in some of Shirley Booth's wise and wisely delivered sallies, or in the conduct required of Forrest Orr as Uncle Willie, who would rather pinch a pretty girl than behave like the husband of the dignified Aunt Geneva [whom the audience never sees, on the apparent assumption that Uncle Willie is funnier without her]. So, if you are afraid of a play with a theme, you can see Miss Hepburn and "The Philadelphia Story" without giving the theme a second thought.

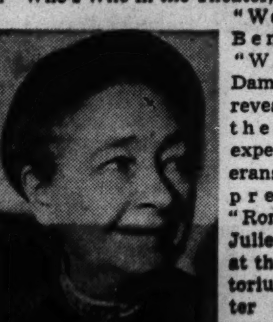
A glance at the records included in "Who's Who in the Theater," under "Webster, Ben," and "Whitty, Dame May," reveals that these two expert veterans of the present "Romeo and Juliet" cast at the Auditorium theater have covered a staggering amount of theatrical territory. Dame May Whitty, one of four actresses in the history of the English stage to bear the title of Dame of the British Empire, first appeared on the stage in 1881 at Liverpool in the chorus of something called "The Mountain Sylph." She was then 16 years old. Her list of classic rôles is immense and of modern ones bigger still. This country is by no means new to her, for she first came to America in 1895. Recently she has appeared in both stage and screen casts of "Night Must Fall." In "Romeo and Juliet" she plays the important part of the nurse.



Dame May Whitty.

Ben Webster, her husband, reserved his first stage appearance until 1885, when he was 21. His list of classic and modern rôles rivals that of his wife, if, indeed, it is not longer. The couple have been married for many years. Their daughter, Margaret Webster, is celebrated as an actress and as a director, having staged Maurice Evans' productions of "Richard II." and "Hamlet."

"The Streets of Paris" is really great fun. It goes to prove that vaudeville is not dead; it has merely dressed up and gone places. Except for the exotic Carmen Miranda, most of the best people in the show are imbued with the American vaudeville tradition. They do not have to wait for a microphone to shoot up from the floor, so that inaudible voices and poorly projected individualities may be thrust on the audience by main force. Bobby Clark and Luella Gear and Marion and Hall are not microphone artists, and I trust none of them will ever be tempted to use a microphone outside a radio studio. Their material may be cut from an old pattern, but it seems fresh and hilarious because they know how to "sell" it. Bobby Clark's genius is especially evident in the scrupulous economy with which he obtains all his effects. His little between-the-stanzas dance, so simple and so deft, belongs in the great hoofing tradition of George M. Cohan. Please note, by the way, that "The Streets of Paris" closes in two and a half weeks, and really diverting musicals are rare these days.

Don Pierson, who does a splendid job as the captain of the Pinafore in "Tropical Pinafore" at the Great Northern theater, once sang "Ol' Man River" in "Show Boat" in Australia, England, Scotland, Norway, Sweden, Germany, and some of the South Sea Islands. A native of Pittsburgh, he studied law here at the Kent college before turning to a singing career.

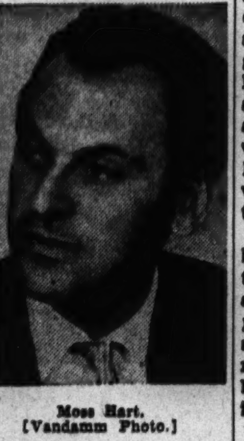
Evidently the theater will not be allowed to die an ignominious death in Chicago this summer, as it has sometimes in the past. "Life with Father," whose management got alarmed a few weeks ago when on a single occasion two box seats went unsold at a Wednesday matinée, can point to an advance sale of more than $62,000 as reasonably positive proof that Lillian Gish and Percy Waram, with their brood, will be kept active at the Blackstone thru the summer, and very likely longer. "The Little Foxes" ought to run well into the summer season. And there is gossip that Al Jolson wants to bring his new musical here so he can be on hand for the Democratic convention.

There will ultimately be a motion picture version of "The Man Who Came to Dinner." This news does not make the busy Harris theater company tremble as much as it might, for the picture will not go into production until the summer of 1941. Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman, the authors of the popular comedy, and Sam H. Harris, its producer, will be responsible for the movie version. This is a far distant future, indeed, and the Clifton Webb company, having long since provided comfortable permanent lodgings for themselves, are settling down, expecting to stay in Chicago thru the summer of 1940.



Moss Hart.

IN THE ROLE OF MERCUTIO

The current production of "Romeo and Juliet" at the Auditorium theater has Edmond O'Brien for its Mercutio. As every one should know, the title roles are being played by Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh.

New Broadway Play Deals with Medical Theme

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK [Special].—It was inevitable that some commercial theater manager would try to duplicate the living newspaper type of play with which the late Federal theater experimented with considerable success.

The experiment was made this week with a propaganda item entitled "Medicine Show," but with no more than fair results. As a living newspaper this one was better edited and more attractively printed, but it lacked something of the excitement of those cruder, more impassioned issues from which it was copied.

Editorially, "Medicine Show" is a forceful statement of the case favoring socialized medicine and some form of compulsory hospitalization insurance. The text bristles with documented statistics tending to show that there are, in the report of the statisticians, 250,000 preventable deaths a year in America, and that there are 16,000 counties entirely without hospital facilities.

The casting of "Medicine Show" is capable, the staging broken up into small groups of protesting citizens operating as miniature Greek choruses. Their leader is Martin Gabel, appearing as the statistician, and also a co-producer with Carly Wharton, who is said to represent the John Hay Whitney money interests.

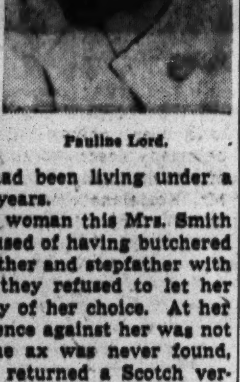
Another of those ill-timed reappearances after a lapse of years was that of Pauline Lord last week. Miss Lord came back to Broadway in a murder drama that she had tried out with some success on the Pacific coast. "Suspect" was the title and it had to do with an English recluse named Mrs. Smith who had been living under a cloud for 30 years.



Pauline Lord.

As a young woman this Mrs. Smith had been accused of having butchered her hated mother and stepfather with an ax when they refused to let her marry the boy of her choice. At her trial the evidence against her was not conclusive, the ax was never found, and the jury returned a Scotch verdict of "not proven," which, the most persistent of her interrogators admits, left her suspended between heaven and hell.

Mrs. Smith took a cottage on the Cornwall coast and there, with a growing son and a faithful Scotch maid, she lived in modest retirement, fighting the fidgets until the boy was grown. Then the boy got himself engaged and invited his fiancée and her father and godfather down to visit.

It happens that the godfather is one of those old devil newspaper men who never forgets a face or a good murder trial. One look, not at Mrs. Smith, whom he seems to have forgotten, but at the Scotch maid, and he is again on the trail of the murderess at whose trial he had functioned as a reporter.

Little by little he breaks down Mrs. Smith's alibis and explanations until she is ready to confess. She tells all, and even more than all, and makes out so good a case that everything is again forgotten. But as her persistent guests are smilingly taking their leave Mrs. Smith is seen catching up an ax at the woodpile and viciously attacking a log of wood, for all the world as she may have attacked her hated parents 30 years before. From which final picture you are permitted to draw your own conclusion.

Miss Lord plays Mrs. Smith with a haunted look and hesitant movement that stamps her guilty from the first scene. Which is no help to the suspense. The watching and waiting to see when she breaks becomes a bit monotonous. Frederick Warlock is back from the coast to play the inquiring reporter.

It was a bad week for George C. Tyler, the veteran manager of stage stars. Two of the players with whom he made and divided fortunes in the old days died, if not in poverty, at least in such reduced circumstances as to add additional distress to their passing.

William Faversham, who played Edwin Milton Boyle's "The Squaw Man" for Mr. Tyler, died while a guest at the Percy Williams Actors' home on Long Island, and Mrs. Patrick Campbell passed on at a nursing home in France.

They were flashing personalities, both these players, and in their day they commanded great followings of playgoers. Faversham, as a young and handsome English juvenile, became the leading man of Charles Frohman's Empire Theater Stock company in New York. Playing opposite Viola Allen, he enjoyed many seasons of popularity.

It was not until he became a star under the Tyler management, however, that he was rated with the moneymakers. At the Empire he had played the heavy villains for years while Henry Miller was the popular leading man. When Frohman made a hero of him it took some time for the Empire audiences to accept the change.

When the "Squaw Man" chance came along Faversham was willing to leave the Empire, and Tyler was glad to take him over, but only if Frohman was willing. C. F. was willing enough, but, having spent a good deal of money in building up the Faversham reputation, he suggested that he would like to retain an interest in his investment. Tyler smilingly agreed to that suggestion, and during the next few seasons paid Frohman $175,000 as his part of the "Squaw Man" profits.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell had passed the years of hardship before she first came to America in 1901. She had begun as an amateur in England, her flashing beauty and her gifts as a musician having called her to the attention of the promoters of charity entertainments and such.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell.

She had inherited the olive skin, black eyes, and raven hair of her Italian mother, and carried these off with the jaunty confidence of her Irish father. She was only 17 when she eloped with 19 year old Patrick Campbell. It was to support herself and her children that she finally went on the professional stage. She did not have too much success as an actress until Arthur Wing Pinero saw her playing melodramatic heroines at the Adelphi in London and selected her for the rôle of Paula in "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray." Her rise thereafter was even more sensational than it may sound today.

She was a little contemptuous of America and Americans when she first came over, but her manner if not her opinions changed with acquaintance and success. She had many profitable seasons over here, and even gathered some money, with which she supported her declining years, by appearing in pictures in Hollywood and talking to interested women's clubs.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell never reached the ranking of the world's greatest actresses. She was not born to the purple as was Duse, or Ellen Terry, or apprenticed to the arts as was Sarah Bernhardt. But she rose higher than any other actress of her particular class. She was always, I think, a sort of glorified amateur, a petted personality of the theater, but there were none who could match talents with her in her own particular type of rôle. "She is not 'The Second Mrs. Tanqueray'," a New York critic wrote of her when she first came to New York. "She is the one and only Mrs. Tanqueray." And that was the extent of his review.

"Hymn of Freedom."

Cabaret Notes

With name bands and name acts burgeoning along the branches of Chicago's entertainment orchard like cherry blossoms on the shores of Washington's tidal basin, a group of eight practically anonymous youngsters are stealing the local show.

They are the La Playa dancers, four boys and four girls, who were booked into the Colony club as an added attraction and who promptly set a popularity pace that should keep even the volatile Miss Carmen Miranda on her Brazilian toes. These exuberant young dancers specialize in ensemble interpretations of native Cuban steps, yet the precision with which they negotiate the intricacies of the Africuban "son" or rhumba, the tango, and the conga is in no way stilted. What seems to be an unquenchable thirst for rhythmic action highlights their teamwork with flashes of individual charm and brilliance.

Literally in the spotlight are Grace and Bob Conrad, whose translation into half-time rhythm of the fervor and color of the beguine is a little triumph of dancing and staging. Blonde Peggy Walsh provides a lovely visual and vocal background as she sings Cole Porter's "Begin the Beguine."

The Big Noise from Winnetka, Smoky Mary, Honky Tonk Train Blues, and the other oddities of orchestration that symbolize Bob Crosby's Dixieland music are back in their familiar surroundings at the Blackhawk restaurant. With Crosby are his famous Bob Cats, including Ray Bauduc, Bobby Haggart, and Eddie Miller—the all-American trio, and the personality girl who is herself something of an all-American favorite, Marion Mann. She is especially effective when she swings from the sentimental "All the Things You Are," to the effervescent "In Spain They Say, Si, Si."

Crosby's music continues to mature, and it has now acquired a depth and resiliency that make it palatable for dinner and invigorating for dancing. The floor show, in addition to band novelties and solos, is featured by the dancing of Vicki Allen, lithe tap ballet artist, and Orrin and Betty Lou, a cute and energetic dance team in the revue tradition.

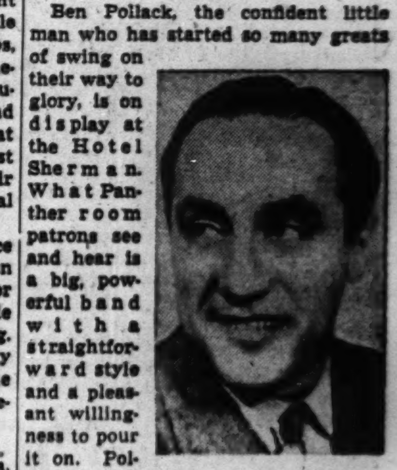
Ben Pollack, the confident little man who has started so many greats of swing on their way to glory, is on display at the Hotel Sherman. What Panther room patrons see and hear is a big, powerful band with a straightforward style and a pleasant willingness to pour it on. Pollack has been an entertainer so long that he is something of a living legend, and the fact that his protégé figuratively "plays the banjo better now, than him who taught me how," is incidental to the interest in his return to old stamping grounds.



Ben Pollack.

Armide, a lovely blonde singer; Alice Kavan, charming and talented Chicago tap dancer; Alexander and Santos and company, knockabout dance satirists; the jitterbug kids; the Bali maidens, and Carl Marx comprise the floor show.

City Will Hear 2 Concerts by Choral Groups

By Cecil Smith.

Two important choral groups composed of business people who make music a serious avocation will give their annual spring concerts this week. The Marshall Field & Co. Choral society, Edgar Nelson, conductor, will sing in Orchestra hall Wednesday evening, presenting Richard Crooks, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera association, as visiting soloist. On Friday evening in the same hall Herbert E. Hyde will conduct the Glee Club of the Chicago Association of Commerce. Alec Templeton, pianist, will be soloist.

Membership in the Marshall Field & Co. Choral society is restricted wholly to employés and executives of the department store. The chorus occupies an important place in the social and cultural life of the staff, for it has rehearsed weekly for 34 years, and has presented a distinctive public program each spring. Edgar Nelson has conducted the group for a number of years. The accompanists are Grace T. Fredenhagen, Robert Yale Smith, and Stanley Martin.

The Marshall Field & Co. Choral society is particularly pleased with the engagement of Richard Crooks as guest artist for Wednesday's program, since the celebrated tenor made his first Chicago appearance at one of the society's concerts in 1923. At that time Mr. Crooks' operatic career still lay entirely ahead of him. He had made a name for himself in New York as a church singer of exceptional capabilities, and he was beginning to find good opportunities in the field of oratorio.

More recently Mr. Crooks has been one of the most useful and popular leading tenors at the Metropolitan, at the same time that he has won and maintained a considerable radio following. In the operatic field he has been especially successful in French répertoire, notably in Massenet's "Manon." His last local appearance was as long ago as 1937, when he was co-starred with Gladys Swarthout in one of the programs of the Northwestern university festival.

Wednesday evening's program is as follows:

Chorus.
"Noble Chief! Thee We Hail!" from "A Life for the Tsar" ....Glinka
May Day Song, from "Mignon" .....Thomas
"Glory to Isis," from "Aïda" ....Verdi
Aria by Mr. Crooks.

On Wings of Song ....Mendelssohn
That Dear Old Tune ....Treharne

Unlike the Marshall Field group, the Glee Club of the Chicago Association of Commerce is entirely of male membership. Its hundred men are, of course, all members of the Association of Commerce. The club had its origin 28 years ago when a group of business men traveling thru Texas got together in a baggage car and experimented with ensemble singing.

Dr. Herbert E. Hyde, the conductor of the glee club, is widely known as organist and choirmaster of St. Luke's Pro-Cathedral in Evanston. The accompanists are William Sumner, pianist, and Robert Birch, organist.

Alec Templeton, the clever and gifted blind English pianist, makes his only Chicago appearance of the year with the club. As every radio listener knows, Mr. Templeton specializes equally in the performance of standard piano music and in his own unique, humorous impressions and improvisions. In his share of the pre-intermission period Friday evening he will play short pieces by Lully, Handel, Schumann, Rachmaninoff, and others. After the interval he will turn his attention to some of his own items, such as "Mendelssohn Mows 'Em Down."

The complete program for Friday follows:

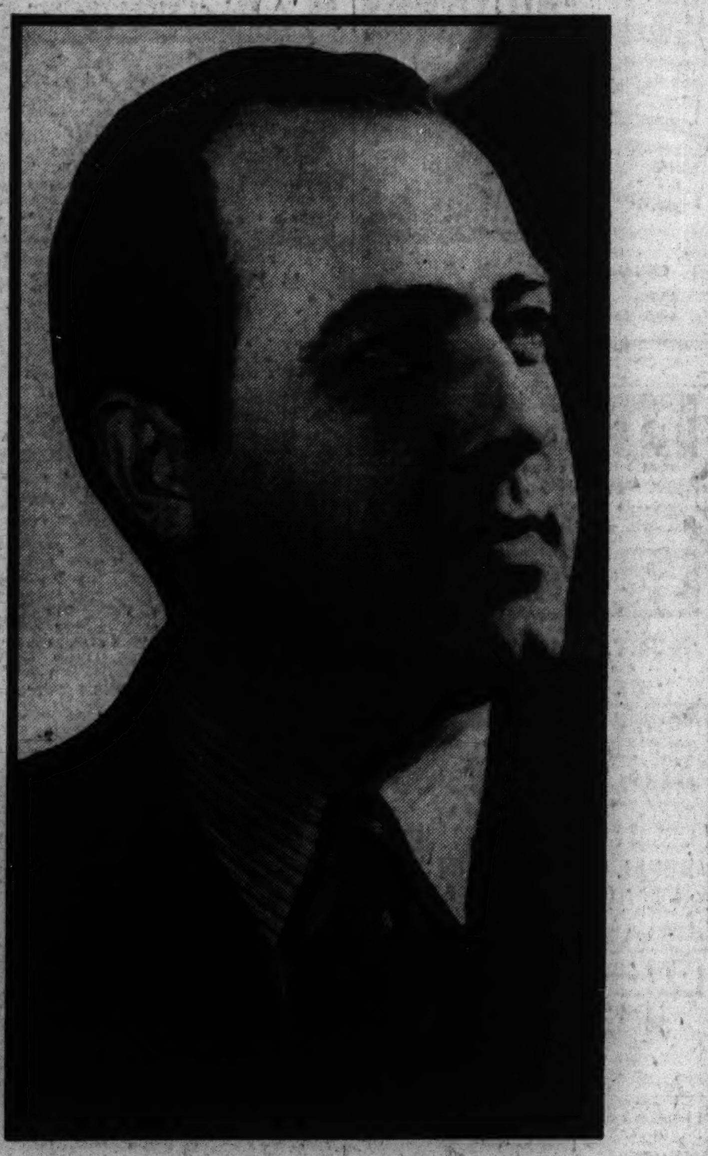
Opera Broadcast.

Maurice Baron, staff composer for Radio City Music hall, has composed a romantic opera, "François Villon," portions of which were broadcast on April 14 by the Music Hall's orchestra under Erno Rapee's direction. The work has an English libretto by Robert Gordon Anderson, dealing, of course, with the famous 15th Century French poet. Jan Peerce, tenor, sang the title rôle, while Anne Roselle, soprano, supplied the love interest in the rôle of Denise.

TENOR TO BE GUEST ARTIST



Richard Crooks, tenor, will be guest artist on the annual concert of the Marshall Field and Company Choral society in Orchestra hall on Wednesday night. Edgar Nelson will conduct.

Notes on Music and Musicians

Bruce Foote, baritone will be soloist with the Illinois Symphony orchestra tomorrow night in the Studebaker theater. He is an instructor at the University of Illinois and soloist at the United Church of Hyde Park, Chicago. Last fall he appeared on the Ancient Music festival in the Goodman theater and was recently heard on the Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air. With the orchestra he will sing Purcell's "An Evening Hymn on a Ground" and Ravel's "Don Quichotte à Dulcinée." The latter, Ravel's last composition, was written in 1934 and makes use of three poems by Paul Morand. This is the first Chicago performance of the work.

Bruce Foote.

Two other Chicago premières spot the program: a suite of dances from Purcell's masque, "The Fairy Queen," arranged for string orchestra by the late English composer and pedagog, Dr. Cyril Bradley Rootham; and the Overture to Wagner's third opera, "Das Liebesverbot."

Muzio Clementi's Symphony in D major, as exhumed by Alfredo Casella, and excerpts from Wagner's "Götterdämmerung" round out the program. The symphony was introduced locally in May, 1937, by the orchestra under the direction of Albert Goldberg, who also will conduct tomorrow night's concert.

The order of the program is as follows:

Dances, from "The Fairy Queen"....Purcell
[Transcribed by Cyril Rootham.]

The rôle of Leonora will be sung by Dorthe Paulsen, Azucena by Bernice Lakin, Inez by Esther Henich, Manrico by John Frederick, Count de Luna by Vincent Lawrence, Ferrando by Charles Hax, and Ruiz by Martin Boughan. Giovanni Berrafato will conduct.

Vivian Martin, Wilbur Held, and Robert Rayfield will be presented by the Van Dusen Organ club in a vesper organ recital at the Rockefeller Memorial chapel today at 4:30 o'clock. The chapel is located at 59th street and Woodlawn avenue.

Alec Templeton, pianist, and Ann Jamison, soprano, will give a joint recital in the Highland Park High school auditorium on Monday night for the benefit of the Peacock Camp for Crippled Children. Information concerning the concert can be obtained by telephoning Lake Forest 438.

On Tuesday night the National Youth orchestra, conducted by Irwin Fischer, will offer a concert in the Illinois Music concert hall, 632 North Dearborn street, starting at 8:15. The soloists will be Richard Patrick, pianist, and Alberta Holstein, cellist. The program follows:

Violinist Plays at Civic Opera House Tonight

By Edward Barry.

During the next eight days the Civic Opera house will be the scene of two major musical events. Tonight Mischa Elman plays a violin recital there. Next Sunday afternoon Lily Pons will sing to the accompaniment of an orchestra directed by her husband, Andre Kostelanetz. Mr. Elman's appearance is his only one of the season. Miss Pons has not been here since the opera closed last fall. Mr. Kostelanetz's most recent Chicago engagement was last July, when he conducted in Grant park.

For 30 years now Mr. Elman has ranked among the world's great violinists. Men like Heifetz and Menuhin, who were in knee breeches or were still unborn when Elman made his first American tour, have received much more publicity than he has in recent years, but the older man has continued to enjoy the loyalty of a large and discriminating public. Now, at the age of 48, Mr. Elman is at the very height of his powers, and he may reasonably look forward to many more years of successful concert giving.

Like most big violinists, Elman began as a child prodigy. At the age of 5 he was already astonishing the people of Russia, where he was born. About seven years later on Oct. 14, 1904, he made his Berlin debut. In March of that same season he faced an audience at Queen's hall, London, as soloist with the London Symphony orchestra.

Elman made his American debut in 1908, when he was just under 17. The concert took place in New York and was given by the Russian Symphony orchestra. Elman's vehicle was the Tschaikowsky concerto. Later in the season he made his first appearance with the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

Mr. Elman's journeyings have included not only America and Europe, but also the orient. He is now a resident of the United States. He was featured prominently in the country's music news during the season of 1936-'37, when he drew upon his immense repértoire to appear at a series of concerts of the National Orchestral association and to illustrate the development of violin literature from Bach to Wieniawski and Tschaikowsky.

Tonight's program consists of a Bach concerto, the Franck sonata, the Mendelssohn concerto, and smaller pieces by Fauré, Stone, Chopin [a nocturne in the Wilhelmj arrangement] and Wieniawski [the A major polonaise].

When Miss Pons and Mr. Kostelanetz appeared together in Grant park last July they drew the largest crowd in Chicago's musical history. So many people poured onto the gateless field that the estimators refused to do any estimating, and any attendance figure can be nothing but a guess. However, the crowd covered an area of about six square blocks, and the statement that this was the largest concert attendance in local history may be taken as literal truth.

Sponsors of next Sunday's affair hardly hope for anything like this. Admission, instead of being free, will be $1.10 to $5.50. One does not have to be a cynic to predict that this is going to make a great difference.

Before she became America's favorite coloratura soprano Miss Pons had a career which included the spoken drama as well as music. As recently as 15 years ago she was playing ingénue rôles at the Paris Variétés. It was not until about 1929 that she made her operatic debut. This now historic event took place at Mulhouse, in Alsace. Miss Pons' rôle was Lakme, in the Délibès opera of the same name. Her debut at New York's Metropolitan opera came on Jan. 3, 1931, in the name part of Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor."

Lily Pons has toured the United States, Canada, Australia, the British Isles, and the continent of Europe. Her remarkably pure voice and her personal charm and vivacity have made her one of the very strongest draws in the music business.

She has sung regularly with the Chicago Opera company these last few years, mostly in "Lakme" and "Lucia." She has also done one Rosina ["The Barber of Seville"].

André Kostelanetz conducted in Russia, the country of his birth, but did not become a widely known figure until American radio found in him the type of person for which it had long been looking. That type may be briefly described as a combination of musicianship and showmanship. Mr. Kostelanetz has a good musical background—also the ability to point things up effectively. His arrangements and his manner of conducting his arrangements won him considerable prominence even before 1937, when the Pons-Kostelanetz romance began to engage the attention of the nation's newspaper readers. This romance culminated in June of 1938, when conductor and soprano became man and wife.

The program for next Sunday follows:

Overture to "Der Freischütz" ....Weber
"Lo, Here the Gentle Lark" ....Bishop
Miss Pons.
"Una Voce Poco Fa" from "The Barber of Seville" ....Rossini
Miss Pons.
"Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun" ....Debussy
"Bell Song" from "Lakme" ....Délibès
Miss Pons.
Fantasy-Overture, "Romeo and Juliet" ....Tschaikowsky
Mad Scene from "Lucia di Lammermoor" ....Donizetti
Miss Pons.

"American Jubilee."

Catherine Littlefield, director of the Chicago City Opera company ballet, will stage the dances for "American Jubilee," musical pageant of America to be opened at the New York World's Fair on May 11.

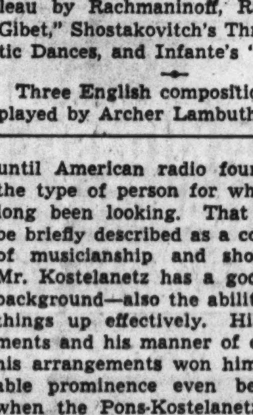
The Young American Artists series will continue on Tuesday night with a debut recital by Freda Trepel, pianist, in Curtiss hall. The program includes the Bach-Busoni Chaconne, a Sonata in B-flat by Mozart, Liszt's "Funerailles," two Etudes and the Ballade in A-flat of Chopin, an Etude Tableau by Rachmaninoff, Ravel's "Le Gibet," Shostakovitch's Three Fantastic Dances, and Infante's "El Vito."



Freda Trepel.

Three English compositions will be played by Archer Lambuth, organist, at the Central church services in Orchestra hall this morning: "On Hearing the First Cuckoo in Spring" by Delius, Ralph Vaughan Williams' Prelude on "Rhosymedre" and Purcell's "Trumpet" Voluntary. Kathleen R. Lane will sing Homer's "Sheep and Lambs," and the choir will sing two anthems, Noble's "Fierce Was the Wild Billow" and Gounod's "By the Waters of Babylon."

Belle Hoffman, contralto; Marie Hammer, pianist, and Lois Russell Holsman, soprano, will be the artists on the active members' concert of the Lake View Musical society to be held tomorrow at 2 o'clock in the Gordon club.

A new two piano team will make its debut with the Illinois Symphony orchestra on its program for April 29 in the Studebaker theater. Marya McAuliffe and Gorga Orwig are the pair, and they will be heard in the first Chicago performance of Arthur Bliss' Concerto for two pianos. The attention of those who would like an advance hearing of the Bliss composition is drawn to the performance by Bartlett and Robertson with the New York Philharmonic Symphony orchestra over the radio this afternoon.

Four performances of "Carmen" will be given by the Fine Art Opera company in the Auditorium recital hall: Sunday afternoon and evening, April 28; Sunday evening, May 19, and Sunday evening, May 26. The production is under the direction of Zerline Muhlman Metzger.

The De Paul university a cappella choir, Arthur C. Becker, director, will present a concert in Thorne hall, Lake Shore drive and Superior street, on Friday night at 8:30 o'clock. Ralph Niehaus, tenor, will be the assisting artist.

On Friday night, May 3, the Chicago Dance council will offer its annual May festival in the Goodman theater.

The Auditorium recital hall will house a concert by Elizabeth Bernard, soprano, on Saturday night. Lois Albright will be the accompanist.

This morning at 11 o'clock the service at St. James' church, North Wabash avenue and Huron street, will be held in commemoration of Dudley Buck, noted American composer and organist of St. James' from 1869 to 1871. The music of the service, directed by Leo Sowerby, will use four of Mr. Buck's compositions: Festival Prelude for organ, Festival Te Deum in E flat, a "Jubilate" freely transcribed from a work by Schubert, and "Sing Alleluia Forth."

Ennio Bolognini, cellist, will be the soloist for the next concert by the Chicago Business Men's orchestra. He will play Saint-Saëns' A minor cello concerto, and the orchestra will devote its energies to the overture to Rossini's "Semiramide," Tschaikowsky's Fifth Symphony, and Sibelius' Finlandia. The concert will be given on Wednesday night, May 8, in Orchestra hall.

Mu Xi chapter of Mu Phi Epsilon will present four of its members in a recital in the 17th floor hall of the Kimball building tonight at 8 o'clock. The performers will be Stella Roberts, violinist; Lois Bichl, cellist; Elaine De Sellem, mezzo soprano, and Mae Doelling Schmidt, pianist.

Baptists Recall Initial U. of C. Fund Campaign

Which university for my son?—which college for my daughter?—what is the endowment at college A?—what is the faculty rating at college B? Answers to these and other questions will be found in "Higher Education," by Dr. John Evans, education editor. On sale at Tribune Public Service Offices, 1 South Dearborn street, or Tribune Tower. Price 10 cents, by mail 13 cents.

By the Rev. John Evans.

American Baptists recall today that on another third Sunday in April, exactly 50 years ago, was initiated the fund raising campaign which, had it failed of success, the University of Chicago might not have come into being. The result of the important Baptist endeavor insured the founding of the university in 1891. The facts are to be found in Thomas W. Goodspeed's history of the university.

On May 15, 1889, John D. Rockefeller agreed to contribute $600,000 to the founding of a university in Chicago if the American Baptist Educational society could raise an additional $400,000 before June 1, 1890. Since the university was to be located in this city, the chief appeal had to be to the Baptists of Chicago. Tho the group was not overly strong financially, it set to with enthusiasm and in two months raised half the required sum.

It was obvious that Chicago Baptists had done their utmost, so the appeal had to be broadened in scope. The columns of the Standard, a Chicago Baptist newspaper, were placed at the disposal of Frederick T. Gates and Thomas W. Goodspeed, secretaries of the educational society, and all Baptist congregations were informed of the situation. Ten days before the specified time elapsed the entire $400,000 was in hand.

The educational secretaries had designated the third Sunday in April as "University day" on which to tell of their work and the taking of subscriptions, and today, half a century later, is this momentous third Sunday remembered.

The University of Chicago is now formulating plans for its 50th anniversary celebration to be held during the academic year of 1940-'41, culminating in an academic festival in September, 1941. The director of this celebration is Frederic Woodward, vice president emeritus of the University of Chicago. The year will be marked by numerous meetings stressing the theme of the celebration—"New Frontiers in Education and Research."

Beginning June 10, the course will run for five weeks. Albion R. Charles P. Taft, Yale '18, has accepted the chairmanship of the national committee organized to raise endowment for the Yale law school library. The plan to increase the present endowment was begun with an offer from John A. Hoober of York, Pa., president of the alumni association of Yale law school, to give up to $250,000 contingent on securing up to $750,000 from other sources. All money realized from the endowment will be used for the purchase of books. Dr. Charles Seymour, president of Yale university, announced the plan at a recent meeting of Yale alumni in New York City, where Ashbel G. Gulliver, dean of the law school, spoke in detail of the immediate needs of the law library.

'Harvest' Film a Classic for Its Simplicity

"HARVEST."
Produced by Marcel Pagnol.
Directed by Marcel Pagnol.
Presented at the World Playhouse.
Taken from the French novel "Regain," by Jean Giono.

THE CAST.

Panturle, a farmer	Gabriel Gabrio
Gaubert, a blacksmith	Edouard Delmont
Gedemus, a knife-grinder	Fernandel
Arsule	Orane Demazis
The Sergeant	Le Vigan
The Gendarme	Rollan
L'Amoureux, a farmer	Henri Poupon
Alphonsine, his wife	Odette Roger
M. Astruc, a grain dealer	Paul Dullac

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

"Harvest" is a soul satisfying experience!

It bosoms you in serenity—and if that isn't a boon in these hectic days of wars and rumors of wars, I'd like to know what is!

"Speak to the earth," the picture croons, "and her answer will be sufficient unto all your needs and desires. . . ."

This quiet, this beautiful, this refreshing picture, had quite a bout with the New York state board of censors, who ordered it banned. The board of regents quietly reversed the decision and a curious public rushed to be scandalized and remained to—pray. Or something like that.

WHY the censorial attitude? Because the picture shows no marriage ceremony performed over a man and woman who, nevertheless, ARE married in the truest sense of the word. And if you can find the slightest dusting even of smut or suggestion of smut, you've got better eyes and ears than I have.

This French film—with most excellent English titles—was adapted from the novel, "Regain," by Jean Giono. It is the story of a farmer, Panturle, who refused to leave the deserted village of Aubignane, his native heath, and of the woman who comes to him, loves him and labors with him so that Aubignane may survive. . . . She, Arsule, had been the hard driven "donkey" of an itinerant scissors grinder, Gedemus, whose cart she had pulled, for reasons of gratitude, Gedemus asserts, but you are inclined to doubt him. . . . Near Aubignane she and Panturle meet—as how the picture shall show you—and are drawn to one another as a needle and a magnet. . . . Joyfully Arsule accepts her place in the sun as helpmeet to a good man. . . . Together they work out his dream of fertile fields, plentiful bread of their own making on their table and, as the picture ends, Panturle learns that their love, too, will soon bear fruit.

Aubignane will again become a pulsating human habitation!

The film is a classic of simplicity. Panturle and Arsule are as appealing as good, earnest and trusting little children, and subsidiary characters are finely etched.

Exquisite photography records glorious scenery and quaint settings.

Lovely, really!

[They tell me New Yorkers unanimously pronounced their board of censors nuts, after viewing this production.]

See you tomorrow.

IT TAKES a good rainy spell of weather to prove that the designers really have accomplished miracles with brilliant color for dark, dreary days in town or country. Slickers and umbrellas bloom like an August flower garden in full color.

Slickers or raincoats are cut and fitted with the same artistry that is lavished on a suit or dress. Shoulderlines are easy, sleeves are wide and loose, collars fit snugly and warmly, and the coats themselves have a wide wrap-over lap in front.

While the raincoats designed for general wear are interesting in price and effective for sloppy weather as well as cool, sunny days, it's the almost unlimited assortments of fly-weight novelty slickers with amazingly low price marks that have turned our rainy days into a riot of blazing color. It's the stuff that doesn't crack, stick or tear, in every pastel and bright shade known to man. New this spring are the bonbon shades, green, rosy pink, yellow, and violet, with umbrellas to match.

Equally festive for a dark day are the clever new pastel-tinted capes with attached hoods. These are of thinner stuff, cut with plenty of room over the shoulderlines, two slits instead of pockets, and a large enough hood to pull over a good-sized hat.

Umbrella designers apparently never doze on the job, for there are so many new finds that the average shopper becomes rather stunned by the assortments. The goldfish bowl umbrellas are "tops" for popularity and safety. The old complaint that a woman with an umbrella is a dangerous combination can be banished.

On the House
By Louise Bargelt

Many are the ways to "condition" our homes against summer's sun. And since it is screen time now, there is a sun screen on the market which is already known, but should be better known, for the service it renders. This screen is a scientific metal fabric, installed like an ordinary screen, which shuts out sun heat and insects, but lets in a pleasant, glareless light. In design it resembles a miniature Venetian blind and flat, horizontal wire, or diminutive louvers, act as a barrier to the sun's heat rays. For use on porches, doors and windows.

If you would have a distinctive looking, resilient floor tile, made with a plastic ingredient which gives it a terra cottalike glaze, there's a composition material available which is as wear resisting as it is beautiful. It can be installed on your basement game room floor as well as in your kitchen, since it is moisture resistant. It comes in a host of lovely shades, and in black, too, if you'd be very modern, and in plain and marbleized patterns. Attractive designs are possible thru clever installation. Soap and water keep it clean.

STUBBORN RHEUMATIC PAIN

When Irritated by Excess Uric Acid

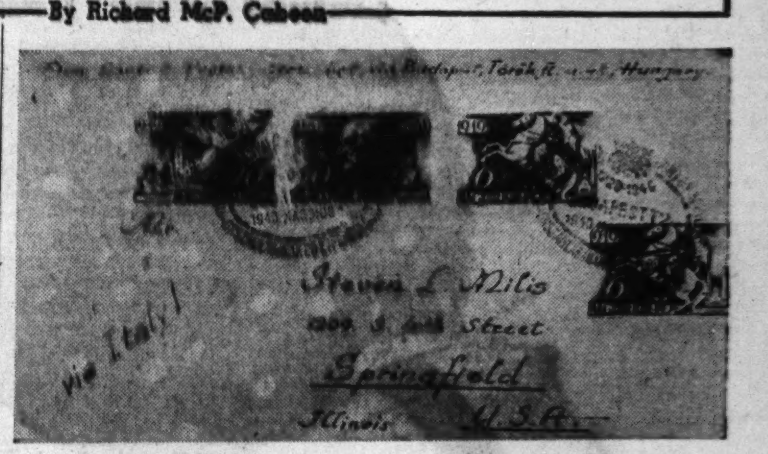
Thousands take ALLENRU for the pains caused by the gouty phases of rheumatism, neuritis, lumbago or rheumatic backache when irritated by excess uric acid or similar circulating poisons. Such excess acid and poisons should soon start to leave your body, and thus the terrible agony is often relieved—no opiates.

Ask any live druggist in America for an 8 ounce bottle of ALLENRU—a liquid—costs about 85 cents—save this notice.

The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning values. Do not ask where stamps may be sold, as the Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.



On March 1, 1940, Hungary issued a set of three stamps to mark the twentieth anniversary of the election of Admiral Nicholas Horthy as regent. This first day cover is shown through the kindness of Steven Milis of Springfield, Ill.

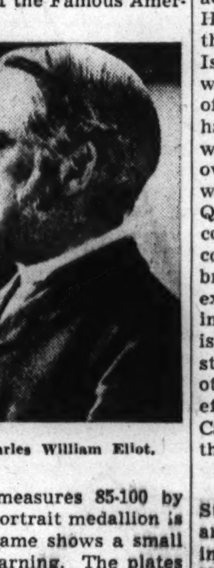
The 1 cent and 2 cent values of the composers' group of the Famous Americans series of postage stamps will be placed on sale on May 3. The 1 cent value will honor Stephen Collins Foster and will have its first day sale at Bardstown, Ky., while the 2 cent value which honors John Philip Sousa is being introduced at Washington, D. C.

Collectors of first day covers may send not to exceed 10 addressed envelopes to the postmaster at each of the first day cities, each lot to be accompanied by a cash or postal money order remittance to cover the exact cost of stamps to be affixed. Mark each envelope in the upper right hand corner with a notation stating how many stamps are to be affixed. The envelopes should be sealed or have the flaps turned in and better impressions of the cancellation will be received if the envelope contains a filler to approximate the thickness of an ordinary letter.

Mail each lot of addressed envelopes and the corresponding remittance to the postmaster at the proper city. Endorse this envelope prominently, "For first day cover service, Famous Americans series." Please remember when preparing these covers that postage on each envelope must be paid at first class rates, and that three 1 cent stamps will be required on all Foster covers except such as are addressed for delivery in Bardstown, Ky., where the 2 cent local rate prevails and that two 2 cent stamps will be required on all Sousa covers except those addressed for delivery in Washington.

Orders for unused stamps must not be included with orders for first day covers, but should be addressed to Philatelic Agency, Postoffice department, Washington, D. C.

The 3 cent purple stamp of the educators' group of the Famous Americans series honors Charles W. Eliot and was placed on sale on March 28, 1940, at Cambridge, Mass., where he spent many years as president of Harvard university.



Charles William Eliot.

The design of this stamp is uniform with values of educators' series and measures 85-100 by 98-100 inch. The portrait medallion is circular and its frame shows a small lamp, symbol of learning. The plates for these stamps are curved to fit rotary presses and contain 280 stamp subjects arranged in four panes of 70 each. Plates 22527, 22528, and 22529 were prepared for this value in January and printing of the initial order of 50 million stamps was started on Jan. 26, on a press equipped with plates 22527 and 22528. Plates are of the electric-eye, convertible type, permitting perforation of the finished sheets on any of the modern perforators equipped with photoelectric controls.

The portrait of Eliot used for this stamp was adapted from a photograph published in the January, 1915, number of Current History and was furnished by the Public library, Washington, D. C. William A. Roach designed the stamp, Gilroy Roberts engraved the portrait, Carl T. Arlt, the frame, and James T. Vail and William B. Wells, the lettering.

Charles W. Eliot was born at Boston, Mass., on March 20, 1834. Upon his graduation from Harvard in 1853 he became an instructor in mathematics and in 1858 was appointed professor of mathematics and chemistry. In 1863 he went abroad to study chemistry and pedagogic methods and upon his return accepted the chair of analytical chemistry in the recently established Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In 1869 he was elected to the presidency of Harvard university and the radical changes which he made in teaching methods during his 40 years at that post transformed that institution from a small town college into a great institution. His retirement from active work at Harvard came in 1909, and it was during the previous year that he edited the Harvard Classics, the famous five foot shelf containing 50 volumes of the selected literature of the world. Following his retirement from Harvard he became a prominent figure in public affairs, and at one time was offered the post of ambassador to Great Britain.

A notice in a recent number of the Postal Bulletin makes it clear that the postoffice department of El Salvador does not intend to compete with local stamp dealers in that country. The notice states that postal money orders may not be drawn to the order of the Director General of Posts nor of postmasters. El Salvador has no philatelic agency and this notice will prevent American collectors from ordering stamps from postmasters in that country.

The first annual exhibition, bourse, and dinners of the Albion, Mich., Stamp club will be held at the Parker Inn, Albion, on April 27. Harold Brooks of Marshall will exhibit and nearby collectors are invited to attend.

From the Kenmore Stamp company of Kenmore, N. Y., comes news of changes in the stamps of the British Commonwealth of Nations due to the war. Ascension will add a 4d value to replace the 3d, now obsolete on account of an increase in rates. St. Helena will add an 8d and change the color of the 3d. Gilbert and Ellice Islands and British Solomon Islands will have postage dues. The 7d value of the New Zealand centenary set has been replaced by an 8d value, which unlike the 7d value will be overprinted for official use. Australia will issue a new stamp for the Queensland centenary during the coming year. This nation is also considering a set of stamps to celebrate the formation of the Australian expeditionary force. There is a rumor in London that Great Britain will issue a special set of semi-postal stamps for Red Cross work and another in Ottawa, Canada, to the effect that there may be a special Canada-France postal issue to honor the Canadian Expeditionary force.

The New Jersey Federation of Stamp Clubs, Inc., will hold its 9th annual stamp exhibition, May 1 to 7, inclusive, at the Turn Verein, 240 Hope avenue, Passaic, N. J. The Penny Black stamp will be featured at this centennial show.

Only a few days remain in which to place orders for the official Hull House cachets on the first day covers of the Jane Addams stamps. This souvenir cover which is sold at 25 cents bears a sketch of the famous settlement made by a Hull House artist and pictures the Jane Addams medallic portrait which was designed by Nancy Vance McCormick. Address orders to Philatelic department, Hull House, 800 South Halsted street.

It is stated on good authority that an extraordinary sheet of postage paper will be offered at auction in the near future by B. L. Voorhees, local auction dealers with offices at 7 South Dearborn street. This sheet of postage paper is completely perforated and gummed but there is no printing of any kind whatever upon it. The perforation layout is for the regular small size stamps, and the sheet shows 400 positions, with the double rows of perforations marking out the gutters between the four panes. Perforation gauges 10½ by 11. Needless to say each stamp is perfectly centered.

Next Saturday at 3 p. m. the Cicero-Berwyn Philatelic society will give its 100th Stamp Chat over station WHFC. The editor of the Stamp Collector congratulates the society on this record, for he realizes the difficulties which must be surmounted in obtaining speakers and material for continued weekly broadcasts.

Bardstown Distillery, Inc., Bardstown, Ky., has a special pictorial cover with an etching of Stephen C. Foster and bearing block of four of the 1 cent Foster stamps which it will mail with first day postmark on May 3, if you send name and address and remittance of 5 cents per cover at once. Limit 10 covers to any one name.

"Let us talk—now," her voice had quieted. "First, I have much to tell."

"I reckoned yu had, darlin'."

"Brazos, Dad died suddenly less than a week after you left," she began with tragic force.

"Aw! Jan! How awful!" cried Brazos, shocked to his depths. "My Gawd, I'm sorry! Thet fine, upstandin' westerner, not old atall, just got his home an' daughters back! Aw! but this is a tough one on me. I was turrible fond of yore Dad, Jan. I don't know what to say."

"Brazos, you've said enough. It comforts me. We knew you loved Dad. It was partly what you did for him that made us love you. But Dad is gone. And if I hadn't you to think of—to save—I'd sunk under that blow."

"Save? Jan, yu think I have to be saved?"

"Indeed I do. Thank heaven I caught up with you in time. Brazos, that is the saddest news. But there's more—not sad—yet it'll hurt you."

"Go ahead, darlin'," replied Brazos simply. "I reckon I can stand anythin' now."

Jan averted her face. Her breast rose and fell, indicating oppression. Her hand tightened on Brazos'. "It's about J—June."

"Shore I reckoned that. Don't keep me in suspense."

"She eloped with Henry Sisk—came home married!"

"What're yu tellin' me, Jan Neece?" ejaculated Brazos, fiercely.

"You heard me, darling." Her voice was low but perfectly clear, carrying a note unfamiliar to Brazos.

"Jan, yu lie!" Brazos leaped up in a perfect frenzy of amaze and fury.

"What motive could I have in telling you a lie?" she returned proudly. If she were lying it had all the guile and subtlety of a woman behind it. Brazos turned her face around so that he could see it in the light. Its pallor, the proud, dark eyes that peered straight and unfathomably into his, the set lips, almost stern now—these to Brazos were not eloquent of falsehood.

"Jan, I beg—yore pardon," he went on, haltingly. "But thet knocks me cold an' sick, to my very gizzard. Worse than when I kill a man! But damn June's fickle heart! She loved me. She proved it, and then, all in no time—she shows yellow. Henry Sisk? Fine chap, shore, but he was sweet on yu, wasn't he?"

"I thought so."

"So he throwed yu down for June?" demanded Brazos hotly.

"Something like that, darling."

"Did yu care?"

"Yes, I did. It hurt. I'm a vain creature. But I couldn't marry Henry. On my soul of honor I couldn't."

"Why couldn't yu, Miss Neece?"

"Because I loved you. I never knew how well until you ran away."

"Ahuh. You must forgive me. I'm shore upset. And how did June take my runnin' away?"

"I think—I know it broke her heart, too. Then Dad died. That changed the world for us. All at once I found out. I had to find you—or just lie down to die."

"Jan, I've misjudged yu. I never gave yu credit for bein' so deep an' true an' fine. I reckoned yu was the flirt an' June the steady one. What a fool I was! Gimme a little time to cuss this thing out of my haid."

Jealousy Sends Cowboy Pacing the Room

Brazos fell to striding the room, yielding to his jealous wrath, to the incredible thing that had happened. He had wanted to reverence June Neece all his life. Yet in a day, almost, she had betrayed him. She was not worth Jan's little finger. And he cursed under his breath at her and her inconstancy. He had not expected June to remain loveless all her life on account of him. But hell! if she had loved him as she had sworn and he believed, like any locoed cowboy, she would not have married Sisk or any one so soon. It was hardly decent. She was shallow.

And he raged there for he knew not how long, until his wounded vanity and bitter heart had taught him another lesson of life. Then he turned to Jan, finding her watching him with what appeared an incomprehensible contrast to grief. Could Jan, being human, be glad to see her sister toppled from her pedestal?

"Wal, Jan, yore bein' heah to tell me—to sustain me—keeps me from fallin' to a low down hombre of a greaser. Thet news would have just plumb knocked me forever."

"O, Brazos, darling. Can I make up for the loss of June?"

"I reckon. But let me be straight with yu, Jan. If June hadn't turned out faithless and whatever else it was—neither yu, however sweet an' lovely yu air, nor all the rest of the girls in the world, could have made up for the loss of her. Can yu stand to heah thet?"

"Yes, Brazos, I—I can stand it," faltered Jan, her face drooping.

"Don't take it too hard, honey. I'm a queer duck. I always make amends. I always pay. Yu won't never be sorry thet I worshiped June, reckoned she was an angel. After all she was a part of yu."

"Brazos, there's more to tell," went on Jan hurriedly. "I'm afraid again. You are such a strange fellow. So honorable and fine and true! Can you stand another surprise?"

He eyed her askance. But Jan did not look formidable just then or anything to be dubious about. He drew her into his arms, yet held her back, so he could study her face.

"Shoot, Jan. Yu cain't knock me out again."

"I'll bet I can."

"Ha! I won't bet. But tell me——"

She leaned back, toying with his scarf, provoking and adorable, but hiding her eyes.

"Could you stand a sweetheart—and—and a—wife—who is very, very rich?"

"Good—Lord!" exploded Brazos and then succumbed to incredible fate.

"Could you?" she repeated. "Just because you 'air a pore lone prairie cowboy,' you won't be too honorable and proud to make those amends you spoke of?"

"What yu got up yore sleeve?"

"Brazos, if I'm a very rich girl, that won't make any difference to you?"

"Yu're talkin' riddles. But I reckon if yu was a very rich girl I wouldn't feel turrible bad aboot it."

She let out a sweet peal of glad laughter and caught him around the neck. "Brazos, listen. Henry bought my share of Twin Sombreros ranch and fifty thousand head of cattle."

"How much?" queried Brazos faintly.

"How much what? O, how much do I love you? O, more than any girl ever loved a man."

"Jan, my heart is weak. Don't tease no more. How much did yu sell out for?"

"I made a pretty good deal, Hank Bilyen said. For the twenty thousand cattle I got forty dollars a head. Figure that out."

"I cain't, darlin'; I cain't figger, or add, or anythin'."

"Well, that comes to $80,000. And I sold my half of the ranch for $20,000. I brought the money with me."

"Mercy!" begged Brazos.

"I got a few thousand in cash. Bilyen said, 'Lord only knows what it'll cost to find the feller.' And the rest in drafts on the Las Animas bank. Mr. Henderson fixed it up for me. I wasn't worried about the drafts when those road agents almost held us up. These drafts cannot be negotiated by any one except your little girl. But I was afraid I'd lose the cash. Now, Brazos, darling, now what are we going to do?"

"Now, Jan, darlin', what air we goin' to do?" mimicked Brazos in consternation.

"Jan, I cain't do nothin' but love yu," replied Brazos abjectly.

"Well, that's grand. But I prefer you to do a little beside loving me. . . . Brazos, those boys with Wess Tanner, especially the dark, handsome lad, they were sweet on me. And you know I'm unreliable. It seems to me you had better put a halter on me while you have the chance. Dad always said that once I was haltered I'd steady down."

"Jan, at that I believe yu've changed—grown. But still the same old sweet devil."

"Brazos, we were engaged, you know," said Jan seriously. "I told everybody. I don't know how you really regarded our engagement. But if it hadn't been for that I never could have followed you."

"I savvy. An' now thet yu've come up with me——"

"You're perfectly free, Mister Keene, unless you want me as terribly as you wanted June," she interposed, her chin lifting, and level, searching eyes on him.

"Jan, will yu take my solemn word?" asked Brazos.

"Yes, Brazos, I will."

"Wal, before I entered thet door I knew I'd ask yu to marry me—first because thet old love came thunderin' back—second, because I would have asked yu if I hadn't loved yu, I was struck so deep by yore trailin' me—and last, because I could never let one word of range gossip get started about Jan Neece."

She appeared enraptured, almost satisfied, yet there was a restraint, a doubt about her that puzzled Brazos. He caught his breath and asked her to marry him.

"Yes, darling," she replied and hid her face upon his shoulder.

"When?" he flashed, tense and keen, succumbing to the current of the great river that had swept him off his feet.

"Need we wait?" she asked. That indeed betrayed this frank and devilishly sweet Jan Neece at her truest.

"If I had my way we wouldn't wait atall," rang out Brazos.

"Your way is my way—and always shall be," declared the girl eloquently. And she arose to go to the window, where she peered out upon the prairie. Brazos saw that there was nothing soft and tremulous about her then. "If it is possible I will marry you here."

"Jan! It's shore possible. Doan told me they had a church heah. 'Course they'd have to have a minister."

"Run, darling—and find out. Jan, you know, can change her mind." She did not turn away from the window. Brazos leaped up and rushed from the room. He encountered Doan and Tanner, both of whom received his onslaught in alarm.

"Tom! Yu said you had a church heah?"

"Yu bet we have."

"Then yu've got a pastor?"

"Naturally. An' a fine chap he is."

Brazos gulped. "Can he marry—Jan an' me—right away?"

"Wal, pard, yu're shore ridin' high, wide, an' handsome now," declared Wess, his bronze face shining.

"Go fetch him," cried Brazos excitedly, hanging on to both his friends. "Fetch him. Tell him to bring papers an' whatever I gotta have. Wess, yu go with Tom. An' call me when yu get back."

"Brazos, I always knowed when yu got this way over a girl yu'd be a ravin' lunatic," drawled Wess. "An' holy mavericks, am I glad!"

"Cowboy, air yu shore yu won't go out of yore haid before we can get back?" asked Doan, half in earnest and half in jest.

Not waiting to reply, Brazos ran back to Mrs. Doan's door, halting when he came to it. He sensed a mysterious portent beyond that threshold. It choked him—held him with abated breath. But he knocked. There was no reply. Uncertain and strangely agitated, he entered the room. Jan was lying face down on the couch.

Brazos ran to kneel beside her, his hands eager to gather her up, but lost their strength when they came in contact with her quivering form.

"Jan, dear, what ails yu?"

"O, Brazos. I—I can't go thru with it. I can't. I'm a little four-flusher. I have none of the nerve you—you credited me with," burst from her in smothered tones.

"Jan" Reveals She Has Been Masquerading

Brazos' heart sank like lead. He suffered a moment of despair. But she must be overwrought. The suspense, the long trip, the ordeal with him had been beyond her.

"Darlin', you cain't what?" he asked tenderly. "I reckon yu mean—marry me?"

"No! No!" she cried frantically, raising her face to disclose it tear-wet and shamed, with tragic eyes dark upon him. "I'm crazy to—to marry you. I'll die if you won't have me. And, O misery, you'll hate me now!"

"Ump-umm, honey. I cain't hate yu, no matter what yu've done, so long as yu're crazy to marry me."

"Brazos, I didn't know it'd be so hateful. I was just wild for you. I'd have done anything . . . anything. But now, you've been so sweet—and wonderful—I can't go thru with it."

"Jan Neece, will yu come out with it?" demanded Brazos in desperation.

"That's—just—it. I'm not Jan Neece . . . I'm June!"

"Lord Almighty! Am I drunk or crazy?" burst out Brazos, tearing his hair and staring incredulously at her. "Who air yu?"

"O, Brazos! Don't look so—so awful at me. It's I! June—June Neece! Not Jan. I couldn't live without you. It was Jan who eloped with Henry. And I thought you loved her most—that she could do anything with you—and I came down here to find you, make you marry me first, then tell you afterward."

"Yu damned—devilish little cat!" declared Brazos, astounded beyond passion. "I don't believe yu."

"O, Brazos," she wailed.

"I—don't—believe—yu."

"But, darling, I am June. I swear to heaven I am. Jan couldn't have done this rash thing. She hadn't the nerve. She didn't love you enough. Why, she was on Henry's neck as soon as you left. Brazos, you must see I'm telling the truth. If I were Jan, intending to get you by hook or crook—would I be betraying my plot now? No! I'd wait till we were—married."

There was incontestable logic in this passionate confession. But Brazos chose to hide the ecstasy which was waving thru him. He believed her now. Only those kisses had deceived him. She had acted them faithfully enough, tho perhaps, once June had cast restraint and decorum aside, they had at last expressed her true fervor.

"I cain't believe you," said Brazos solemnly.

"But you must. Brazos, no girl ever before did such a thing. O! I'm not ashamed. I'd glory in it, if you just—just. Didn't I offer to let you marry Jan, and give myself to you in the bargain. Brazos, darling, for God's sake, don't say you won't marry me now!"

"I will if yu prove yu're June," replied Brazos, relentlessly. "I've had about all I can stand of takin' Jan for June—an' June for Jan."

"Prove I'm June?" she echoed. "Of course I can. I am June. My name June is on the drafts for all that money."

Brazos sagged desperately under that potential proof. Bank presidents did not make colossal mistakes about making out drafts, especially when Henderson knew the Neece girls.

"Aw, yu could fool Henderson just as easy as me. Haven't yu fooled everybody under the sun? Yore own dad, even. No, Miss Neece, yu gotta prove yu're June."

"Wait till we're married," she pleaded, so sweetly and humbly that Brazos smothered another wild desire to snatch her to his breast. Then an idea flashed into his rapturous mind.

"No. An' let me remind yu thet pastor with Doan an' Wess, an' I reckon everybody heah at this post will be comin' pretty pronto."

"Beloved! Trust me!" she whispered beseechingly. "I would die of shame if they came now."

"Listen. June Neece had a birthmark like a bluebell on her laig, didn't she?"

"Who told you that?" cried the girl, blushing scarlet.

"I heahed thet when I first came to Las Animas. Everybody knew about it. The only way the Neece twins could be told apart! Wal, if yu air June yu shore have thet birthmark. Now haven't yu?"

"Yes, Brazos Keene. I have," she retorted, at bay. "Will you trust me—until——?"

"I'll trust you afterward, forever. I reckon yu deserve to suffer a little shame."

"Shame! I have nothing to be ashamed of, unless it's chasing an unchivalrous cowboy all over the south."

"Thet's a heap, I'm bound to admit. There! Girl, I reckon I heahed Wess' loud laugh out there. They've come with the parson. Yu better rustle or yu may lose a husband."

"Brazos Keene, if you force me I—I won't have you for a husband," she cried loftily. She was white of face again and her eyes burned with reproach.

"I'll risk thet, darlin'. Yu cain't get out of marryin' me now, if only to save yore good name and yore pride."

"Very well, cowboy! Come over to the light," she returned, with what seemed a calm disdain. Brazos followed her haltingly to the window. He felt her gaze upon him and dared not meet it. Moreover, his eyes were glued to her shapely capable hands as they grasped her gown at each side. She lifted it and her white skirts. Her trim ankles, her slender, graceful legs, her rounded knees and pink garters sharply outlined against her black stockings led Brazos' gaze to her white thighs.

"You should know this would be apple pie for Jan," she said, with a suppressed giggle that belied her haughty scorn of this exacting lover. "I've forgotten which leg it's on—the left, I'm sure. Look."

Merry voices outside preceded knocks on the door. Brazos, with the wonderful swiftness of that right hand, snatched her skirts down.

"Aw, darlin', I was only foolin'," he whispered.

"Yes, you were," she taunted. "Did you see it?"

"No. I couldn't see nothin'. Besides, June, I shore knew yu all the time."

"Liar! I could have fooled you. I wish—— O!"

Louder and more impatient knocks sounded upon the door. June smoothed her ruffled gown.

"Brazos, we're heah, all ready to make yu the happiest cowboy in Texas," called Wess, his voice ringing.

"Can we come in?" Doan's booming voice mounted to the joy he felt. "Parson, papers, witnesses, an' all."

"Just a minnit more, Tom," drawled Brazos. "The lady has consented to become Mrs. Keene. But, doggone it, she hasn't proved yet which one of the Twin Sombrero twins she really is!"

[THE END.]

"I've forgotten which leg it's on . . . on the left, I'm sure."

WORLD'S GREATEST STORIES

> FOREWORD
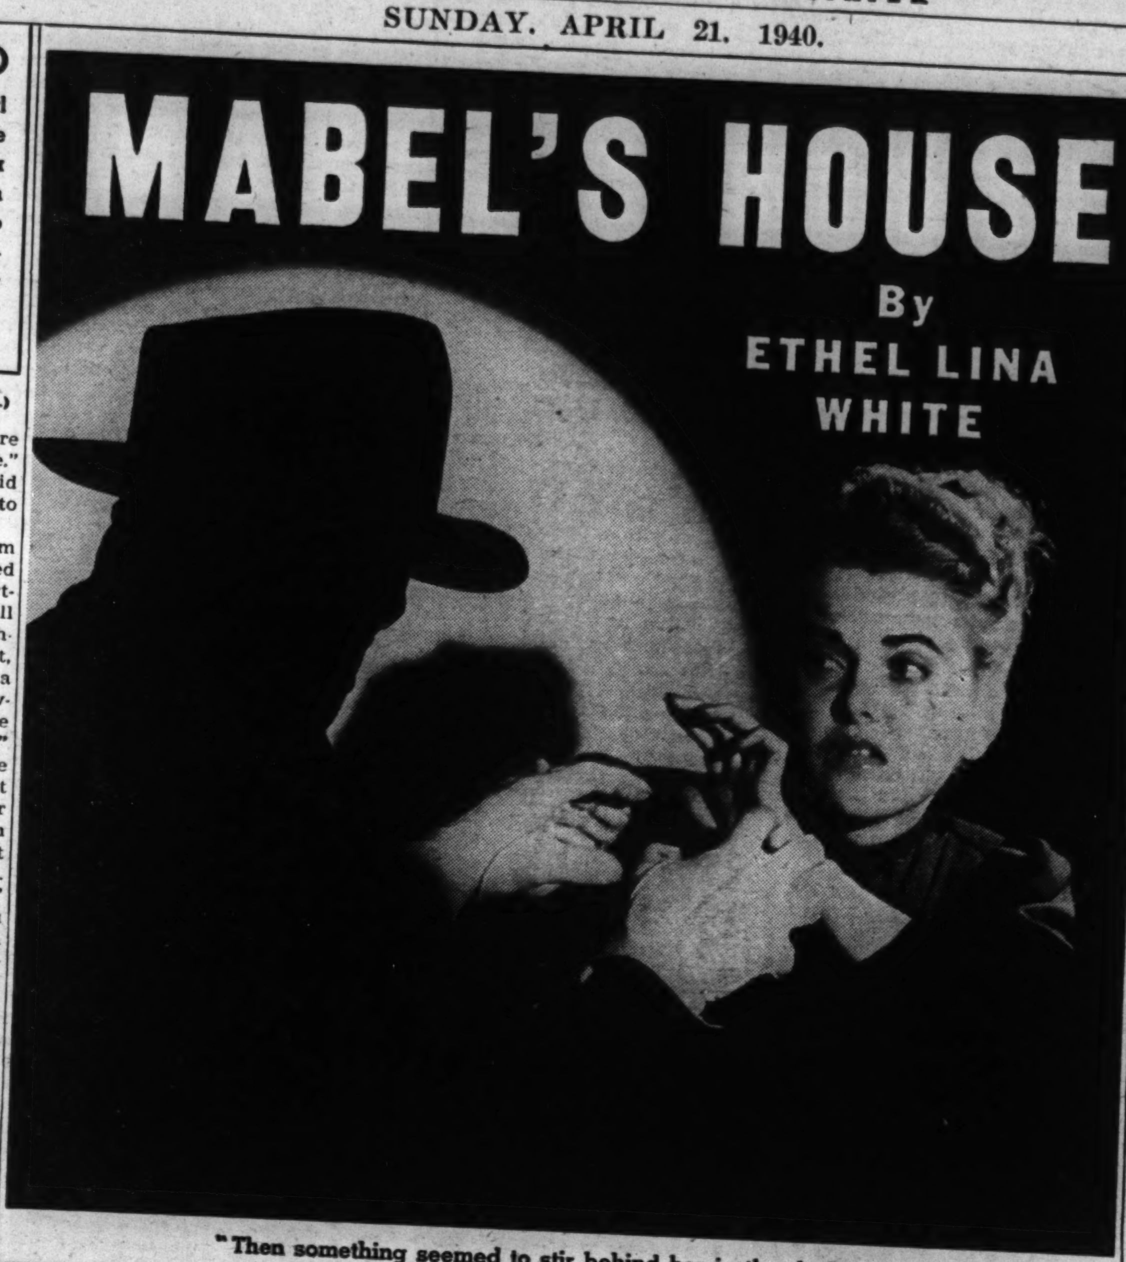
> Here is the story of a girl whose courage saves her life and traps a criminal. It is a story of courage passed on to a younger person by two of an earlier generation—one a living friend, the other a woman dead for many years.

MABEL'S HOUSE

By ETHEL LINA WHITE



"Then something seemed to stir behind her in the darkness."

(Copyright: 1940: By Ethel Lina White.)

"LOOK," said Mary. "There are the lights of Mabel's house."

"They're cheerful," said John. "Shan't be sorry to get back to a home-fire myself."

The young people were tired from trudging along the semi-obliterated moorland road, as well as disheartened by an unsuccessful quest. All the afternoon they had been searching for Mary's lost dog, Dopey. Yet, altho it was growing dark, with a biting wind and a scurry of snowflakes, Mary stopped to gaze up at the lighted windows of "The Chestnuts."

"Could you find anything more hopelessly commonplace than that house?" she asked. "And the mayor isn't a bit like a Great Lover, with his red face and his bawdy jokes. But he's been faithful to one woman. John, I want our love to be like that."

John pressed the hand tucked thru his arm, to show that he understood. As they stood in the keen blue twilight they were a well matched pair—endowed with health, good looks, and youth—and fit pioneers for the new world which held their future.

In spite of the fact that "The Chestnuts" was within the municipal radius and had main water and electricity, its position was both exposed and lonely. It was the last impost of the town, for beyond it stretched the moor—now practically deserted because of the snow. On the other side of it was a half mile of road, dimly lit with widely spaced lamp posts, which linked it up with the residential suburbs of Pooksmoor.

For Thirty Years House Had Stayed the Same

Altho it was the most romantic dwelling in the district—and a monument to a lover's fidelity—its appearance was prosaic. Solidly built of gray stone, with a short drive of red gravel and a belt of laurels to screen its lawn from the road, it looked exactly what it was designed to be—a prosperous middle class residence.

Over 30 years ago the mayor of the town had built it for the girl he was going to marry. Just before their wedding, however, she had died from undiagnosed appendicitis and was buried in her wedding dress.

The mayor never lived in the house, but he kept it exactly as it was, as a shrine to her memory. With the exception of silver plate and jewelry—which might attract burglars—he arranged all her wedding presents about the rooms. Nothing was changed nor allowed to deteriorate from disuse. A woman cleaned and aired it regularly, but no one else was allowed to enter it.

This was the mayor's private sanctuary which he visited regularly, so that passers-by were used to seeing its lighted windows and hearing the music from the wireless. But, altho he remained unmarried, he did not behave as tho his life were blighted. He found occasional consolation in liquor and always kept whisky on the premises. A telephone, too, was installed, so that he could be informed of any business or municipal development that might arise during his absence from his office.

As the lovers lingered on the snowy road the music ceased and the upper windows were plunged into darkness. Shortly afterward the lower lights were switched off and they heard the slam of the front door. Then the mayor crunched down the drive and pushed open the gate. He was a huge, bull-necked man, athletic still in spite of his overweight. His face was red and his walk not quite steady, but his smile beamed genuine welcome.

"Still courting?" he shouted. "When are you young people going to do your duty?"

"We're going to be married in the new year," Mary told him.

"Directly afterward we're sailing to Canada," added John.

"So you're getting used to snow, eh? But you mustn't go on the moor alone, Mary, until this confounded Convict 193 has been caught."

"Isn't he a nuisance?" she agreed. "John won't let me stir without him. Our farm's in a very lonely part, so I must get used to taking risks. I'm not afraid."

"This chap's a human tiger," remarked the mayor, "leaving behind him a trail of victims.

"Only last night I was betting the governor of the prison that he'd slip thru their fingers. He's got his belly full of food, and clothes no one can identify. All he needs is cash to make a getaway."

Then he wrinkled his brow.

"I'd a queer notion, just now," he said. "I wondered if he has used this place. He's hidden somewhere this bitter spell."

"Too near the town, sir," objected John. "Besides, isn't it burglar-proof?"

"Technically only. He could easily pick one of these old fashioned locks. And tonight the whisky was either underproof or some one had watered it. Maybe I'm losing my grip. I've half a mind to come out to Canada with you."

"The town couldn't spare you, sir."

"That's right. The town made me, so I must stick to the town. Besides, I couldn't leave this."

He jerked his thumb toward "The Chestnuts." Then because his whisky had made him sentimental, he retold them the story with which they were familiar.

"I was about your age, John, when I bought this house. It was the last word in modern improvements then. Mabel was proud of it. We went up to London together to buy our furniture and she was in most days, arranging things and finishing the twiddley-bits. We used to sit here in the evenings. We would turn on the lights and put a record on the gramophone and pretend we were married. All the family life I ever had. You know how it ended."

"What was she like?" asked Mary softly.

"She was a real woman. You're the nearest to her I've met. But my girl was a lady and wore white petticoats with lace frills."

The mayor grimaced at Mary's dark blue trousers and leather coat, as he made two vague semi-circles with his hands.

"Mabel came out here and here," he explained. "But her waist was only 20 inches. She'd the sweetest temper, but she was the boss. If she lived, there would be no more wet lodge nights for me."

Mary Gets the Key to Mayor's Old House

Suddenly Mary dared to say what was in her mind.

"Mr. Mayor, I know it sounds precious, but—but Mabel is a real person to me. She's been a sort of inspiration, when people make love sound cheap, with their silly joke. I never pass here without thinking of her. Before I go to Canada may I go over her house alone? Indeed, it's not idle curiosity."

There was a long pause before the mayor spoke in a choked voice.

"Nobody has ever gone there except me and the woman who cleans. But—yes. I'm going up to London for a couple of days and you shall have my key."

He lowered his voice to a hoarse whisper as he placed the Yale key in her hand.

"I could have sold the house times and times again," he confided. "But I kept it empty, for us to meet. It's all fancy, of course, but when I sit there, in her drawing room and look at her photograph, I don't feel quite so lonely. You listen to me, both of you. It may sound funny talk from an old chap that gets tight, but—love is the only thing that counts."

He glanced at his watch and added in a matter of fact manner: "I'm expecting my car. Can I give you a lift back?"

They refused his offer from an instinctive feeling that he wanted to be alone. As they watched his Rolls-Royce drive off amid a whirl of snowflakes, John spoke to Mary.

"Poor old chap. He's rich—and we've not even begun to be poor—but we've everything."

"Except Dopey," Mary reminded him.

While Dopey possessed all the endearing canine qualities, he had one grave fault: he was gripped periodically by a pioneer spirit which caused him to forsake home and family, in search of a new empire.

It was true that hitherto he had always returned—thin and hungry and ready to admit that, in spite of all its faults, the old country home was best. But this time his return was so long overdue that Mary had almost given up hope.

When she reached home that evening she ran into the house, calling out her usual question, "Has Dopey come back?"

"Not yet," her mother told her. "But he will."

She spent another broken night, listening for his return. Every time she awoke she strained her ears for the sound of his bark, and once she went downstairs and opened the front door in the hope of finding him outside.

The next afternoon the baker knocked at the door.

"Dog still missing?" he asked. "Wonder if it was him I heard this morning when I was doing my round on the moor. I fancied there was a sort of whining coming from the old shepherd's hut."

"Thanks, but I've heard so many of these tales. Dopey seems to have been everywhere except at his home."

But when he had gone she told herself that, in spite of so many false rumors, this latest story might be actual fact. If Dopey had crawled to the hut and was lying there, starved and exhausted, she was leaving him to die.

At least she could endure the suspense no longer. John was away at a market and there was no one she could ask to accompany her. Besides, the hut was about a mile out on the moor and not much daylight remained.

From the moment she pulled on her snow boots she began a relentless race with time. Soon she was running past the select residences of the suburb. The houses with their snow capped roofs and white muffled gardens looked snug and comfortable in contrast with the leaden sky and the drift of flakes which powdered her hair and blew into her eyes.

The Storm Clears Up, but No Dopey Appears

She was almost blinded when she reached the stretch of lonely road which led to "The Chestnuts." On one side was the high stone wall of Pooksmoor park and on the other flowed the cold gray slide of the river.

The present gripped her and her mind was possessed only by Dopey and his need. She scarcely noticed the mile. The moor rose in a long, grueling climb and when the summit was reached it dipped down again to a deep fold in the landscape.

It was a relief to jog down the hill, holding her side, until she reached the slatey trickle of a small river at the bottom. It looked bitterly cold, for icicles formed a stiff fringe dropping from the arch of the bridge, but she had grown so hot that her hair was plastered in damp rings on her brow.

On the other side, the moor rose in a steeper slope, like a white wall. Once again she toiled upward, impelled by thoughts of her dog and repeating his name foolishly, as tho it were a spell.

"Dopey, Dopey——"

Suddenly there was a break in the clouds and the sky grew lighter. To her joy, she realized that the storm was about to clear. As she climbed higher she could see the stone pile of the ruined hut standing out against the skyline.

Without a thought of personal peril she left the tracks and plowed over snowy mounds of heather, calling the dog's name.

There was no answering bark or whine to encourage her. Appalled by the silence and dreading what she might discover inside, she forced herself to enter the aperture of the ruin.

At first it was almost a relief to find the place empty. At least Dopey had not starved to death in the cold. The next moment she awoke from her dream of hope to the dull ache of yet another disappointment.

"I might have known it," she thought bitterly. "Just some of the baker's fun. The sooner I get back the better."

For the first time she remembered that an escaped convict was somewhere at large and that the light was fading rapidly. She was about to reach the road again when she chanced to look across the white wilderness, stretching deeper into the heart of the moor.

On the opposite rise, silhouetted blackly against the sky, was the figure of a man.

Altho he was a considerable distance away, he stood out clearly, magnified by atmospheric conditions. There was something so menacing about the solitary shape—brooding over the waste—that her heart began to flutter with fear.

"It might be any harmless country man," she told herself. "It need not be the convict."

As she watched him, the man suddenly disappeared from view, as tho he had dropped down to the ground.

It was an ominous development, for it seemed to signify that he knew he was being observed. In that case, it was certain that she, in her turn, was visible to him.

As she strained her eyes she distinguished something dark moving over the white surface of the opposite slope. There appeared to be no doubt that the man was running in an effort to overtake her.

If it were really a race between them, he was bound to win in spite of her long start. She was already tired from her sprint against time. Even if she could outdistance him on the moor, which was chiefly downhill, there remained the long stretch of lonely road between the stone wall and the river.

Altho it seemed madness to forsake the road and run the risk of being lost, just when dusk was falling, she decided to drop down into a gully and chance her luck in reaching the bottom without a broken limb. Running some way down the slope, so that she, too, might be lost to view, she turned to the left and plowed over the snow until she reached the steep side of a cleft.

In her excitement she lost all sense of danger, as she slipped recklessly down the almost vertical incline—rolling, bumping, sliding. More than once she came perilously near to breaking her neck, but she always managed to save herself from disaster, up to the moment when her heels slid under her and she shot headlong into a narrow lane.

She scrambled to her feet, to find that she was miraculously intact. The moor now rose high above her, shielding her from observation. Altho she sank up to her knees in drifted snow, she knew that she would cut off two-thirds of the distance covered by the winding moorland road.

The next 20 minutes were a test of strenuous endurance. Every muscle, nerve, and sinew was strained to its utmost as she plowed a way thru the choked gully. Presently, to her joy, the surface grew better as the lane began to wind upward, until she saw the chimneys of Mabel's house.

Convict 193 Watches All Avenues of Escape

Soon afterward she reached the tradesmen's entrance at the back, where she stopped to consider her next step. Altho she hoped the man had given her up as lost quarry, she had to be certain that she had shaken him off. Keeping in the shadow of the garden wall, she crept forward until she was able to peer around the corner.

To her horror she saw the back of a man. He was crouched on a spot from where he could watch the house, the moorland road, and the approach to town. Altho he was dressed in ordinary country clothes, waterproof and tweed cap—there was such a suggestion of vulpine cunning in his pose that she knew instinctively that he was Convict 193.

Suddenly she remembered that the mayor had given her a key to the house. Fortunately it was buttoned up inside an inner pocket of her leather coat and had not been shaken out by her fall. Opening the back gate with utmost caution, and stooping until she was bent nearly double, she worked her way around the side of the house until she reached the front door.

The key turned easily in the lock and she slipped into the hall, taking care to shut the door with the minimum of sound.

Before she shut out the dying daylight, she had seen the outline of the telephone on the hall table. Groping thru the darkness, she rang up the exchange.

"Police station," she whispered.

Her call was put thru without delay. Breathless with haste, she gasped out her story. To her dismay the official at the other end of the wire appeared maddeningly skeptical and was concerned chiefly in repeating her statement to insure accuracy. At the end he told her to hold the line while he was reporting the matter and left her in an agony of suspense.

When he returned his manner was different and showed that he had changed from a machine to a human being.

"There's nothing to worry about," he assured her. "We have the matter in hand. Police cars are already on their way to 'The Chestnuts.' And we've got thru to the prison. Now what about you, miss? Are you safe?"

"Perfectly safe," she replied. "He doesn't know I'm here. Besides, how could I get inside a locked house? He couldn't suspect I had a key."

"Is there any room where you can lock yourself in?" he asked.

"I shouldn't think so. The house has been empty for years and the locks must be rusty."

"Try them at once. If you can't find a key that turns, hide yourself at the top of the house. And, mind you, don't show a light or make any noise."

After the man had rung off, the darkness did not seem quite so secure to Mary.

She groped her way to the nearest door, but, as she had expected, the key was rusted in the lock. She tried two others, with the same result. Then something seemed to stir behind her in the darkness, as suddenly she remembered the mayor's remarks about the vulnerability of the house.

At the thought of all the unshuttered windows on the ground floor, a gust of fear shook her, as a terrier worries a rat. With an instinctive craving for reassurance, she stole back to the telephone and gave John's number to the exchange.

As a matter of fact he was expecting her to ring him up. He had just returned home and was unlacing his boots when he heard the bell. Stumbling across to the instrument, directly he recognized her voice, he broke in excitedly.

"Isn't it great about old Dopey?"

"Dopey?" she repeated dully.

"What? Don't you know he's come back? Where are you?"

"Mabel's house . . . I've been chased by the convict. He's outside now—watching the road for me."

John's face paled as he listened to her breathless tale. It seemed to him that there remained one chance only to save her and that was to put up a desperate bluff. She must attempt to confuse the criminal and make him suspect a trap, in order to gain those priceless minutes of respite before the arrival of the police.

While he hesitated, he was goaded on to action by the merciless logic of the situation. The convict was still uncaptured mainly because he had left no witness in a fit state to give information about him. He had broken in, robbed and beaten up his victims, leaving them unconscious and in several cases on the point of death; but by the time the crime was discovered he had traveled miles from the scene. It was certain that Mary would not be spared the fate of those others.

The muscles throbbed in his cheeks as he cleared his throat.

"Mary," he said thickly, "I want you to snap on all the lights in the house. At once."

He heard her gasp in dismay.

"You must be mad," she cried. "The police told me to hide in the dark."

"That's no good. You must trust me. Your only chance is to fool him. Turn on the wireless, too. Make him think the mayor's in the house."

"I—I dare not. It's just telling him I'm here."

"Mary—he knows that already."

Again he heard the faint wail of dismay which told him that she realized her peril.

"All right," she said faintly. "I will. I only hope you are right."

"That's my brave girl. I'm coming to you now."

As he rang off, Mary felt desolate and abandoned to her fate. She was alone in a strange hostile darkness, while outside stretched the menace of the twilight moor. Sure that she was signing her own death warrant, she switched on the nearest light.

Immediately she found herself transported back into another world of more than 30 years ago. The hall was a formal polished place which faintly reproached her for a breach of decorum in entering unannounced. Its floor was composed of alternate black and white marble flags, covered with red and blue Turkey rugs. There was a massive mahogany hall stand, while a big carved bear from Switzerland held out a salver for her visiting card.

Mary Turns House Into Blaze of Light

In spite of her panic she was sustained by a strong sense of unreality which made her feel that she must be exploring a house in a dream. It was almost with a throb of anticipation that she opened two other doors and switched on the lights. The dining room with its suite upholstered in dull purple leather and its gilded walls must have been a daring departure from convention.

As she gazed at it Mary could almost imagine that she was accompanied by an invisible hostess who was proud to do the honors of her house. Then the present returned in a rush of fear. John had said "all the lights."

Out of the darkness flashed the grandeur of the spare room, with its walnut suite and amber satin bedspread and curtains. Then Mary was arrested by what was evidently Mabel's room. The carpet had a mauve ground—covered with pink roses—and the furniture was French.

When she entered the drawing room she felt that she had reached Mabel's own domain. This was where she used to sit with her lover and dream of the future. Soft lights, low music, and all around her accumulated treasures. She felt safe there, since it was impossible that it could be the scene of outrage or crime.

Mary was struck by the fact that everything was arranged as tho the mistress of the house was still in residence. A copy of Punch lay on the divan, beside a piece of drawn-thread work, stretched on a frame. On a small table was a big box of chocolates, tied with a festive yellow ribbon. The clock kept perfect time, while the calendar in its silver frame was up to date with the month.

An enlarged photograph of Mabel hung above the mantelpiece. She was a pretty girl with a good crop of hair piled high on her head in a profusion of rolled curls. Her eyes were maternally kind, her lips sweet yet firm, while from her full bust and rounded chin it was easy to see that she indulged a weakness for cream-puffs.

Underneath the photograph was placed a vase of Neapolitan violets which perfumed the air.

Gazing at the portrait, Mary lost all sense of peril as she thought of the woman who had planned this room. Unlike a modern girl, she had never earned a penny. Marriage was her natural goal. And now, when she ought to be fussing over her grandchildren, she was only a memory kept ever green by the mayor's devotion—expressed in a house.

Suddenly remembering John's instruction, Mary turned on the wireless and the strains of a Mayfair hotel orchestra flooded the air. Up in London fashionable folk were dancing at their tea. It was impossible to realize the fact as she examined the relics of Mabel's last visit to her house. The linen of the needlework was yellow and the chocolates looked like fawn wax.

The copy of Punch—then the current number—was dated January the third, 1901. Seated on the divan, Mary began to turn its pages. Soon she lost all sense of her surroundings in her enjoyment of the jokes, so that she never heard footsteps—muffled by the thick pile of the carpet—which were mounting the stairs.

"... when I sit there in the drawing room and look at her photograph, I don't feel quite so lonely."

A smile was still on her lips when she looked up at the sound of the opening door.

While the police were dashing along the snowy roads, and while John was letting out his motorcycle in an effort to overtake them, the convict stood staring up at Mabel's house. He had ceased to watch the moor, for he knew now that she would not come that way.

There was nothing in his appearance to suggest his prison association, while his description—issued by the police over the air—might have been that of any listener. Unfortunately it was not possible to establish what he wore. His first escapade was an attack on a lonely house, where he stocked himself with food and clothing; but as the maltreated tenant was still unconscious in a hospital, no one knew what was missing from his wardrobe.

Pursuing the same tactics of cunning and cruelty, Convict 193 had reached the fringe of civilization. He could walk thru the streets of Pooksmoor by night and reach the railway station unchallenged, since he had no blemish or peculiarity to betray him; but he still lacked the money to pay his fare. Once he was in London, he could get in touch with his gang and get the benefit of their resources.

Therefore his need of money was urgent and desperate; and when he saw Mary's outline against the sky his hopes flamed high. He knew that no woman in her senses would walk for pleasure on the moor in the present circumstances. The conclusion was that she was a cottager who was venturing to the town to buy household stores. In that case she would have a purse, which was as good as his.

This time, however, it was essential not only to silence her for good but to conceal her body so that it would not be discovered until after his train had arrived at the London terminus.

When he failed to overtake her on the moor he thought at first that she had doubled on her track and returned to some cottage tucked away in a pocket of the waste; but during the last few minutes her disappearance was no longer a mystery.

He knew exactly where she had gone—just as he knew that she was inside the lonely house. . . .

He was about to steal around to the back, to force a window, when suddenly he was arrested by a flood of light from the ground floor. One after another the windows became glowing frames of illumination. Then, —muted by the screen of glass—the faint sound of music became audible.

Growling like an animal baffled by guardian bars when on the spring, he cursed his luck. In spite of telephone wires and curtained windows, he believed this house to be temporarily empty. Two nights before, emboldened by its darkness, he had forced an entry, but only to find a completely bare larder.

All he had gained was a lodging for the night and a tot of whisky. On this occasion he had left no traces of his visit and had craftily filled up the bottle of spirits with water.

Now all the evidence pointed to occupation. The woman could not be alone. If she were hiding from him she would not betray her secret by flashing him a signal.

Suddenly he scented a plot. She had been sent out on the moor on purpose to lure him to this place. Inside was a posse of warders from the prison waiting to seize him directly he ventured near.

John—and the Police—Arrive on the Scene

For several minutes he lingered, staring up at the windows in the hope of solving the mystery. As the time passed and nothing further happened, he began to reject the possibility of a planned capture. The fact that he had not been rearrested was proof that his movements were unknown. Certainly the police would not expect to find him so near the town.

The explanation was that the woman did not know that she had been followed and was turning on the light in the normal way. Meanwhile he had to get money. The chances were that the woman might have some, either on her person or hidden in the house.

Creeping around to the back of the house, he peered thru every window in turn. Kitchen, scullery, and larders—all were dark and silent. There was no evidence of the servants such as the importance of the house would entail.

He decided to pick the old-fashioned lock of the side door thru which he had made his previous entrance. Altho it was an elementary operation for his talents, some skill and patience were needed. Engrossed by his task, he never noticed when the police closed in on him from two sides.

John, when he arrived on the scene a few minutes later, dashed upstairs in search of Mary. He expected to find her badly shaken by her ordeal, but to his great relief he burst open the drawing room door to find her smiling over a copy of Punch.

"They've got him," he shouted. "Thank God you had the courage to turn on the lights."

"I was a bit scared," she confessed.

He felt her shudder in his arms, but the next minute her face grew radiant with happiness.

"O, John," she cried, "I've just remembered something marvelous. I didn't realize it at the time, but when I rang you up you told me that Dopey has come home."

TWIN SOMBREROS

CONCLUSION

THE STUPEFYING SHOCK passed, Brazos let go of Wess and turned to the window. Gradually his dim sight cleared. Outside he saw Indians and horses, a sweep of gray slope leading up to the horizon. He found himself. What was this that had happened? Retribution had caught up with him. One of the Neece twins had followed him. He had imagined it was June—the good and quiet—the sweet and noble girl whom he had worshiped. But June could never have undertaken this wild chase. She would never have deserted her father for an outlaw. It was Jan. It was Jan—that passionate little devil who at last had given rein to the wildness in her.

"All right, Wess," declared Brazos finally, turning to his friend. "What's the rest?"

"Wal! Thet's more like my old pard," replied Wess, greatly relieved. "There ain't so much more. Yore gurl had a lot of baggage, Brazos. Easy to see she wasn't goin' back home. Ha! Ha! Wal, we loaded it on the stage. An' we rode with thet stage all the way from Dodge. There was several other passengers off an' on.

"They an' my boys, an' me, too, fell turrible hard for yore sweetheart. I reckon the stage come purty near bein' held up once by road agents. At least Bill Hempstead, our driver, said he knowed thet outfit. But we was too many. Afterward Miss Neece confessed she had a lot of money with her an' thet it was great luck for her thet we happened to be her bodyguard. I reckon thet's about all. Yu bet I never enjoyed the Old Trail like I did this time."

"Lot of baggage and money!" exclaimed Brazos, bewildered again. "Wess, tell me this is a nightmare."

"Nightmare my eye! Look at thet, where yu bruised my wrist, squeezin' it so hard."

"I'm sorry, pard. Thanks for everythin'. I reckon I won't shoot yore laig off."

"Wal, I'm tolerable glad about thet. Brazos, I got a gurl myself, an' when yu've time yu must heah about her."

"Aw, thet's fine, Wess. I'll be glad to heah."

"Brazos, there's Mrs. Doan," went on Wess quickly. "She's lookin' for yu, I'll bet. Come, pard, yu better get it over. I cain't help sayin' I wouldn't mind bein' in yore boots."

Doan introduced Brazos to his wife, a comely, sturdy pioneer type, blonde and buxom. She certainly gave Brazos a looking over before she relaxed into friendliness and sympathy.

"I think you had better see your fiancée at once. She is under a strain. I hope—nothing's wrong. She is sweet and she must care greatly for you."

"Cowboy, I seen thet an' I had it figured when she stepped off the stage. Such eyes! Black an' hungry as a starved Indian's!" added Doan, with his hearty smile.

"Wal, friends, she must think a lot of me," replied Brazos gravely. "It's too late now for me to worry aboot not bein' good enough for her an' ridin' away like I did. Take me to her."

"Wal, cowboy," interposed Doan impressively, "take it from me. A Texan like yu is worth any two Yankee gurls thet ever was!"

Two girls! Brazos suffered a piercing stab. His quick flash of eyes assured him that the frontiersman was just bragging in the simplicity of his loyalty and pride.

"Tom, if Brazos is good enough for one girl—and half good enough for this one—we have a lot to be thankful for. Come, Brazos," added Mrs. Doan.

She led him to a door at the south end of the post. "This is my room, Brazos. You'll be secluded there. Make it up to her. Try to realize your great good fortune."

At the moment before he stepped into the room, Brazos faced his ultimatum. It was June he loved most and wanted for his wife, but it could never have been June who had the adventurous spirit to follow him. So Jan must never know. And love her he did, too, but not as he did June. In all humbleness, he told himself that he was lucky to have either of the twins give up everything to come to him.

Brazos was tense and tingling when he opened the door. The room appeared large and bright. Sunlight streamed in the several windows, to give the furnishing a touch of warmth and vividness. He heard a gasp. Then he wheeled.

"Bra-zos!" whispered some one tremulously. She had been standing almost behind the door, waiting, her face white, her lips parted, her eyes wide and dark. Brazos had not expected to see her in a white dress, but, of course, she had had time to change. Jan would never have let him see her travel stained or disheveled. Her face was lovely despite the havoc he read there. That mark of grief drew him as subtly as the gratitude and love which welled up upon sight of her.

"Brazos, darling! I had to come." She flew to him.

He held her close and tight to his breast while he bent his head against her rippling hair. On the moment he could not see well. He seemed to float in that dim room.

"Don't hug me so," she whispered, almost inaudibly, "unless you don't want me to breathe. Brazos, you're not angry?"

"Angry? No, Jan. I'm sort of buffaloed. My Gawd, child, it was sweet and good and bad of yu to trail me heah."

"Bad?" she queried quickly.

"For yu, dear. I'm an outlaw, yu know. Yu've disgraced yoreself and all of them."

"But for you, Brazos, darling?"

"I reckon it's near heaven again."

"O! Then you forgive me?"

"I probably will if yu kiss me like yu did thet turrible night."

"Same old Brazos! Tell me you won't send me back," she importuned softly.

"No, Jan. I cain't do thet."

"But you want me?" she flashed, with a show of her old fire.

"Yes. I'm mad about yu, Jan. I reckoned I'd got over it a little. But I hadn't."

"Darling! And—June?"

"Wal, she didn't trail me, did she?"

It appeared then that a convulsion waved over the girl. She clung to Brazos with her face hidden against him. He felt her breast throb upon his. She did not weep. Her arms slid up round his neck. Blindly she raised her face, flaming now, with tears coursing from under her closed eyelids, and she found Brazos' lips with her own.

Brazos Hears Some Astounding News

She kissed them again and again, left them for his cheeks and eyes, only to return, until it seemed to Brazos that her kisses gathered strength and fire and passion as they multiplied. But suddenly she sank limp against him, her arms sliding down. Holding her close Brazos leaned against a table and tried to separate conflicting tides of emotion from tumultuous and overwhelming thoughts. Presently he could see clearly thru the window, the blue sky beyond the green trees.

"Jan, I reckon we—might sit down," he said huskily, and half lifted her to the couch. But she would not let go of him. Weak and nerveless now, she still clung. "Yu must be kinda tired, all thet long stage ride."

"No. I wasn't tired," she said, lifting her head. "Just overcome at meeting you. Scared weak. I was afraid you'd send me back. That—you—you loved J—June best."

Brazos took her face between his hands and studied it gravely. The havoc he had seen appeared warmed out and the dark eyes had lost their strain. But there was a difference. Tiny blue veins he had never noticed before shone thru the white of her temples; there were dark shadows under her eyes, magnifying them; her cheeks were thinner. Beauty abided there imperishably, but it was an older, nobler, sadder face.

Springtime May Make a Child Troublesome

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1940: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

I don't know of any age at which spring hits children harder than at around 10 or so. The shedding of heavy clothes, the sudden outdoor freedom that comes with warmer weather [especially after such a winter as this has been all over our country], the fresh green, and blue skies, all that goes to make up the feel of spring in the air seems to intoxicate them. But especially, for some reason, the boys. You might say, if you didn't quite understand it, that spring demoralized them. But even at best, these years in between childhood and adolescence are hard on parents.

A great many of them feel like a mother who was talking to a caller the other day. She cuddled and adored her boy when he was tiny. But when he came barging in, then out of the room, one day at the age of 8, she said: "Aren't they uninteresting when they're like this! I suppose I'm in for years of it." And altho she doesn't suspect it, that attitude accounts for many things about her boy that now detract from him as a young personality. She, like many parents, is so annoyed by his heedlessness, his vigor and fascination for play and other boys' company, that she is losing the real boy who is there all the time, the real boy who needs warmth, and interest, and understanding.

At any time of the year, boys during the years of 8 to 12 are, well, let's say "obstreperous and ubiquitous"; but it's more noticeable right now. Spring seems to put an edge on all their ways that we class as faults. It points up their characteristics, and at the same time shows up our need of understanding them and dealing better with them.

What are these ways that we so universally associate with these "in-betweens"? Family complaints, compiled from letters, read something like this:

My boy is causing me untold and exasperating experiences. His main trouble is such absolute engrossment in his own thoughts, books, drawings, or play as to exclude every known and commonly necessary duty, from getting to school on time to going to bed.

Food is of no importance until he's ravenously hungry . . . hours simply are not. Authority does not exist, and when it does, is terribly resented. He will not take orders.

Talking to him elicits the reply that he cannot remember. Shrugged shoulders answer all other reprimands. He is entirely on the defensive.

He is so absorbed he doesn't even know you've spoken once, twice, or thrice, so he doesn't answer.

He is so intent on getting his bat, because a game is to start in Sam's yard, he really doesn't see his very proper aunt who is having tea with you.

He is in such a hurry to meet the boys he asks you where his bat or marbles or Scout equipment is, and actually doesn't sense that he's interrupting your conversation with the milkman, or the mayor!

A dozen times a day he forgets, barges in, gets himself hurt, or his clothes torn or dirty. He is oblivious of appearances, has no sense of time, and is beginning to enjoy staying up in the evenings; but he gets up at ungodly hours in the morning, no matter what time he goes to bed.

There it is, all in a nutshell. And in these cases, as in many others, I believe the mismanagement that causes all this friction is not a fundamental one of lack of real sympathy between mother and child. It is, rather, not understanding this behavior as merely a phase, to be handled accordingly.

If this fact is not recognized there is a tendency to think that boyish absorption and absence of responsibility are real character faults. All this makes a parent manage her boy in the worst way possible. It makes her take seriously, even solemnly, all these annoying boy-ways of which, half the time, the 10 year old himself isn't conscious—and which are only a passing phase.

Now what happens, especially if this 10 year old lives in such close quarters that he is always underfoot? Well, what often happens is that he always is colliding with the convenience [and sometimes the actual person] of his grownups, constantly shattering their quiet, and continually disturbing the sedateness of their ways.

So, every little act is noticed and commented on. Reproaches dot the air, reminders become nagging, correction degenerates into scolding, and the child comes to feel that nothing he does is right. Clouds of disapproval "hang heavy over his head."

His defense may be defiance, or sulkiness, or rebellion, or all three. Conflicts become numerous. Mother and son, or father and son, no longer enjoy each other, and a very poor path is being laid to lead to the more subtle and often difficult years of adolescence.

The important thing is not to let your son or daughter of this age get away from you, in spirit. And if you'll try to understand them and be friends with them, you'll be amazed at the influence you'll have. You'll be able to "put over" all the essentials.

Thru the Looking Glass

The romantic fragrance of the wild rose has made its bow to spring in the form of a cologne, a makeup, and two delightful bath preparations. They're feminine, they're captivating, and they're inexpensive.

Spring's the time when Fashion, that powerful dictator in her own adoring world, really has a field day. She's like a busy executive giving orders. She can be smug about it, for she knows she'll meet with little opposition. People just do things her way, immediately she places her stamp of approval on the current trend.

This spring she's gone quite sentimental and ordered the things that portray femininity and romance. Romantic clothes! Romantic makeup! Romantic fragrances! Could there be a more perfect interpretation of this trend than with the wild rose? It fits into the picture as tho it were especially made for it. Taking this cue, the delicate fragrance of this flower is presented to us in a line of preparations designed to please and beautify.

There's a perfumed cologne that makes one think of liquid rose petals. The faint, spicy sweetness of their fragrance is so truly captured that having a bottle of it is the next thing to having a rose garden in your yard. It comes in two sizes: A small one that is easy to handle and a large one so generous in size that to own one is virtually breath-taking.

There's a bath preparation that is the luxurious way to start or finish your day. A splendid water softener, these rose scented bubbles in the tub will make you forget all your troubles. Companion to this, the dusting powder. A film of fine, feathery bath powder dusted on with big fat puff of heavenly blue is the finishing touch.

Then there's a complete makeup that has the same fresh appeal of the natural flower. The lipstick, of fine texture, and keyed to the deeper tone of the rose is the warm, natural looking kind that usually is becoming to all users, blonde or brunette. It will be a stunner with the summer pastels and white.

The packaging of these preparations spells romance from cover to stopper. Soft pink in color, the boxes are decorated with two tiny, old-fashioned figures, a boy and a girl sitting in a rose garden. They're probably talking about love. The garden is encircled with a wrought iron fence, and the base carries a tiny fringe of green, representing the grass. The bottles of cologne and bath salts are shaped at the top to resemble rose petals. FLORENCE MURDOCH.

For information about these preparations, telephone Eleanor Nangle, Superior 0200, or write to her in care of the Chicago Tribune.

Jackets Prove Democracy in Fashion Realm

By Bettina Bedwell.

While fashions frequently are accused of being totalitarian, I claim that this is a false charge, and that the styles are going more and more democratic. I recall that Jean Patou, in the middle of his greatest dressmaker success, when he was making a yearly profit way up in the millions, said to me: "In 50 years there will be no fashions." He opined at that time, the mid-twenties, that womenfolk were making a slow and bloodless revolution against regimentation in dress, and that nothing in the known world could stop the dear things from winning.

The way things in the style world are shaping up this spring, it looks like we'd reached the democratic stage of the fashion business, en route perhaps for M. Patou's anarchy. I could cite examples to prove this from any known branch of duds as shown by the style centers, and as worn by the ultimate consumers. It will be enough to dwell on one: The jacket ensemble which, from now on for some months, is going to be worn from ocean to ocean in this land, and back again.

Like man, the jacket ensemble in 1940 is wayward and unpredictable, it has the right of free lines, and is making the fullest use of this democratic license in the styles. New jacket ensembles, with the dateline "Spring, 1940," are those with a loose, straight jacket, ending anywhere from the hipline to the knees, and a slim line dress. But they have'nt, by a long shot, ousted the short, fitted jacket and its flared skirted dress. That, too, is all over the place. Likewise, you'd think, by the number of bolero jacket ensembles being shown, and worn, that fashion had only just now heard of this kind of dress unit. Actually, it's hoary and venerable and familiar, but beloved just the same. I'll say nothing here about that long torso jacket.

These are a few of the outstanding types of jacket ensemble bearing the impressive okay of top flight designers in America and in Paris. In between there are loads of jacket outfits that are personal and escape any category label, and they're probably the smartest of the whole lot.

This kind of freedom puts a lot of responsibility on women. Chiefly, it's the responsibility to pick what best suits your own individual chassis and what plays up your personality most charmingly. You streamlined gals may go on wearing the fitted, short jacket that throws the good news of your youthful figures into capital letters. You may vary the scheme a bit by wearing your skirts more slender, or you can go on with your swing skirt, if that's the way yo feel about it. Women with a hip problem get a break in the loose jacket, with its slender skirt, and the length may be regulated according to height. The same matters should direct a choice in the matter of the long torso jacket. The bolero will look deb-age if paired with a flaring skirt, and sophisticated if coupled with a slimline dress, so you may choose the age you can get away with.

In the matter of color, the rainbow's the limit, but I recommend consideration of those new subtle colors that look so smart in comparison with more brilliant shades, such as gray, greige, beige, pale gray-green, etc.

That Bloused Silhouette in a Smart New Frock

By Bettina Bedwell.

Molyneux began it and Paris and America have adopted it and adapted it — the bloused silhouette. For some reason it is universally flattering, especially to those of us with either oversized hips or undersized bust measurements. It's a tailored line with dressiness achieved by soft styling, and it's a grand outline for late spring and early summer dresses and coats. A dress which we particularly like is of Paris origin and we've had it copied for this inexpensive pattern. The lines at the throat are shirtwaist; the lines of the front princess. And the back is bloused.

The original model is made of silk in a conventional print. Both patterned and plain silks and cottons are effective for this style. Bold colors are Paris sponsored at the present time, or subtle ones accented with splashes of brightness in accessories.

Style No. 5344 is designed for sizes 12, 14, and 16, and 36, 38, and 40 inch bust measurements. Size 16 requires 3½ yards of 39 inch material for short sleeved dress; 3⅞ yards for long sleeved frock.

Address orders to Chicago Tribune Paris Patterns, 119 West 19th street, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred — wrap it carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be certain to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired, and write your name and address plainly.

A FRIEND IN NEED

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you no longer use, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, the Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Activities of this department are sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

By Sally Joy Brown.

"Miss Brown: I don't know how I'm going to keep the children in school any longer. My oldest daughter dislikes attending classes in her shabby dresses and she's had to wear an old coat of mine. I can cut down any of the things the older children have outgrown if they're not completely worn out, but it takes so long and it's so difficult to do by hand. The children are all active and they're hard on clothes. The boys' things always need mending, and with washing and ironing, scrubbing and cooking to be done I just can't seem to keep up with the sewing, and the children loathe being shabby."

Thus runs the tale of the average work-worn mother of a large family who comes to me for help. There is no money for new clothing. Food and rent, the cheapest possible at that, generally are all the family income will supply.

The majority of these women is not too strong at best. Nine times out of ten their eyes are weak and strained, and glasses are out of the question. Any extra money must go to pay bills or to care for the children's medical and dental needs. Many of these homes are not equipped with electricity. It just can't be afforded, and makeshift lighting arrangements must do.

These are the reasons why our file of requests for sewing machines is filled to overflowing, and we hope that readers who no longer do a great deal of sewing and have unused machines on hand will contribute them.

In a large family such as the C.'s a machine would be a valuable help to the mother. There are eight children, ranging in age from 1 to 12 years. Mrs. C. is able to sew well, and could mend and remake clothing for the youngsters. The father earns a very small salary, and supplying apparel for the children is a constant problem. The address is west of the loop.

Kindly neighbors have donated clothing for the children in the K. family, but all of it needs some remodeling to be suitable. The address is south and west of the loop, and the family will be glad to arrange cartage if some reader has a machine to offer.

Another request for a machine comes from an organization in a suburb west of the city. The group makes bedding and clothing for the numerous needy families in the neighborhood, and with a machine they could produce more and sturdier work. They have no funds for the purchase of one.

HOUSEHOLD FORUM

Ella Morse, Jefferson City, Mo.: To keep my husband's and sons' trousers neatly in place without folding them, I attach a couple of spring-type clothespins to ends of heavy wire garments and clip trousers to them. In this way there's no need of folding.

Dorothy Grey, Chicago: Here's a question for spring and summer: Why won't they manufacture all matches in green shades so lawns won't look so messy when people smoke out of doors?

Laura More, Chicago: I've often wondered why people don't start "Swap Shops" in sizable towns and cities for kiddies' belongings? Children outgrow things so fast. Call it a "Stork Exchange," and let people trade everything from outgrown play pens and cribs to kiddie cars and baby scales. If the "swap" doesn't seem even, additional payment might be made! [Editor's note—Believe some such shop has been started in New York state. It's a good idea!]

Sadie Lane, Chicago: I've noticed how often my boys have come in during these spring rains with their trousers from the knees down soaking wet and wondered WHY they don't waterproof all trousers from the knees down? It would save a lot on drying and pressing!

Safely Lose Ugly Fat

this amazingly simple, pleasant way. No strict diet list—no exercises—no drugs

FROM coast-to-coast, you now hear women singing the praises of a surprisingly easy, pleasant method to reduce. A method which Dr. Damrau of New York demonstrated in tests among a group of intelligent and cooperative people who followed directions implicitly, was responsible for an average loss in weight of 7 pounds per month. Most important, this method does NOT call for special diet lists. You never suffer a hungry moment. Nor is it necessary for you to take strenuous exercises, or drugs.

All you have to do is eat sensibly, which means that you avoid overeating, and drink ¾ of a glass of Welch's Grape Juice, mixed with ¼ of a glass of water, before meals and at bedtime. Thus reducing caloric intake considerably.

How This Pleasant Way Takes Off Excess Fat!

Nothing could be easier, or more pleasant. Yet!—this is what happens. First, this delicious drink satisfies your craving for rich, sweet foods. You have less desire to overeat fattening foods—but you do feel comfortably full. Second, the grape sugar in Welch's is quickly consumed, and by this process helps nature to consume excess fat.

Thus weight is lost naturally and safely. And this proved method is just as beneficial and effective for overweight men, as it is for overweight women.

Watch One Thing Carefully

Follow this proved way to take off excess fat. Eat sensibly, which means that you avoid overeating—and be sure to use Welch's pure, aged, full-strength grape juice before meals. Always made from the pick of the grape crop. No water added; no artificial coloring. Tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau. Insist upon genuine Welch's Grape Juice for the results you want. For economy's sake—buy Welch's by the case.

Irene Rich, past 40, still has her lovely slenderness of 16. She recommends the easy Welch way to reduce.

NEW TYPE TOMATO JUICE THRILLS THE NATION

If you think all tomato juice is alike, try Welch's new vitamin-rich tomato juice for the thrill of your life. A noted chemist tested five brands and found Welch's Tomato Juice superior—larger Vitamin C content; as much Vitamin A as milk—and rich in Vitamin B. Welch's is so rich and thick, you can add ⅓ water, or ice, and still have a most delicious tomato juice. So it's economical to serve. Get Welch's Tomato Juice from your dealer today. It's pure, pasteurized, laboratory controlled and tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau. Double your money back if you don't say it's the finest tomato juice you ever tasted.

May Is Month for Breakfast Entertaining

Miss Meade contributes daily to the feature pages of the Chicago Tribune, guiding housewives to the best knowledge of cookery and hostessing.

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1940: By The Chicago Tribune.]

May is a month for entertaining at breakfast, and April is a month for planning what to serve and how to serve at such a morning party.

Omelets, pancakes, and waffles are "out," for most large breakfasts, because of the difficulties involved in preparing these foods for a crowd. But they are grand for small breakfasts at home. If a breakfast, large or small, includes enough fruit in its makeup to moisten the menu thoroly, a dessert isn't needed, as a rule. And if the breakfast is served early in the morn'ng, a dessert obviously is out of place. But a late break ast, particularly a very spec'-' one, almost requires dessert.

Numerology

By Evelyn Holmes

April 21, 1940.

The attributes of 2 and 1 are not at all alike so those born on the 21st have a complex 3 to live up to. This number 3 is full of dual emotional qualities and with the dual 2 behind it, the vibrations are very mixed. Expressions in some form should be the aim of those with a 21 birthdate. The emphasis should be on service [education, hospitalization, homemaking, institutional work], but with more creativeness than required of the 2. This is a splendid year for those born on this date to give full expression to their talents.

Campus Modes by a Co-ed

By Carolyn Ramey.

When the war-embroiled nations of Europe began being air raid conscious, designers in the capitals changed the clothes trends. Two differences were immediately apparent and have endured long enough to become part of our American fashions. One is large pockets, the other is tailored simplicity almost approaching that of a uniform. I like this sort of dress once in a while, especially for classroom and general daytime occasions. My latest "practical" frock is of this type.

The neckline may be buttoned up to a little collar or opened out revers-fashion to reveal a high V. Beneath the precise shoulder yoke is shirring in the front to soften the plainness of the bodice, which may be trimmed with buttons or simply share in a neckline-to-hem fly panel. A narrow belt encircles the slim waist, and the flared skirt is unadorned except for the voluminous pockets. Sleeves may be long or short.

My own dress is of lightweight, gray-blue flannel, with no trimming except a leather belt to match my over-the-shoulder handbag. Both are navy.

Furniture Market April 29-May 4 to Show Regency

Regency furniture is making news, and is prominent in the displays planned for the Mid-Season Furniture Market at the Merchandise Mart in Chicago, April 29 thru May 4. During the last few months public interest in and acceptance › Regency style furnishings has grown to such an extent that the revival is one of the most importa:t o: the season.

Regency included in this market is of the English rather than the French type. The actual English Regency was created from 1811 to 1820, in the reign of George IV., but the period concerned with this furniture influence began about 1790 and lasted until about 1835. Those were the days of Beau Brummel, Mrs. Siddons, Sir Walter Scott, Sir Thomas Lawrence, and Charles Lamb, essayist known as Elia. Adam, Sheraton, and Chippendale furniture long had been supreme, and the fashionable people of the day wanted something new, something smart, and something "bolder," and this influence gave rise to Regency furniture.

Staceys Hold Studio Party in Pasadena

By Ruth Billheimer.

PASADENA, CAL. "In the time of roses" is the choice of Anna Lee and John F. Stacey [whose Chicago studio was known to the art colony there for many years] for a studio warming here in Pasadena where they have settled. Today they will be hosts to 150 friends who will call between the hours of 4 and 7 at their Prospect Terrace home where the rose garden is at its peak of beauty.

Two old friends of Chicago days, Mrs. Theodore White Smith and Mrs. Oren O'Neal, will assist. Mrs. Guy Stewart McCabe, a new found friend who once lived in Chicago, too, also is assisting, together with half a dozen other Pasadena matrons.

The Staceys find themselves expanding, now that the garden guest house has been enlarged to the more comfortable proportions of a studio. Its series of French doors look onto a geometrical rose bed literally ablaze with roses. Azaleas stand close against the studio wall in a colorful border.

Another pair of artists entertaining are Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Thomas, altho Mrs. Thomas long ago gave up her painting and now makes a career of entertaining her husband's models to keep away the bogey of self-consciousness! . . . A task for which she is eminently fitted, for she is a charming conversationalist. Her husband is the celebrated portrait artist whose painting of Woodrow Wilson hangs over the spot in the White House where the President stands to receive his guests.

Their series of at homes during the winter and spring months each year are the rendezvous for many prominent persons and last Sunday, Carrie Jacobs Bond, a former Chicagoan, was one of the guests. Mrs. Sherman Hoyt Bouton, also a Chicagoan by birth, and a close friend of the Thomases, was present and assisted at the tea table as did Mrs. Jerrold Franklyn Walton, who is well known to the winter colony.

Bound for Minneapolis, Minn., this week was Mrs. Albert Bailey Potter [Margaret Sweet], former Chicagoan, who is to join her three sisters there to celebrate on Wednesday the 70th birthday of their father, John Sweet. With her went her tiny daughter, Cynthia. They will be east for a month.

The other sisters are Mrs. Douglas Anderson of Grosse Pointe, Miss Polly Sweet, and Miss Helen Jane Sweet of Minneapolis. The latter returned east with Mrs. Potter after being her house guest here since the holidays. Mr. Sweet has compiled an up-to-date history of the family which he has had published and will present to his four daughters on his birthday.

Freeport Wins Garden Club's Annual Award

At its annual meeting Monday the Garden Club of Illinois bestowed its annual civic award on the Freeport Garden club for outstanding conservation work in Stephenson county. The club has sponsored extensive plantings and wild life refuges thruout the county. A second prize went to the Garden Club of Itasca for its conversion of a dump into a park in that community. The Winnetka Garden club's wild flower plantings on Crow Island, west of Winnetka, received third prize.

Mrs. Warren W. Shoemaker of Winnetka was elected president, succeeding Mrs. George Plamondon of Wheaton. Mrs. Plamondon, Mrs. W. L. Karcher, a former president, and Mrs. Raymond Knotts, member of the executive committee for the club's annual flower show, and editor of its magazine, Garden Glories, were presented with life memberships in the National Council of State Garden Clubs in recognition of their services to the Illinois club. The annual meeting was held at the Palmer House.

Start now to reduce the easy Ry-Krisp way

Short skirts and light summer clothes demand a slim, trim figure. To look your best this summer, start now to lose ugly fat the simple Ry-Krisp way.

Ry-Krisp Plan in Brief

A. Eat sensibly. Using the booklet as a guide, a normal person can eat what he likes and lose about 7 to 8 pounds a month.

B. Exercise moderately—just to help keep skin and muscles firm.

C. Enjoy 2 or 3 Ry-Krisp wafers as your bread at each meal. Each delicious Ry-Krisp wafer has only 20 calories yet is a source of energy, rich in vitamin B_1 and supplies bulk to help stimulate natural elimination.

Ry-Krisp comes in the red-and-white checkerboard package, has the name baked in every wafer. Served in restaurants, tea-rooms, on trains and planes. Always ask for Ry-Krisp by name.

Free Reducing Booklet—Just send a penny postal, stating whether booklet is for man or woman. Address Ry-Krisp, 754 K Checkerboard Square, St. Louis. Offer good only in U. S. and Canada.

Long on flavor—short on calories

Ry-Krisp is a whole-grain wafer, tempting in appearance, appetizing in flavor. Looks like an airy, golden-brown cracker. Tastes like toast.

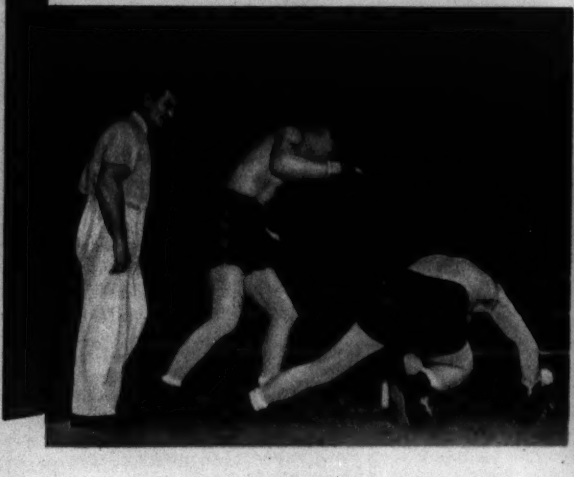
Here's JACK DEMPSEY "counting out" a HEADACHE...

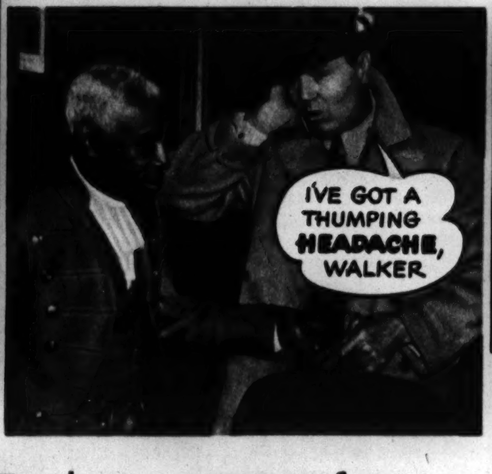
Plenty of Headaches in Jack's busy life...

GARCIA-LEE BOUT IN MANILA
21,254 miles — a distance record went to Jack when he flew to Manila to referee the Garcia-Lee bout. His tours mean constant strain. "Sure, I get headaches," says Jack, "but Bromo-Seltzer counts 'em out fast. Settles my stomach, leaves me keener, too."

HOST TO A MILLION!
Between bouts, Jack returns to his famous New York restaurant. He's been host to over a million people. The pace may mean headaches, but he knows what to do . . .

"QUICK, MORE ALL-ROUND RELIEF"
"When my head aches, Bromo-Seltzer helps me fast," says Jack. "It not only eases the pain, it helps my nerves and stomach, too. My secretary always keeps Bromo-Seltzer handy."





Good Luck Pal
Jack Dempsey

Why BROMO-SELTZER does more for you than simple pain relievers can

Headache is a sign that your system is upset in some way. If your headaches are frequent or persistent, see your doctor. But, for ordinary headaches, Bromo-Seltzer gives you more all-round relief than simple pain relievers can.

Here's why: Ordinary headaches may be:

NERVOUS—caused by fatigue, nervous strain, overwork, worry, etc.

DIGESTIVE or MORNING-AFTER—caused by digestive disturbances, such as too much to eat or drink, etc.

For such headaches you need not only relief from the pain, but help for nervous strain and upset stomach, too. A simple pain reliever can't do all this. Bromo-Seltzer does. Here is what it does for you:

1. RELIEVES PAIN—eases the throbbing pleasantly and fast.
2. STEADIES NERVES—relaxes tension, leaves you more alert.
3. SETTLES UPSET STOMACH—helps set you right again.

Next time your head aches, take Bromo-Seltzer. For over 50 years, millions have relied on it. Follow directions on label. At drugstores, soda fountains. Keep it at home!

Liked more because it does more for headache BROMO-SELTZER

Why take harsh LAXATIVES?

Here's a safer, more pleasant way

Registered nurse from Saráka World's Fair Exhibit answers typical questions asked about constipation by 218,000 visitors

Mr. F. W. M., Monson, N. Y.

WHY DO DOCTORS WARN AGAINST HARSH LAXATIVES?

A. Because many drugs of a purging nature frequently found in pills, salts and liquid laxatives so often are irritating. And because coarse roughage may harm the delicate membrane. It's important to you to know that Saráka's soft, moist, lubricating bulk is safe.

Mrs. A. S., New York, N. Y.

IS SARÁKA FOR CHRONIC OR OCCASIONAL CONSTIPATION?

A. For both. For chronic constipation due to lack of bulk thousands say there is nothing like Saráka for dependable, satisfying results. It doesn't upset the system, it doesn't aggravate the condition as ordinary laxatives do. For occasional use, too, you'll appreciate how naturally Saráka acts—no griping or embarrassing urgency.

1. No griping pains
2. No weakening after-effects
3. No dangerous drugs
4. Not habit-forming
5. Pleasant to take

Mr. S. M., Duluth, Minn.

JUST HOW DOES SARÁKA WORK?

A. First, it supplies lubricating bulk. Its tiny granules of bassorit expand into a soft, moist, gelatin-like substance. This gives the intestinal muscles something to exercise on. Second, Saráka contains a specially treated cortex frangula that gently stimulates lazy intestinal muscles.

This two-way action gives the gentle, satisfying results Saráka is famous for.

Twenty Long Years Ago, when most ladies still rode side-saddle, W. K. Kellogg created a special breakfast food that was designed to help America keep "regular." He called it KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. Since then, scores of scientists have verified its effectiveness by research, thousands of doctors have prescribed it, millions of Americans have demanded it for breakfast.

One Million Users a Day! And now, two decades later, a million Americans a day eat this crunchy, nut-crisp cereal. If you, too, suffer from the common kind of constipation (due to lack of the right kind of "bulk" in the diet) ALL-BRAN offers a way to join the "regulars." Eat it every day and drink plenty of water. THE TRUTH ABOUT CORNS

Their cause and how to get rid of them

A corn is a mass of dead cells packed into a hard plug (A) whose base presses on sensitive nerves (B)—causes intense pain.

Felt pad (C) relieves pain by removing pressure. Special medication (D) acts on corn, gently loosens it so it can be lifted out.

● Science has long known the cause of corns and clinical tests have proved that corns can be effectively removed the Blue-Jay way. Corns are caused by pressure and friction, become a hard mass as shown at left. Home paring only gives temporary relief—means risk of infection. But it's easy to remove corns the Blue-Jay way. Just fit a Blue-Jay pad over the corn. It acts quickly and surely as shown in diagram. You get wonderful relief. Stubborn corns may require a second application. Then simply by avoiding the pressure and friction which caused your corns you can prevent their return. Get Blue-Jay Corn Plasters today—only 25¢ for 6.

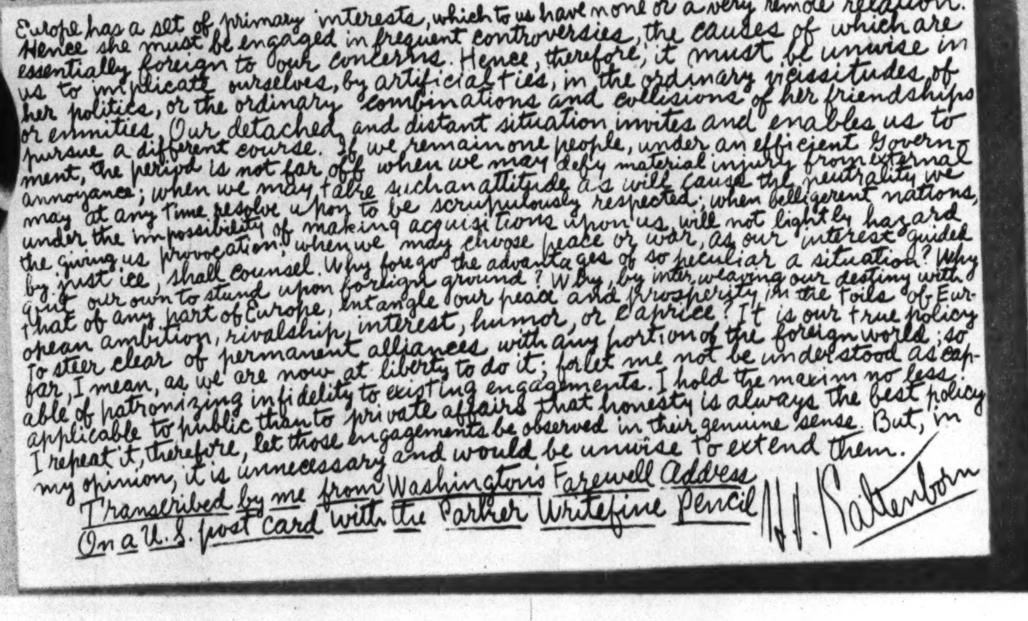
(Transcribed by H. V. Kaltenborn, radio's Ace news analyst)



Europe has a set of primary interests, which to us have none or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves, by artificial ties, in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics, or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities. Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course. If we remain one people, under an efficient Government, the period is not far off when we may defy material injury from external annoyance; when we may take such an attitude as will cause the neutrality we may at any time resolve upon to be scrupulously respected; when belligerent nations, under the impossibility of making acquisitions upon us, will not lightly hazard the giving us provocation; when we may choose peace or war, as our interest guided by justice, shall counsel. Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humor, or caprice? It is our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world; so far, I mean, as we are now at liberty to do it; for let me not be understood as capable of patronizing infidelity to existing engagements. I hold the maxim no less applicable to public than to private affairs that honesty is always the best policy. I repeat it, therefore, let those engagements be observed in their genuine sense. But, in my opinion, it is unnecessary and would be unwise to extend them.

Due to 39% thinner lead (25% smaller diameter) with DOUBLE LENGTH and amazing strength, this 300-word passage from George Washington's Farewell Address did not even fill the postal card.

H. V. Kaltenborn, radio's famous news commentator, transcribed Washington's warning with the new Parker Writefine to show how much can be written in little space—on printed forms, estimate sheets, notebooks or pocket diaries—and how sharp and clear—by using this postgraduate of ALL pencils.

GANG RULE in NEW YORK

The Unholy Alliance of Crime and Politics!

By CRAIG THOMPSON and ALLEN RAYMOND

(Copyright: 1940: By Craig Thompson and Allen Raymond.)

THE DAY before election in 1932 produced a scene on the steps of the Monongahela Democratic club of New York City, over which James J. Hines ruled, that, while it might have been an ordinary sight to many a politician, probably would have provoked a startled gasp from any civics teacher. A line of persons was passing into the club, walking around, and out again. Some were black, some white, most of them shabby. Some were women, most of them men. Up the steps, into the club, around, and out. On the stoop, greeting them, were two Hines henchmen, while from the door Hines watched with a shrewd eye.

As this line walked in, one of the henchmen handed to each of them a crisp, new dollar from a sheaf of notes he held in his hand. The other intoned monotonously: "Vote every star. Vote every star." The star is the Democratic party emblem on the ballots and voting machines in New York City. A dollar bill to every visitor. "Vote every star."

"What is this?" a visitor asked Hines.

"O," said Jimmy, surprised that any one should have to ask such a question, "it's relief. There's a lot of poor people in this district."

"Here," said one of the henchmen to a visitor. "Vote every star," said the other.

That year, Hines swore in his federal and state income tax returns, his income was less than $5,000. He must have given away at least $1,000 on that day alone, and at least a part of it, if not all of it, came from the gangsters who were his buddies, pals, and patrons.

FOREWORD Beginning here is the story of the unholy alliance of crime and politics in New York City. A shocking record, this story tells in detail how a group of gunmen were able to dominate the city's majority political party, the Democratic, and thus subvert the civil government of the great metropolis to their own ends. These mobsters, protected by their political pals, seized the bootleg liquor industry and by means of more than a thousand murders consolidated their illegal empire. Fattened by whisky profits and made arrogant by political immunities, they began preying upon legitimate commerce of the city. There is not now, and never will be, any exact computation of what these extortions have yielded them, but their rackets have extended to virtually every industry in New York City. Until District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey laid them low by convicting the Democratic boss, James J. Hines, these gangsters, thru their political henchmen, were the actual rulers of lawless New York. This record of their depredations is taken from the book "Gang Rule in New York."

Hines was then the most powerful of the Tammany Hall leaders. He dominated the city's dominant party. But he was in turn the servant of the city's dominant racketeers. So it was that a group of gunmen were the overlords of New York, able to subvert the civil government of the city to serve their ends; well-nigh immune from prosecution under its laws and rich from their criminal enterprises.

Frankie Yale and Joe Adonis; Louis Lepke and Gurrah Jake; Buggsy Siegel and Meyer Lansky; Frankie Costello and Owney the Killer; Joe the Boss and Lucky Luciano; Dutch Schultz and Dutch Goldberg; such were the names of the men who ran a town of 7,000,000 persons much as they wished to and laughed at controls by elected officials. Some officials they made; others they broke.

All of these gangsters owed their success to politics. They were nurtured by the very democratic processes of government which they turned to their profit once they were strong enough to seize control of them.

It was that last fact that made the downfall of Hines in 1939 almost an anticlimax. There was Hines, a man whose nod made judges and prosecutors out of clubhouse lawyers; whose reaches of influence extended even to the White House. Yet, stripped of the glamor and glory of a position he had achieved thru politics, he was only a paid hireling of a thug named Arthur Flegenheimer who was known under the name of Schultz. This Schultz didn't hire Hines because he wanted to do him a favor or because he liked him; he hired him because he wanted the use of Hines' power. And Hines did not sell to Schultz because of affection; he sold because the bargain brought him the money and the strength to maintain that political machine on which his own power rested.

Thru the years covered in this chronicle Hines was a man known to Broadway as a power. If a waiter wanted a job in a night club he could get it from Hines. If a little fellow needed a fix in a courtroom for something or other he could get it from Hines. If as a bluff or in dead earnest a gangster wanted to authenticate his power to extort money from a merchant he used the magic name of Hines. There was no limit to this. His was a dark name that was bruited over speakeasy bars, in quiet corners, everywhere that men who presumed to know their way around gathered, and always it meant that intangible but very real thing—the power to control the government; to break policemen; to order prosecutors and judges around.

Until District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey brought him low, the man seemed invincible. He knew that these and even worse things were said about him, and still he went about his business unconcerned. Investigators probed his affairs time after time and came back with empty hands. "Hines is too shrewd to leave a record behind him," they said. It seemed to be true. When he was caught it had to be on the word of men like George (Continued on page nine.)

IT IS DURING a tense moment in the Rose bowl. University of California's 1923 varsity is on the defensive. Washington and Jefferson has the ball. It is snapped. A husky California guard breaks thru the W. and J. line, heads for the runner. Another Californian stumbles, knocks the big guard to the ground. That guard is carried to the side lines and into football retirement. His spinal column has been fractured.

When the doctors told him, "From now on nothing more strenuous for you than playing the piano," Horace Heidt took it philosophically. He had been a champion athlete in many sports at Culver academy and California, but that was over. He also was a musician, and a showman. That was just ahead.

When he had recovered from his injury (he eventually went thru eight operations on that spine), Horace Heidt organized his band. With collegiate enthusiasm he billed it as "The Greatest Band in the World." The Hotel Claremont in Berkeley, Cal., took a chance anyway, and by dint of personal salesmanship the Heidt band caught on.

HERE ARE THE WORDS TO "LOVE'S OLD SWEET SONG"

Once in the dear dead days beyond recall,
When on the world the mists began to fall,
Out of the dreams that rose in happy throng
Low to our hearts love sung an old sweet song;
And in the dusk where fell the firelight gleam,
Softly it wove itself into our dream.

CHORUS

Just a song at twilight, when the lights are low,
And the flick'ring shadows softly come and go;
Tho the heart be weary, sad the day and long,
Still to us at twilight comes love's old song,
Comes love's old sweet song.

Something in his makeup, however, turned Heidt toward the stage and showmanship. He added some circus novelties, and his world-famous trained dog, Lobo, and went east. The road was smooth, for soon he had landed a job in New York's Palace theater, and set a long-time record by staying seven weeks. Europe beckoned, and Heidt's crew went to Monte Carlo. Back in America, he played a three-year stretch on the stage of San Francisco's Golden Gate theater and then started touring again. A frequent visitor to Chicago stages, he also has scored hits as a dance band in such places as the Drake hotel's Gold Coast room.

Heidt is not satisfied with mere adherence to any particular musical tradition. He'll try anything if it gives promise of being effective showmanship. He was one of the earliest sponsors of the electric guitar and the syncopated harp. At one time he had a feminine sextet. His followers are never quite sure just what sort of a show it will be next time this energetic musical man comes around, but they feel certain it will be different.

They know their applause will reach a new Heidt.

The Tribune Pioneers in Pictures!

By GUY MURCHIE JR.

LOOK at the front page of our Picture Section today and see them for yourself. The fashion pictures shown there are products of the very latest technique in color photography worked out by the Tribune color studio staff—an achievement in color fidelity previously unknown in newspaper illustration.

Along with a wirephoto system that now enables Tribune photographers to wire their pictures direct to Tribune Tower over ordinary telephone wires from any part of the world, a truck with a 16-foot-high platform for use in crowds, an elaborate picture filing system that goes back some 35 years, "Big Bertha" cameras that can make a putout on the other side of the baseball diamond look ten feet away, and other innovations, the new color technique is an indication of The Tribune's continued leadership in all aspects of photography.

The purpose of this article is to describe the highlights of the more important of these new devices which bring the news fronts of the world pictorially to your breakfast table with greater vividness and accuracy year by year.

Of course, most small cameras can take color pictures by using color film, which is really shift plates. Each plate now had its own color filter attached to it, making it no longer necessary to change filters in front of the lens, and the three plates could be pushed along a single track like a train of cars, taking their exposures in turn. This invention cut the time during which the subject had to hold still to four seconds—but of course photographing any moving object in color was still out of the question.

A German named Bermphol invented the first snapshot three-plate color camera and sent one to The Tribune in 1936. It could take three perfectly coördinated pictures at one snap of the shutter and thru a single set of lenses. The unique feature of this camera was a set of two transparent reflectors which have the property of reflecting part of the light which strikes them while allowing the rest to pass thru them. Tilted at an angle, the first reflector reflects about one-third of the light to one side, where the light focuses upon one of the film plates, covered by a filter which transmits only the desired color. The remaining two-thirds of the light passes thru the first reflector to the second, which is tilted at a different angle in order to reflect another third of the light to a second film plate filtered for another color. The final third of the light, having passed thru both transparent reflectors, goes direct to the third film plate, similarly filtered for the third color. Thus the camera actually takes three pictures at once thru the same lens.

Since 1936, however, the Tribune color studio has progressed a long way. Its photographers and technicians have learned a lot about color photography—so much, in fact, that they have three layers of film in one, but such film is not practical for newspaper reproduction. The process of high-speed printing requires a color photo to be put on the paper by at least three plates, each covered with a different colored ink—normally red, yellow, blue, and usually black for emphasizing the darkest areas. Therefore a color camera is needed that can take three pictures at once, each one with a different colored light. The inventors long ago set to work to produce such a camera.

The best early work on this problem seems to have been done in Germany. About the year 1921 The Tribune acquired a color camera of German make, but its use was limited to still life, because it could take the three necessary pictures only by three separate exposures, with a shift of plates and color filters between each. If a human subject were being photographed he or she had to hold absolutely still for 10 or 15 seconds while the photographer hurriedly made his shifts.

By 1923 Godfrey Lundberg of The Tribune improved the German camera with a patented slide frame in the back. This device made it much easier to shared in developing the new three-plate color camera which they now use for all their most difficult shots. This camera, built to order, is approximately six times as fast as the older Bermphol camera already described. It is lighter, easier to carry, and its transparent reflectors are of an aluminum-coated membrane that looks something like cellophane and transmits light better than Bermphol's silvered glass reflectors. More important than that, the balance between the amounts of light that reach the three film plates is adjusted so that the fastest films made can be used in the camera and it is no longer necessary to import special film from Germany at high price and low sensitivity. Film magazines holding 12 cut films for each color are another of the principal improvements on the camera, making it possible to take shots at intervals of two or three seconds and putting newspaper color photography almost on the speed level of newspaper black-and-white photography.

Speaking of photographic speed, The Tribune is approaching the absolute limit with its new private wirephoto system.

In the last four decades the transmission of its news pictures has successively progressed from the pace of the flying hoof—to the rolling wheel—to the swiftness of wings on the wind—to the speed of light. Nineteen twenty-one seems to have been the first year in which The Tribune used airplanes for carrying news pictures across the continent. On July 2 of that year the Dempsey-Carpentier fight was staged in Jersey City, and The Tribune used two airplanes in transporting photographs taken at the ringside to Chicago in time to scoop its rivals in the next morning's early editions. In the succeeding few years many a plucky pilot battled a night sky carrying a load of precious news pictures to Chicago in time for a Tribune deadline.

A substitute method of speedy transmission of pictures in the '20s was sending them over a telegraph wire in the form of code drawings. The result was not a wire photograph, but a hand-drawn reproduction of a photograph. A sort of gridiron of fine crisscross lines was placed over a photograph and each vertical and horizontal line numbered. Then a man in the telegraphic sending station would wire the artist in the receiving station at Tribune Tower, telling him how to draw his copy of the photograph—directing his pencil from point to point on the gridiron, as "23-09 to 24-12 to 25-14," etc. The crude result could later be polished up by the artist into a fairly passable reproduction of the original photograph.

About the year 1923 The Tribune helped develop an automatic wirephoto machine. It was crude, but a big step ahead in speed. The photograph to be sent was first etched into a copper plate in the form of straight lines of varying thickness by the regular photo-engraving process. Then the plate was smeared with a nonconductor substance which stuck in the depressed lines but was wiped away from the rest of the surface. The transmitter needle recorded the picture by touching every point on the line engraving in a long spiral as the engraving revolved on a cylinder, the current automatically being cut off as the needle crossed the nonconductor material. On the receiving end of the machine another needle traveled over a piece of paper on a corresponding cylinder. This paper was coated with an emulsion sensitive to electricity, thus producing a brown spot whenever the sending needle picked up electricity from the copper and making a rough copy of the original photograph.

The modern wirephoto machine works on something of the same principle but is simpler, more rapid, and is accurate to such a degree that you can seldom notice the difference between an ordinary photograph and a wired photograph as you see them printed in your morning paper. A photographic print to be wired is wrapped around a cylinder in a metal box. An electric eye in the box rapidly scans the whole photographic print, point by point, line by line, as it revolves on the cylinder—the eye reacting to the amount of light reflected from the paper and transmitting it over a wire in the form of a varying current. The variations in the current in the wire, after spanning the hundreds or thousands of miles to Chicago, activate a tiny light bulb in the receiver box in Tribune Tower so that the volume of light the bulb sheds exactly corresponds to the volume of light reflected at that instant by the part of the original photographic print being "seen" by the eye. As you may have guessed, the receiver box in Tribune Tower is a sort of camera which retakes the original photograph. It contains a film wrapped around a cylinder just as the photographic print was wrapped around a cylinder at the other end of the wire. And as this receiver cylinder revolves at the same speed as the cylinder in the sending box, the varying light bulb passes over its surface, exposing the film to just the amount of light needed to re-create the original picture. When the film from the receiving box has been developed and printed in the normal manner an almost exact duplicate of the original has been produced.

This wire transmission process takes only eight minutes for the average sized picture, and it can be done over any telephone

Looking at Hollywood with Ed Sullivan

Judith Anderson Is Typed—in a Profitable Way

Hollywood.

JUDITH ANDERSON, accomplished actress of the legitimate theater, finally clicked out here because she was given the rôle of the steely housekeeper in "Rebecca." If it was perfect casting on the part of Dave Selznick, it was also the most fortuitous of breaks for Judith, because the experience of the movies has demonstrated that a player who becomes typed as a "menace" has a long and profitable career ahead of her. Miss Anderson, a star on the stage, possibly will resent the now obvious fact that the movies have typed her as a "heavy," but actually this "typing" is not as bad as it appears on the surface.

It is a fact that the meanies of the screen go on and on long after the stars have faded from view. Miss Anderson's cultured menace will be operative for a good many celluloid years, because in "Rebecca" there is no doubt that she scared the life out of you. Her tiptoed passage thru the picture was more alarming and frightening than if she had raged and ranted or exploded revolver shots. It wasn't so much what she did, but what you inferred she might do, that was scary.

It is the first time a performer has achieved a quality of menace by simply folding her hands. That's what Miss Anderson accomplished, but if those folded hands had concealed a hooded cobra the alarm could not have been more intense or the fear more emphatic. There is something about a lovely woman that is more fearsome than the most sinister of men, providing that loveliness has an evil connotation. In "The Cat and the Canary," the remake, recall if you will the statuesque Gale Sondergaard. Without raising her voice she lifted the skin on the back of your scalp. The fact that she was a striking looking woman only stressed the terror she provoked on those sudden,

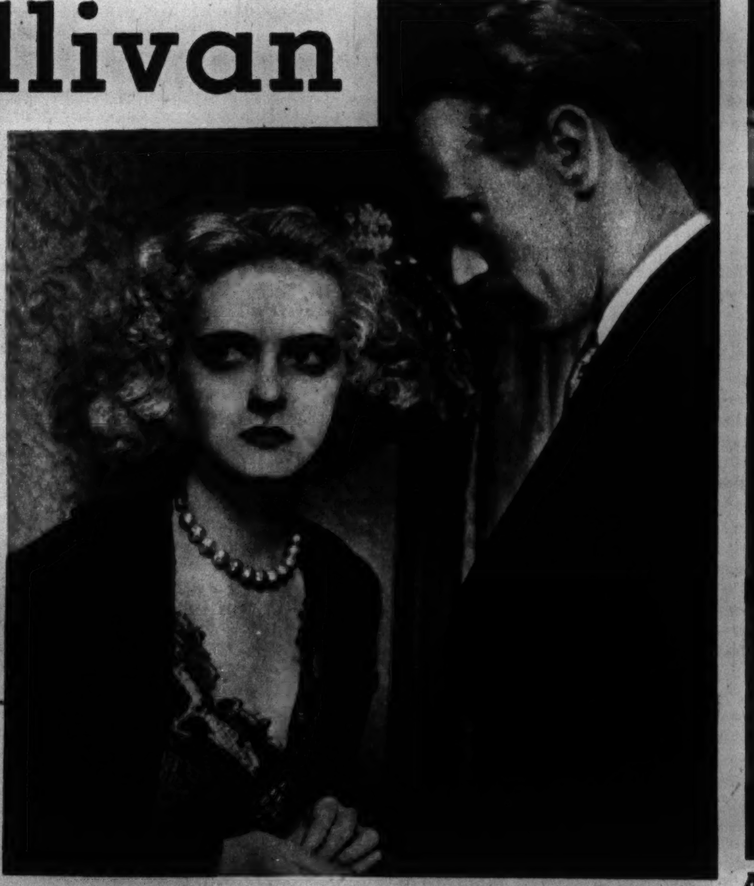
It's always been so, on the stage or in pictures. "Menaces" invariably are actorproof rôles. And when you give an expert performer a rôle of this catalog the results are immediate.

Bette Davis, of course, is the most illustrious example of what dramatic strength there is when a good little girl plays bad little girl rôles on the screen. Kid performers have had the same experience. Mitzi Green became famous for her bratty "I know a secret, I know a secret" in one of her first pictures. Bonita Granville, slapping and pinching other little girls, won a measure of renown far greater than that enjoyed by girl performers who behaved themselves and acted like perfect little ladies. The Dead End Kids would have had no future as choir boys, but as little hellions they did very nicely for themslves. Virginia Weidler won her first fame as a precocious brat. Mickey Rooney would not have become as famous as he is if he had been given gentlemanly rôles. The audience went for him because he acted like a real boy. Conversely, Bobby Breen, attempting to be boyish without any real feeling for it, always has irritated the life out of this reporter.



Bette Davis and Leslie Howard in "Of Human Bondage." This type of "heavy" role has been a boon to Bette. (Acme photo.)

On a wider scale, you can consider the success of such menacing characters as Basil Rathbone, George Raft, Humphrey Bogart, Brian Donlevy, Barton MacLane, and others who act monstrously.

Clark Gable's first important step along the highroad to movie fame was as a "heavy." He was comparatively unknown when he got the chance to play the mobster in Joan Crawford's "Dance, Fools, Dance." It was a particularly juicy part. It was the sort of gangster who topped off the slaughter of a rival mob by seating himself at the piano in his living room and soothing himself with snatches of Bach and Beethoven. Charles Laughton first commanded attention on the New York stage with his portrayal of the ghoulish, fat-cheeked murderer in "Payment Deferred."

I citė these instances for the benefit of Judith Anderson, who is troubled now because Hollywood has typed her. True enough, she has been typed, but it is the sort of typing that leads to a lot of money and a great deal of movie fame. I assume that she is interested in both of these essentials.

Gems of American Eloquence

● American eloquence has played an important part in the history of our country. From a long list of famous speeches The Tribune is selecting gems of American eloquence which are being presented in this, the Graphic Section, every Sunday. The content of these speeches is important both historically and politically. Persons learning to speak in public will find in them helpful lessons. Speakers and writers can learn a great deal from studying their style. This is the forty-sixth of the series.

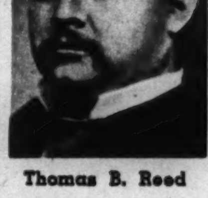
THOMAS BRACKETT REED of Maine as an orator and statesman had few peers. Serving in the national house of representatives for 22 years, six of which he was speaker of the house, he attained marked distinction in connection with governmental affairs. When William McKinley and William Jennings Bryan were opposing each other for the presidency in 1896 Reed spoke frequently in support of the Republican candidate and against Bryan and the bimetalism plank which he favored. A notable address was that delivered by Reed at Old Orchard, Me., on Aug. 25, 1896, an excerpt from which follows:



Thomas B. Reed

". . . If you believe, as I do, that the world is better than it was, and that all the discomforts of modern life are but a fair price paid for a higher civilization growing ever higher then you must with patience try to understand the temporary evils and seek in good temper to rectify wrongs by good sense.

"Neither loud indignation nor flowery speech, neither great promises nor wild harangues, will help any man out of disaster or any nation out of hard times. Temper will not even untie a shoestring, and the harder you push a rope the more it will not go anywhither.

"What are the causes of prosperity, and what are the causes of panic? Are they mysterious things beyond human ken? If you will analyze them you will find that whatever the remote causes are—and they are different every time—the immediate cause of prosperity is the confidence of all the people in each other and in the situation and in the future. When the people all work together, when they all have faith in each other, then prosperity reigns.

"After prosperity reigns for some time, longer or shorter, people think that hard times are permanently done away with, and get wild, and overprosperity sets in. Then some wise men earlier than others see that the world cannot absorb all that is made, cannot permanently support all the enterprises which the overconfidence of men has set in motion, and begin to doubt, to refuse discounts, to hoard money, and call a halt to speculation. Then the distrust spreads, and panic and hard times follow. Then we set to work to climb out of our troubles, and the process is slow. While we are climbing out we suffer. What a lovely period that climbing out season is for quack doctors in finance and professors of oratory!

"How they swarm!"

Clearly the speaker of the foregoing lines had no need to rise to heights of eloquence to emphasize his points. All that was necessary for him to do in attacking the visionary ideas of Bryan was to stick to common-sense arguments—arguments that are just as sound today as they were 44 years ago. When Reed pointed out that prosperity depended upon public confidence, that public distrust contributed greatly to panics, and that hard times were those times when quack doctors of finance were most active, he was speaking a language that many people today understand.

Reprints of the first 25 "Gems of Eloquence" may be obtained at Tribune Public Service Offices, Tribune Tower or 1 South Dearborn street, Chicago. Price, 25 cents for portfolio of 25, or 2 cents each for individual selections.

The World's Fastest Climbing Airplane

(Acme photos.)

Interceptor Pursuit Ship for Air Raid Defense

By WAYNE THOMIS

THE OLD IDEA of the all-purpose pursuit airplane has disappeared and in its place the United States army—like those of European powers—has decided that several single-seat fighting types are needed. There are the escort-fighters, the patrol-fighters, and the interceptor-fighters. The airplane illustrated here is one of the new interceptor-fighters that have just been placed in production by the Curtiss-Wright corporation at its St. Louis, Mo., plant.

The airplane is being built to an order received from an unnamed foreign government. It is known that Curtiss-Wright recently sold a large order of trainers, which have essentially the same lines as this pursuit airplane, to the Turkish government. At any rate the machine is a good example of the modern conception of an interceptor type and lends itself to comparisons with the all-purpose fighters such as the Curtiss P-36 and the Republic EP-1.

The chief difference between these latter two types of airplanes and the Curtiss interceptor—it is designated the CW-21—is in its rate of climb. Because its chief duties are those of intercepting raiding bombers from a standing start on the ground, the plane has been given an exceptional rate of climb—one would almost say phenomenal. Its armament, speed, range, and weight have been trimmed to achieve the 4,800-feet-per-minute climb with which it is credited. This is close to a mile a minute.

Compare this with the 2,600 feet per minute of the Republic (formerly Seversky) EP-1, which has the same motor as the P-36. The CW-21's performance is all the more remarkable because it is achieved with an 1,100-horsepower Cyclone engine, while the EP-1 and the P-36 have the 1,200-horsepower twin-row engines of Pratt & Whitney. The ratings in both instances are takeoff.

Weight of the CW-21 is 4,180 pounds gross. That is with full tanks of 96 gallons of fuel and full military load, including pilot. The P-36 grosses 5,800 pounds and the EP-1 some 300 pounds less. Range of the CW-21 is 530 miles, or about two hours at cruising speed. Wide open the CW-21's engine would drink its tanks dry after 1 hour 15 minutes, while both the other two pursuit planes have range of 900 miles with 120 gallons of fuel and more than 1,000 with 150 gallons, which is optional.

As for top speed, the CW-21 is five miles an hour slower than the all-purpose pursuits. Its maximum is reached at 17,000 feet, where speed is 315 miles an hour. The P-36 and the EP-1 both are credited with top speeds of 320 miles an hour, and Republic is guaranteeing a top speed of 315 miles an hour for each one of the 100-odd planes that are being built for Sweden. That is quite a guarantee.

This airplane is one of the simplest of the modern high-speed military types. Its cockpit is swept clean of every non-essential gadget. The ideal is to equip the pilot with the essential stick and rudder controls, a throttle, and his guns. It is impossible to gain modern performance with a ship quite as simple as this, but Curtiss-Wright engineers are heading in that direction, away from the complications of hundreds of engine, radio, navigation, and blind-flight instruments.

Looking down on new ship, showing extremely slender fuselage.

The CW-21 is the type of airplane that the British and German designers turned out in the Hawker Hurricanes and Supermarine Spitfires of England and the Heinkel 112 and Messerschmitt 109s of the Nazi air forces. None of these airplanes is reported to have the high rate of climb of the CW-21, altho all of them are considerably faster. The Hurricanes are suposed to do 335 and the Spitfire 370. Both the German planes are rated to do about 360 miles an hour. All four have rates of climb of about 3,000 feet per minute.

To point the illustration in relation to the change in conception of duties for pursuit airplanes it can be said that the CW-21 is primarily a defensive pursuit plane. It is to be kept at flying fields near cities or other logical targets for bombers. When raiders are detected it is sent off to find and engage them before they reach their targets.

In contrast to this purely defensive function, the patrol-fighter is a longer-range machine capable of taking the offensive against enemy craft encountered at the point of patrol. And the escort-fighter, of course, is a long-range machine that is intended to protect bombers on long-range missions by fighting off the enemy's interceptors and patrol-fighters.

For Baby's Birthday Party

There'll be one candle on a cake for this young man soon, but it will be merely decorative. He'll actually get spinach.

Asparagus custard is nutritious, tempting to look at, and good to eat. It's a choice main dish for children.

By MARY MEADE

A ONE-YEAR-OLD'S birthday party may be fun for mamma and for the several other mammas invited with their tots, but it's just another day in the lives of the babes. For instead of party food the youngsters get the regular supper of fruit, chopped vegetables, scraped beef patty, and milk.

That's as it should be. First and even second birthday parties shouldn't upset a baby's menu pattern. Even for an older child care should be taken not to serve rich food or food with too many fancy "frills."

And birthday party food should always come at the child's regular mealtime, which usually means at 12 or 6 o'clock. Mammas may eat later if it's more convenient that way, and may have a supplemented or changed menu.

The older a youngster grows the more nearly his diet approximates that of an adult, of course. But young children, say nutritionists and pediatricians, shouldn't be fed fried or highly spiced foods, shouldn't have pastries, rich cakes and puddings, very sweet or very fatty edibles. They should get plenty of cooked and raw vegetables and fruits, eggs, cereal, milk, meats like beef, liver, lamb, chicken, and bacon. And they should have plenty of variety, for childhood is the time to inculcate good eating habits.

The casseroled hot dish in the picture is suitable for a child's party. It contains asparagus, milk, and eggs, a healthful combination and a delicious one. To complete the menu mother might serve toasted tomato sandwiches, carrot curls, milk, fruit sponge cake, and ice cream. Colorful dishes and table setting and candles on the cake if it is a birthday cake add enough gayety to make it a party occasion.

A simple way to make the asparagus custard is with concentrated asparagus soup. To a can of it add a can of milk and three slightly beaten eggs. Pour into a casserole or custard cups and bake at 325 degrees until set. The test for doneness is the old one, using a silver knife. When the knife is inserted and comes out clean the custard is ready.

Tapioca puddings are suitable desserts even for the very young child, altho chocolate sauce and whipped cream should probably be omitted if he's under 3 or 4 years of age. A soft custard sauce may be substituted if a sauce seems to be necessary.

Scalloped chicken or lamb, new peas, buttered beets, turnip sticks or raw caulifowerets, lettuce sandwiches, and milk might precede the tapioca pudding for another children's supper menu on a party occasion. Color, texture, and flavor contrasts make this a particularly attractive meal for little ones.

CAKES IMPROVED 3 WAYS! Thousands of cakes we made with all sorts of shortenings proved that Crisco cakes were lighter and higher—up to 15% higher, depending on the type of cake. And Crisco cakes were much more tender!

No more batters that separate

Weapons of Early Man Found

● The artifacts discussed in the accompanying article are on exhibit in one of the windows of the Chicago Tribune Public Service office at Madison and Dearborn streets.

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

IF THE skilfully shaped fragments of stone shown in the accompanying illustration could talk they doubtless would tell an amazing story—a story that might go far toward clearing up the mystery of man in North America.

These spearheads, points, knives, or whatever one chooses to call them, were fashioned by primitive men who roamed the Canadian wilderness an eon ago. To this day these men have not been definitely identified as to tribal groupings or linguistic stock, altho it seems certain that they were Indians and that they were hunting people rather than tillers of the soil. In other words, they were simple savages who subsisted by following the migrations of the game herds, slaying their quarry to keep their camps supplied with food.

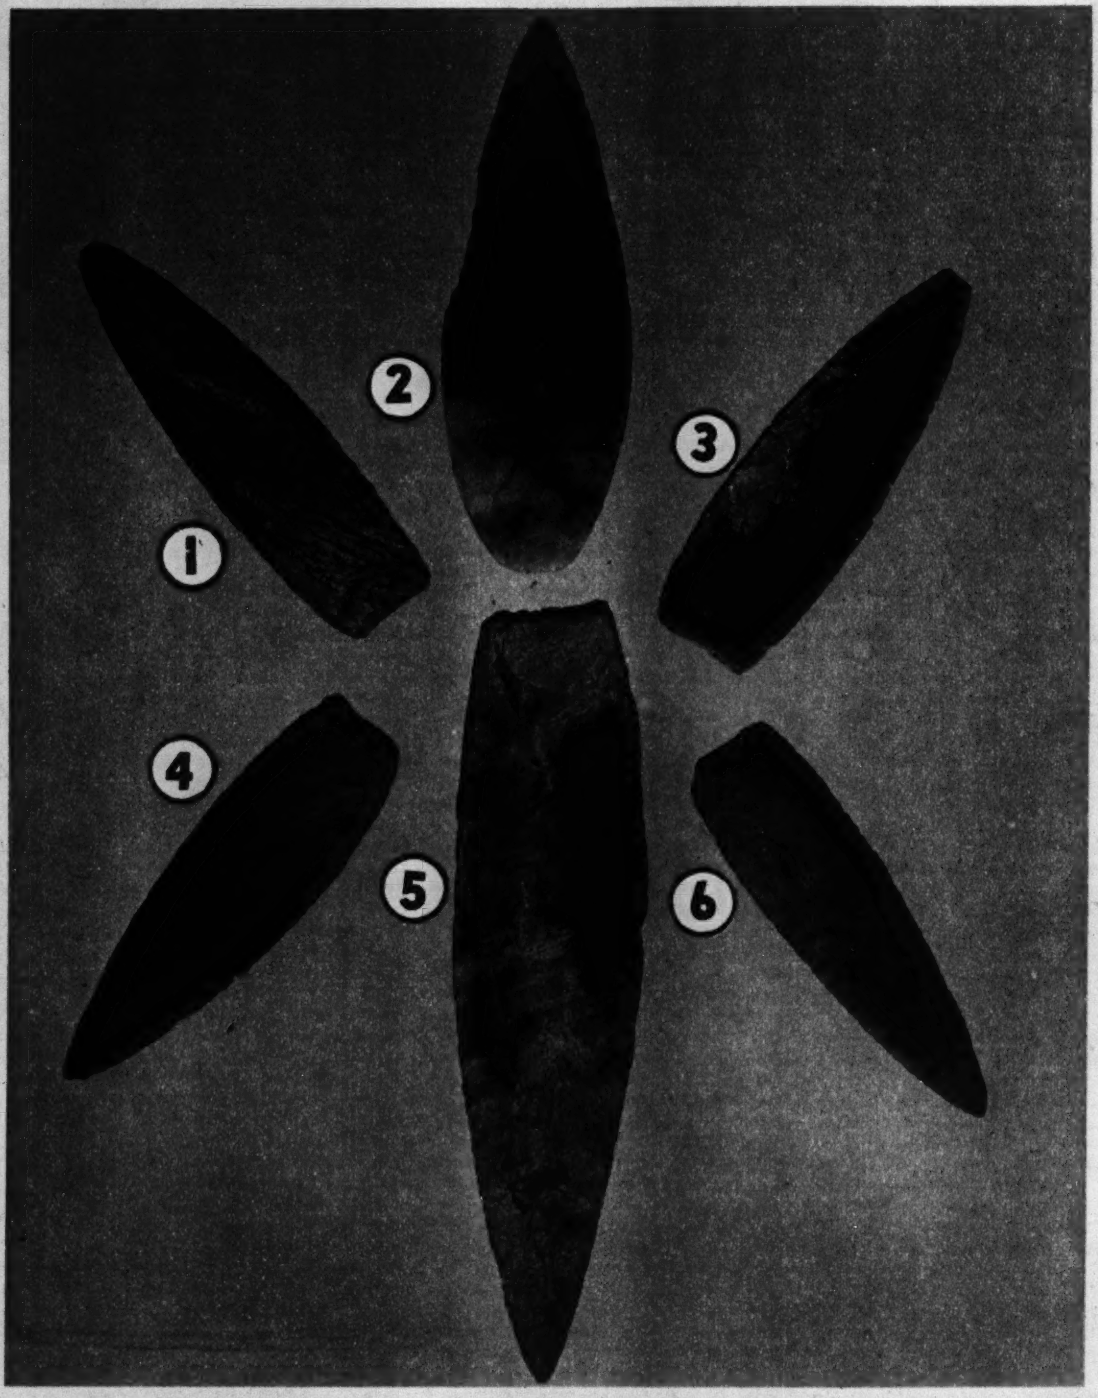
Since these early people were equipped with weapons only such as those shown in the picture, they had to seize every advantage in order to kill their game. A herd of caribou neck deep in a river crossing would present easy marks. A moose trapped in a bog would be felled under a shower of spears. A she-bear incumbered with cubs would stand and fight and thus become a fair target for the spear throwers. Large prehistoric animals such as the mammoth, mastodon, saber-toothed tiger, and the like are believed to have disappeared long before the time of the Indians who made these spearheads. Primitive tho these weapons were, they were extremely sharp when first made and before they had been affected by contact with the earth or exposure to rain and snow.

The six artifacts under discussion here were found not long ago in the vicinity of Havre St. Pierre, on the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, just opposite Anticosti Island and some distance northeast of Shelter Bay and Baie Comeau, on the properties of the Ontario Paper company, an affiliate of The Chicago Tribune.



The six artifacts found near Havre St. Pierre. The numbers are referred to in the article.

Shown first to the directors of the museums of Quebec and Montreal, they eventually were examined by E. L. Judah, curator of the ethnological museum of McGill university of Montreal. Mr. Judah estimated that the specimens were roughly from 500 to 1,000 years old, having been made at some uncertain time after the last glacial period in North America. Assuming that Mr. Judah is correct in his estimate of the age of these specimens, they were produced some time between the remote days of Erik Thorvaldson, the discoverer of Greenland, and those of Christopher Columbus, the discoverer of America, and about a century before Jacques Cartier, the celebrated Breton navigator, sailed up the St. Lawrence river, passing not far from the spot where the spearheads were found.

The specimens, according to Mr. Judah, consist of two throwing spearheads shaped from labradorite (numbered 1 and 3 in the picture), one edged or skinning stone of quartz (numbered 2), two volcanic rock throwing spearheads (numbered 4 and 6), and one volcanic rock stabbing spearhead (numbered 5).

Sharat K. Roy, curator of geology of the Field Museum of Natural History of Chicago, on being shown the specimens, identified them geologically as follows. Numbers 1 and 3, rhyolite, a form of volcanic rock; number 2, quartz; and numbers 4, 5, and 6, felsite, another form of volcanic rock.

Alexander Spoehr, assistant curator of American ethnology of Field museum, found in the fine technique used in flaking the spearheads a similarity to that of the so-called Yuma points of New Mexico, made by the Indians of that region shortly after the last glacial period. According to him, they are excellent examples of workmanship, the two largest specimens being of unusual size for points of this type and much larger than most of the Yuma points.

It required a great amount of skill to produce implements or weapons of this sort from stone. First it was necessary in most instances to shape them roughly by chipping them out with other pieces of rock. The fine edge was produced by the use of a bone pressure instrument which slowly flaked off small particles of the stone. It was essential that the workman who made them should know the nature of the rock with which he worked and just how and where it would flake out under the edge of the pressure tool.

When Worming for Tape, Round (ascarid) and Hook Worms
You Cannot Worm Your Dog WRONG
.. if you follow the sound "no-guess," commonsense Pulvex Worming Method

The Pulvex Worming Method (embodied in every package of Pulvex Combination Treatment Worm Capsules) insures your worming your dog properly for those worms . . . even though you've had no worming experience. It is so sure that many breeders of champion dogs say the Pulvex Worming Method is the method the average dog owner should use. Here's why—

Your dog can have Tape, Round (ascarid), Hook or any combination of those worms at the same time. Your dog should, therefore, always be wormed for all those worms whenever you worm him.

Contrary to common belief, no single-type capsule made can expel all those three worms. Two distinct types of capsules must be used. Each package of Pulvex Capsules contains two types of capsules which, when given a few days apart, will expel Tape, Round (ascarid) or Hook Worms—not just one or two kinds of worms.

Avoid worming your pet wrong for those worms. Worm only with Pulvex Capsules. Packaged two ways: for puppies; for dogs. Either type 50c. At drug, pet, dept. stores.

ASK YOUR DEALER TO SHOW YOU THIS PICTURIZED INSTRUCTION SHEET. IT MAKES WORMING EASY!

Mostly About Dogs

By BOB BECKER

The History of Terrier Group

THE DOGS officially classed as terriers not only are well known to most American dog fanciers but also are prime favorites as companion dogs in many homes. The word terrier is from the Latin word terra, meaning earth. Originally the terriers were very closely associated with the earth, for they "went to earth" to dig for game. For example, the short-legged Sealyham was developed to enter badger dens. For this underground work a dog with short legs, a rather long body, a powerful, muscular build, and a good jaw was necessary. So breeders set about to develop such an "earth dog."

The terrier group today includes some of the most popular breeds seen in homes and in shows. The list of terrier breeds officially classed in what the American Kennel club calls group four is as follows: Airedale, Bedlington, border, bull terrier, Cairn, Dandie Dinmont, fox terrier, Irish, Kerry blue, Lakeland, Lhasa, Manchester, Norwich, schnauzer, Scottish, Sealyham, Skye, Staffordshire, Welsh, and West Highland white. The British Isles have produced a large majority of these breeds, with England, Scotland, and Ireland each contributing outstanding terrier types.

It's not difficult to determine why terriers have won great popularity among dog fanciers. In the first place, they are full of life and extremely alert. Having these qualities, a terrier usually is entertaining. He may not be very dignified, but he has a sense of humor and enjoys a roughhouse. Because of his loyalty and courage the terrier often makes an excellent watchdog.

The Kerry blue breed stands out in the group because of its color, conformation, and origin. The Kerry may be any shade of blue from light to dark. This feature alone makes the breed rather unusual. It originated in Ireland and was first noticed in the mountainous regions of the County Kerry, from which it got its name. Extremely intelligent, a game fighter, and very loyal, the Kerry is a working and utility terrier, having been used in Ireland even for hunting game. Some of them serve as herding dogs for sheep and cattle, and others have been used solely as watchdogs and companions for children. The Kerry weighs around 33 to 38 pounds. A well set up dog, it has plenty of strength.

Altho the tails of most terriers are docked, those of some breeds are carried "natural."

Long View Sensation. Kerry blue terrier owned by Richard Hough of Winnetka, Ill., has won many honors in recent dog shows. Altho the Kerry is not seen on city streets as often as the Scottie and the fox terrier, it has the active, romping personality which is typical of the terrier breeds.

(Ladin photo.)

The miniature pinscher is a small short-haired breed which has gained many new friends in recent years. This is D'Alesio Sir Elgy, a champion owned by Dan D'Alesio of Chicago.

Typical examples of terriers with shortened tails are the wire-haired and smooth fox terriers, Airedale terrier, and Welsh. Among the breeds which do not have docked tails are the Scotty, Cairn, bull terrier, and Dandie Dinmont. Apparently the Scottish dog fanciers never cared for the custom of tail docking in their terrier breeds, for none of the terriers from Scotland have shortened appendages.

One of the most interesting of all the terriers recognized by the American Kennel club today is the Lhasa. This long-coated little dog from Tibet is rather odd in appearance to say the least, but it has an excellent disposition, as we learned last fall when we got acquainted with several of them. In their native land they have been kept in homes as little "sentinel dogs" to bark a warning. We found the Lhasa a gay, rather aggressive little terrier with a winning disposition. The dogs stand around 10 or 11 inches at the shoulder and may be most any color. They have a long coat of hair. The hair on the Lhasa's head drops over the eyes much like that on an Old English sheep dog.

Photography in Tribune

line. If a close deadline required it the Kentucky Derby winner could be photographed at 6 o'clock at Churchill Downs; a print could be put on the wire by 6:10; a reproduced print could be in the photo room in Tribune Tower, Chicago, by 6:25; this could be immediately rushed to the engraving room and put thru the several processes necessary to printing it by about 6:45; and the published picture could be selling on State street less than an hour after it was snapped in Kentucky! If the picture was in color the process would take a couple of hours longer, largely because of the difficulties of preparing for printing by three or four different color plates. Three prints instead of one would have to be wired to Chicago, each representing the values to be given a different color.

To date The Tribune has had a color photograph sent by wire on just one occasion—that of King George and Queen Elizabeth's appearance at the White House garden party last summer. The results, while remarkable as a pioneering step in photographic processes as applied to news pictures, were nothing as compared to the faithful reproduction of news pictures in natural color that you will see in a few years. By then The Tribune's present problems of adapting delicate color plates to high-speed rotary press printing should be solved. The Tribune is being forced to work out its owin problems, because there is no other newspaper progressive enough to do it.

In the case of transoceanic photograph sending, where wires for the purpose are limited, The Tribune is one of the principal owners of a wireless transmission service. This system of sending pictures is similar to the wirephoto method except that radio waves carry the detailed record of light and dark areas on the photograph instead of leaving this to a simple electric current. The problem of static was a serious obstacle to wireless photo transmission, however, until the recent introduction of a frequency oscillator. Since static fortunately does not occur on all frequencies at once, it can be virtually eliminated by a rapid oscillation over a wide range of frequencies.

Another example of a Tribune solution to a problem is the new Tribune photo car, specially designed and built for photographing parades and public events over the heads of crowds by day or night. Its prime feature is a tower which can be raised so that the platform on which the photographers stand is 16 feet above the street. It holds two or three men with their equipment. The lever that operates the hydraulic lifting mechanism for the tower is located on the tower platform itself, so that the photographers on it can raise or lower themselves as occasions require, even while the car is in motion. A telephone permits them to direct the driver below.

The car is really a truck, and the main part of its body is made into a darkroom for emergency or out-of-town use. Three powerful spotlights can illuminate any subject for night photography. Because the tower is really a sort of supertripod that holds the cameramen as well as the cameras, it must be much steadier than it could be while resting on the springs of the car. Therefore a hydraulic jack device firmly connects the tower with the car axle while the car is not in motion, releasing the tower for easier riding when it is time to get moving.

As for The Tribune's camera equipment, it includes, besides the color cameras, everything from a miniature camera with a 76-degree wide-angle lens to a Big Bertha telescopic camera with a lens that takes in about a 6-degree angle. The latter is one of two large cameras, each of which cost about $1,000, and is used primarily for sports pictures. Weighing 50 pounds and mounted on a heavy motion picture tripod like a machine gun, the newest Big Bertha can be placed near third base and shoot a close-up of the batter making a hit—and then, four seconds later, another close-up of the action at first base as the batter reaches it a fiftieth of a second ahead of the ball. The rapid change of focus is made by a sort of gear-shift lever, set ahead of time for the various points where important action will most probably occur. The focal length of this camera's lens is 40 inches, which means that it is one of the most powerful ever produced.

For pictures of personalities in the news The Tribune not only has 31 photographers who regularly go out and snap them—either in color or black and white—but its picture filing system can unearth in a minute the likeness of almost any important person photographed in the last 30 or 40 years. All of which is just another indication of Tribune progressiveness in obtaining the best photographs that can possibly be found to serve its readers.

In the sky chart published in the science department Easter Sunday the words "East" and "West" were inadvertently transposed. The original sketch by Miss Maude Bennot, director of Adler Planetarium, Chicago, correctly indicated the sun as rising in the east.

Lawless New York

Weinberg and Dixie Davis, who had dealt with him.

Thru all these years of dark rumor, he silently went about his business. He gave few interviews. Few men ever heard him raise his voice. He gave orders in quiet tones that made them sound like confidential trivia. He had a deep faith in the peremptory exercise of absolute authority. During his second trial before General Sessions Judge Charles C. Nott Jr., the lawyers got into a technical argument that required the exclusion of the jury. It was midafternoon and there was no hope of finishing the argument that day. Dewey, and Lloyd Paul Stryker, Hines's counsel, suggested that the jurors be excused until the following morning. To this the judge assented.

"What about me?" Hines said to Stryker. The lawyer asked if Hines also might go home. The request was granted.

On his way out of the courtroom, Hines leaned over one of the reporters and whispered:

"See how simple it is—one little word from the judge and I can go home. Why doesn't he say another little word and send me home for good?"

A trivial story but for its implications. It was the way he liked to do business, and did.

The morning half of every day but Sunday was the busy time for Hines. During the years he was at the height of his power, his day started at about 7 a. m. He had his breakfast in bed, was shaved by his personal barber, and at about 8:30 was ready for the daily queue of special favor seekers. These were different from the lowly who had to seek him at the clubhouse on stated nights.

Jubilant Jimmy Hines escorted from the courtroom after mistrial declaration that temporarily halted Thomas E. Dewey's fight to convict political boss.

They had more standing. They were henchmen, minor office holders, persons of special missions. The line passed thru his bedroom. Hines received them in pajamas over which he customarily wore a bright silk dressing gown. Two unlisted telephones were on a stand by his bed. There was always a supply of folding money.

Hines believed in supplying every want that he could. This man wanted a job—Hines put in a telephone call and usually got him one. Another needed money, a loan or a gift, and Hines gave it to him. Now, these lines of importunate people sometimes were 50 long. With them Hines was always brisk, and generally pleasant. Twice during his career, his morning callers became so numerous that other tenants of the apartment houses in which he lived complained of them as constituting a nuisance. Each time Hines moved rather than engender ill feelings.

Many of the problems thus brought to the politician required personal treatment. Hines usually was tubbed, dressed, and out of the house before noon, chasing around in fulfillment of the contracts he had made. Among politicians, an agreement to get a favor done is called a contract. The afternoon usually found him at one of the horse tracks around New York—when the season was on—surrounded by satellites and betting lavishly. He was an inveterate player of long shots. He lost more often than he won, and seldom bet less than $200 or $300 in an afternoon.

Hines, it can be seen, spent, gambled, and gave away money that must, in the course of a year, have reached an enormous sum. All of it did not come from the gangsters he protected, but most of it did. Thus the very people who turned to him for help were, in turn, sold down the river to immune crime.

What kind of man was Hines? And how did he become the power he was? Jimmy Hines' father and his father's father were Tammany election captains. His father, whose name, too, was James, was also a blacksmith. Jimmy was second of 11 children.

No record remains of the kind of pupil Jimmy was in the public schools to which he went, but the scant facts available make it plain that formal education held no lure for him.

Jimmy was not yet 14 when he began to spend most of his out of school time in his father's smithy. He unhitched horses and led them to be shod; hitched them and led them away when the work was done. He came early to an appreciation of the fact that politics was a source of revenue to a politician, because his father's political connections brought that blacksmith a steady income from a contract with the police and fire departments.

From this early start Hines began the upward climb that landed him on top. He fought every step of the way and with every weapon available, including his own two fists. He grew up in a system in which ward politicians placed a heavy dependence upon the services of gangsters at primary and election time. Hoodlums, jailbirds and all the riffraff of a congested city found ready employment on election or primary days with the district bosses. They "got out the vote." They "voted the gravestones." They protected the vote frauds.

Soon Jimmy took over his father's small enterprises, becoming a blacksmith and a political canvasser. When his father became ill and retired, the younger Hines assumed control of his shop and his election district. That was in 1892. He was then 17 years old. He could not even vote as yet, but already he held more political power than many a man with the citizen's franchise. He was a proficient street brawler and was twice taken into a magistrate's court for street fighting. The records of those two early arrests cannot now be found—Hines thinks they were in 1897, the year in which he attained his majority—and in both of those encounters with the law he was discharged.

A more serious legal charge against him was made in that same year by the parents of a young woman who felt that she had been wronged. It seems she spent a week-end in a hotel room with the budding young collector of votes, and thereafter a demand was made that stalwart young Jimmy marry the girl. Hines refused to do it. An assault charge was lodged against him, but this, too, went out the window of the local courtroom, and Hines' police record thereafter was free of blemish until the time, more than 40 years later, when he was tried and convicted by District Attorney Dewey.

In the year 1907 Hines closed out his bank account and never again deposited any money in any bank in his own name. He already knew what some of his colleagues never learned, that a smart bookkeeper could make a damning witness out of a ledger sheet and canceled checks.

Jimmy Hines finally fought his way to the top of municipal politics, only to find that he had to share the command with gangster generals who had hired out their troops to him. He attained top flight in 1921 as the golden era for the gunmen of New York was just beginning. Thereafter he and some of the other district leaders of the city became the henchmen of criminals, rather than criminals being henchmen of theirs.

Here are some of the boys to whom Hines was of service in his long career:

Owen Madden, a dealer in rum and beer and a power in racketeering in the laundry and coal industries, a night club owner, and owner of pugilists;

William Vincent Dwyer, notorious as a rum runner, a racketeer with silent partnership in Owney Madden's beer interests, owner of race tracks, a silent partner in night clubs;

Charles (Lucky) Luciano, as head of the Unione Siciliane one of the top men in the narcotics, liquor, Italian lottery, and prostitution rackets, as well as in fencing stolen goods;

Arnold Rothstein, financier-at-large to the world of crime, with special ties to gambling, narcotics, and fencing.

George McManus, a gambler, accused of the murder of Rothstein; he was tried and acquitted. Like Rothstein he was a member of the Hines political club; unlike Rothstein, he grew up in Hines' district.

John Thomas Diamond, nicknamed "Legs" Diamond, a first class gunman but second class racketeer, who worked in the alcohol, night club, and narcotics trade.

II.

Jack Diamond, notorious west side gangster, got back to New York in 1921 after a two year term in a federal penitentiary for stealing from his buddies in the army. He had enlisted as a way of avoiding prosecutions he was facing in March and April of 1918 for robbery and grand larceny. The plan worked. Both cases against him were thrown out when it was learned that the hoodlum had turned hero and volunteered to fight for his country. Diamond, however, couldn't give up his thieving habits. He stole a lot of things around the camp to which he was sent, and in 1919 he was court-martialed and imprisoned.

His brother, Eddie, meanwhile, had stayed at home and was doing well in the bootlegging and fur and silk robbery business. Of the two Diamond boys, Eddie was, if possible, the tougher and more ruthless. They organized a mongrel gang that dealt in narcotics, stolen silks and furs, and, of course, in rum.

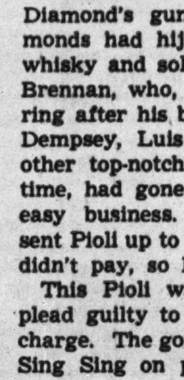
There never was anything snobbish about the Diamond boys, and when they went out looking for tough playmates for their gangs they didn't care about their nationalities. They got all kinds of fellows, and all had to be rough. The mob at one time or another included such figures as Dutch Schultz, then known by his right name of Flegenheimer; Luciano, Eugene Moran, and others.

Eddie maintained his headquarters in the Penn Post hotel, a fourth rate lodging house across from the Pennsylvania station. From there he ran what has been called the first "modern" mob in postwar New York. Skill developed by the Diamond mob in hijacking liquor and silk trucks led to still more dangerous ventures and members of the gang took on the robbery of mail trucks as well.

Diamond and his gang were in and out of the hands of the police any number of times in the years between 1921 and 1925. But, for the most part, that was all that it amounted to. They—the Diamond brothers, John Montforte, and a thug named Edward Doyle—were arrested for a $100,000 mail truck robbery in June, 1924, but the witnesses claimed they could not identify any of them.

On the day that Diamond was discharged in that case by Magistrate Charles Oberwager, because of the failure of the witnesses, William J. (Bill) Brennan, the prize fighter, was killed in his Tia Juana club away up on Manhattan's west side. The murder was committed by Babe Pioli, one of the more stupid of Legs Diamond's gunmen. The Diamonds had hijacked a load of whisky and sold $2,500 of it to Brennan, who, out of the prize ring after his battles with Jack Dempsey, Luis Firpo, and the other top-notch fighters of the time, had gone into the speakeasy business. Jack Diamond sent Pioli up to collect. Brennan didn't pay, so Pioli killed him.



Arnold Rothstein

This Pioli was permitted to plead guilty to a manslaughter charge. The gorilla came out of Sing Sing on parole in a few years, after which he murdered his own brother in an argument over a half dollar. After that the electric chair got him.

The Diamonds, untouched, cut a wide figure around town for a while, backed by the money and political power of Rothstein. Rothstein paid their hotel bills, furnished apartments for Eddie at the cost of several thousand dollars, saw that they got bail bonds when they needed them—and lawyers, too—and relied on them to look after some of the retail aspects of his thriving narcotics trade.

In the two years and six months that followed the so-called "Hotsy Totsy club murders," at 1721 Broadway on the night of July 13, 1929, until he was slain, Dec. 18, 1931, Jack Diamond was the very symbol of a gangland shooter.

This was partly because Legs succeeded in getting himself shot up badly four times during his brief career. It was in some measure because he made himself conspicuous around Broadway so that "the whole town knew him."

It was in large measure because Diamond and some of the minor "torpedoes" in his employ shot into eternity an appalling number of other gangsters, and were generally known thruout the underworld to have killed them, tho the law, peculiarly, seemed unable to pin a murder charge on Legs or his principal subalterns.

Legs was responsible for the murder of a bootlegger named Joe Noe (pronounced Joey Noey), who was an early partner of Dutch Schultz. That one killing was enough to make a man's life precarious, for Schultz was not only Noe's partner but Noe's friend, and he was known even then as a tough gunman whom it was well not to anger.

The "Hotsy Totsy club" was, as its name might imply, an all-night joint in the heart of Longacre square, where playboys and prostitutes hoisted their liquor, and where, for several years, a fair section of the riffraff of the

KNOW YOUR CAMERA

By ANDREW B. HECHT, Ph. D.

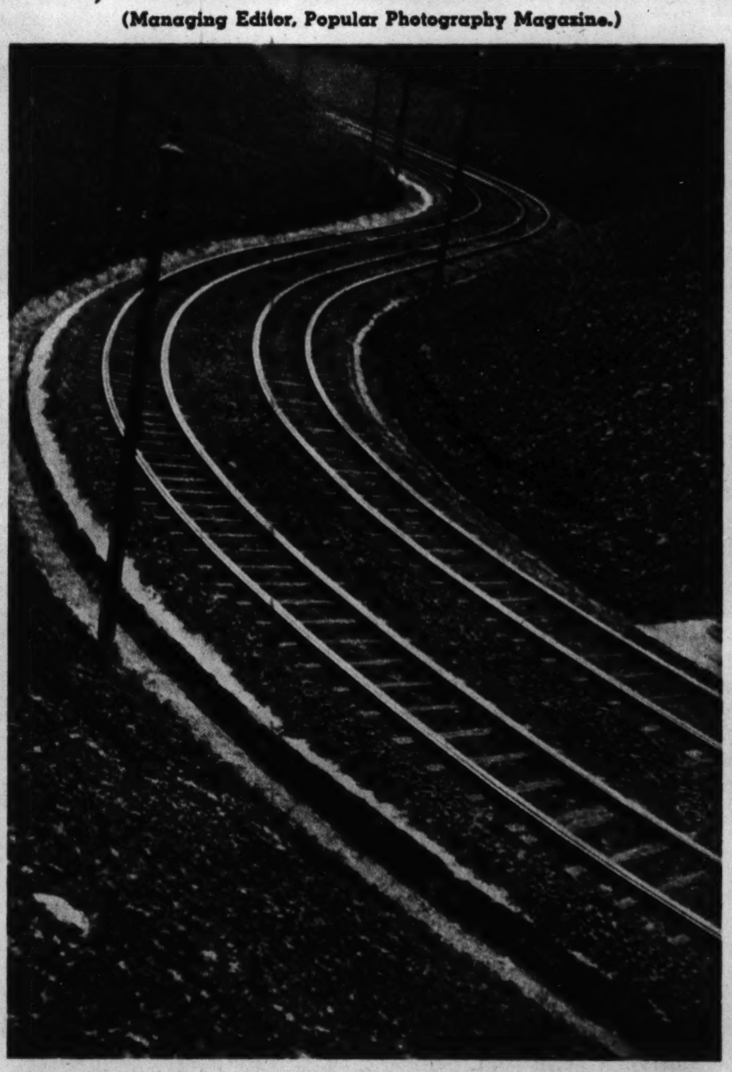
TO MANY amateurs photography begins and ends with the snapping of a picture. From there on they leave everything to the photo finisher, relinquishing all control over their snapshots. They don't realize that they have made less than half of the picture themselves (for they have not even finished the negative), and they don't seem to know that they miss most of the fun offered by photography.

Developing your own film may seem a ticklish job to you if you have never tried it. If you are an absolute beginner you may be better off having the finisher do this part of the work for you, as developing requires a completely darkened room, some special equipment, and quite a bit of skill and care. Besides, if you make a mistake your film may be ruined beyond repair.

But there is no sound reason why you should not try your hand at making your own prints. After your negative has been safely and well developed you can easily and cheaply make "contact" prints.

Naturally contact printing has to be carried out in a darkened room. Yet this room need not be as completely lightproof as a darkroom in which you develop film. You can use a ruby or orange safelight which has been designed for the purpose. It costs only a few cents, and another requisite, a printing frame, can also be purchased for less than a dollar.

The printing frame is a wooden frame with a clear glass plate the size of your negative. You place the negative with its shiny side on the glass, put a sheet of printing paper on the negative so that the paper emulsion touches the film emulsion, and then close the frame.



Many photographers claim that curves are the most attractive form of composition. The curving railroad tracks by Kalman Kata of Budapest are certainly the sole theme of his picture, yet they command attention.

The next step is the exposure, which is made by turning on an ordinary electric light bulb for a few seconds. After this you put the paper, under the safelight, in a tray or dish of developer until the image appears sufficiently strong. From there you transfer the paper to a shortstop bath and, after a few seconds, to a fixing bath. After two or three minutes in the fixer you can turn on the white light and examine the print.

Your main difficulty in making contact prints will be to find the correct exposure time. Use always a white bulb of the same strength and place the printing frame at a fixed distance from the light. To eliminate waste of paper cut up a sheet in narrow test strips. Put a strip across your negative in such a manner that it will cover both a dense and a light portion. Then expose and develop. You will soon find the proper exposure.

When buying the contact paper you will notice that all brands of paper come in several grades. After you have made a few prints you will discover why this is necessary. Sometimes your prints will be a flat gray in tone, and sometimes they will be a harsh black and white with no intermediate tones. Lack of contrast causes the first, too much contrast the latter. Therefore you must choose a grade of paper which balances the contrast of your negative. If the negative is contrasty, print it on soft paper; if it is flat, use a contrasty or "hard" paper.

Most printing frames are so designed that you get a white margin on your prints. If you want to vary the width or shape of this margin you can buy printing masks for very little money. Should you decide to make prints in quantity you will save time by using a printing box in place of the printing frame. This box has a glass plate and a platen on top. You put your negative and paper on the glass and press them down with the platen. This automatically turns on a printing light inside. By lifting the platen you turn the light off. Some printers have a constantly burning safelight inside, which makes it easier to put the negative and contact paper in place.

The entire equipment necessary for making contact prints from negatives up to 4x5 inches can be purchased for $2 or less.

Facial Beauty Isn't Necessary for Charm

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright: 1940: News Syndicate, Inc.)

"BUT SHE'S positively homely!" said her severe but short-sighted critic. They were discussing a certain woman in her early thirties who has her circle simply gaga over her success not only with men but with fair-minded women. Indeed, her fame has spread beyond her own immediate circle. People had been telling us about this woman before we met her, people who had seen her in operation both socially and in her chosen field. We capitulated, too. Wholeheartedly. And in this woman we read one of the finest little sermons ever on the power of charm over physical shortcomings. True, her most devoted slave would not use the word "beauty" in connection with her. But what infinite chic and charm the woman has!

Meeting and getting to know this charming person set me off on a bit of research about women who have left their mark on the world and who, with the passing of time at least, have come to be associated with beauty. How few of them were born with the beauty spoon in their mouths!

The theme is introduced today as a challenge to women and girls who give up the search for distinction because they feel that the gift of the gods was denied in their original fashioning.

We were talking with one of the world's best known cosmeticians recently. She has traveled in almost every country under the sun. We asked her for her observations on the different nationalities; if any one nation of women has cornered beauty, so to speak. We asked her if she would name ten or a dozen "most beautiful" women. She answered: "Ridiculous! You couldn't name ten most beautiful. Not a hundred these days! Nor five hundred! Everywhere you turn are women of great attraction. Thirty years ago, yes, you might have done it. But what do features measure in today's standard? They simply don't count. It's chic—or a better word is the French word soignée—that counts. This and charm of manner!

"And," added our authority, "even a homely woman can have charm and be soignée."

As an afterthought she said: "I put the greatest emphasis on the chic or soignée treatment of hair. Let a plain woman concentrate on her hair and make it a thing of beauty and distinction and let her dress smartly—then she can leave the loving cups to the bathing suit beauties and never know that she has missed anything."

Grace you can and must have! Grace of gesture. Grace of speech. Grace of action. Concentrate on doing everything you do with a graceful turn. For instance, if tempted to an abrupt answer, curb the instinct and express yourself in softer terms.

Study the physical graces. Many top-ranking movie stars in ladylike scenes have undergone professional tutoring in charming ways and manners. Study the way they cross a room, take a chair, sit, and stand—the way they make an entrance.

Don't go in for a professional grade of charm—the stilted, affected sort of thing that might suggest graduation from a silly charm school. Don't turn charm on and off as you would an electric switch, with the forced smile, the elegant manner for company only.

Watch yourself on how often you use "I" in a conversation, say, when some of the time at least the other person should be given a chance. Don't let yourself get into the habit of nursing grudges until a chip sticks out on your shoulder and the corners of the mouth take a downward turn. Learn how to tell a story with accent on brevity. Women have a reputation for telling long and pointless stories. Learn to listen intelligently.

The advantage the not-beautiful person has over the beautiful one is that she can tell herself that in order to be attractive to people she has to make herself attractive to them. The pity, therefore, isn't for the homely duckling who sets out to attain a goal for herself, but for the pretty one who builds nothing against that day when she is faded and middle-aged and totally uninteresting.

(Posed by Ellen Drew.)

roaring 40's might be found in semidarkness after midnight. Its ostensible proprietor was one Harry Cassidy. There was a double shooting in the club one night in which Cassidy and an ex-convict named Simon Walker were slain. Everybody along the street knew Diamond's gun had laid those two unworthies in their graves, but the police had difficulty getting any evidence.

In the first place, the names of witnesses they took to police headquarters and questioned leaked out to the gang world. These witnesses straightway were "placed on spots" or "taken for rides," and, after a few of them had been found riddled with bullets, other prospective witnesses grew reluctant to talk. In August, 1929, Eugene Moran, an ancient enemy of Legs', was murdered, and once again the street wiseacres nodded in unofficial identification of the killer. Legs was at work again, albeit a fugitive. When he learned thru his political allies that the police had no case against him, Jack Diamond came back to town and surrendered. He was released after a brief questioning.

He began to swank about Broadway once more, but a strange antipathy against him was arising. All gangland was turning against him as against no other murderer. One of the more astute gangsters told Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney the reason. "Diamond goes around everywhere, trying to muscle in on everything," he complained, "and wherever he goes there's a covey of cops on his heels. He makes the rackets hard for all of us. You can't work with a guy whose name is kept in all the newspapers and who is known to all the cops. He's a good gunman but he's got to get out of town. He's too loud."

Diamond received an edict from the lords of the underworld, too powerful for him to resist, in April, 1930, to get out of Manhattan and stay out, under penalty of execution. He got out but he did not stay out.

He picked a bodyguard and retired at first to a flood-lit bungalow in the Catskills. With plenty of money he turned it into a pretentious estate. For a time he attempted to become a country gentleman known for benevolent gestures to the peasantry, but he could not quite make that character live. He had his chauffeur speed to Albany, N. Y., from his home in Acra, N. Y., one evening for medicine for the sick child of a neighbor. He paid a carpenter to build a shed for a poor old woman's cow. He gave $10 tips to the rural barbers, and he became a personage.

Then he became bored. Diamond had "girl trouble" and was not content to live with the very personable Mrs. Alice Schiffer Diamond, his legal wife, who hovered near him wherever he went to the day of his death. He had discovered on Broadway a dancing girl named Marion Strasmick, who changed her name in her teens to Marion Roberts when she was hired as a toe dancer by Florenz Ziegfeld.

Later she achieved the sobriquet of "Kiki." Kiki Roberts was Jack Diamond's girl, and the gunman longed for her in his upstate exile. He yearned, too, for the floating crap games and the adulation of other minor gangsters to which he had become accustomed in Manhattan.

So, after a few months of exile, he came back to the city and immediately was arrested for complicity in a Newark bank robbery. The police could not make that charge stick, but they made it so uncomfortable for Legs that he went upstate once more.

He started to muscle into the beer running business of the Catskills but soon got into such trouble with the police that he had to flee the country. One Harry Western, proprietor of a roadhouse near Diamond's estate at Acra, was kidnaped and disappeared. Diamond's chauffeur was found with Western's automobile in a Brooklyn street. Under police pressure, he asserted that Diamond had told him to drive that car to Brooklyn and drop it into New York harbor. An alarm was sent out for Legs but he had gone to Europe.

Diamond turned up in England, where the British newspaper men obtained some amusing copy from him, describing him in such quaint terms as "Cunning Jackie." They seemed to overlook the fact that he was as venomous as a cobra and had more murders upon his soul than there are hangings within their island in a lifetime. A real Yankee rum runner in the flesh was too delightful.

Landing in Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 22, 1930, the gangster was arrested immediately as a suspicious person. He shook the dust of that town from his feet just as fast as he could get an automobile to take him to his upstate headquarters at Acra.

It was generally assumed that he was in retirement there, but on Oct. 12 two men walked into room 829 of the Monticello hotel in Manhattan, which Legs had been occupying with Kiki Roberts, and found him sitting alone in bed, clad in pajamas. They poured four bullets into him and got away from there fast. Legs was taken to the Polyclinic hospital, where the first report from physicians was to the effect that he would die very shortly. He fooled the physicians and became a living reproach to the gunmen who had failed to kill him. One of those gunmen was no less a racketeer than Irving Bitz of the Spitale-Bitz combination, according to underworld gossip, but Bitz always denied it. Once out of the hospital, Legs went back to Acra, and this time Kiki Roberts went with him and lived in the mansion there, along with Mrs. Alice Diamond.

Diamond made some progress in taking over partnerships in Greene county beer joints, and was indicted on a charge of kidnaping a cider runner named Grover Parks. Parks complained to the police that Diamond had lifted him from his truck, taken him into a garage, and tortured him by burning the soles of his bared feet with paper torches. Everybody who knew Diamond knew that such a stunt would be typical of him in a mirthful mood. But Legs pleaded not guilty to the indictment. Before he came to trial he was once more a target for gunmen, who dropped him on the gravel path outside his Aratoga inn, with plenty slugs from sawed-off shotguns in him—enough to kill a healthier man. Diamond recovered quickly.

Then the federal authorities took a crack at him. They brought him to Manhattan and indicted him with Paul Quattrochi, one of his henchmen, on a charge of violating the Volstead act. They convicted him and he was bailed out. Going upstate he was arrested again, this time by the police of Albany, N. Y., on a charge of having kidnaped another beer runner. He was acquitted. He and Mrs. Diamond and some members of his retinue had a jubilant celebration in an Albany hotel, and Legs got pretty drunk. Toward midnight he left the party and went to a more modest rooming house where he had a date with Kiki Roberts. He was very drunk and Kiki left him sleeping.

Scarcely was she out of the house when two men walked into it and straight up to Diamond's room, which they opened with a key. One of the men put the muzzle of a pistol to Diamond's head and fired it. His companion then took the "clay pigeon of gangdom" by both his ears, and held that head steady while one of the most experienced killers in New York poured two more shots into it.

As the pair ran down the stairs, the awakened occupants of the house heard one man say, "Are you sure you got him that time?"

"Hell, yes," said the other.

The killer was Schultz's man, Bo Weinberg. The Dutchman finally had achieved revenge for the killing of his partner, Joe Noe, and gangdom was relieved of the west side's most famous shooter.

DESIGN FOR MURDER

DRUMS OF FU MANCHU

"The Pendulum of Doom"

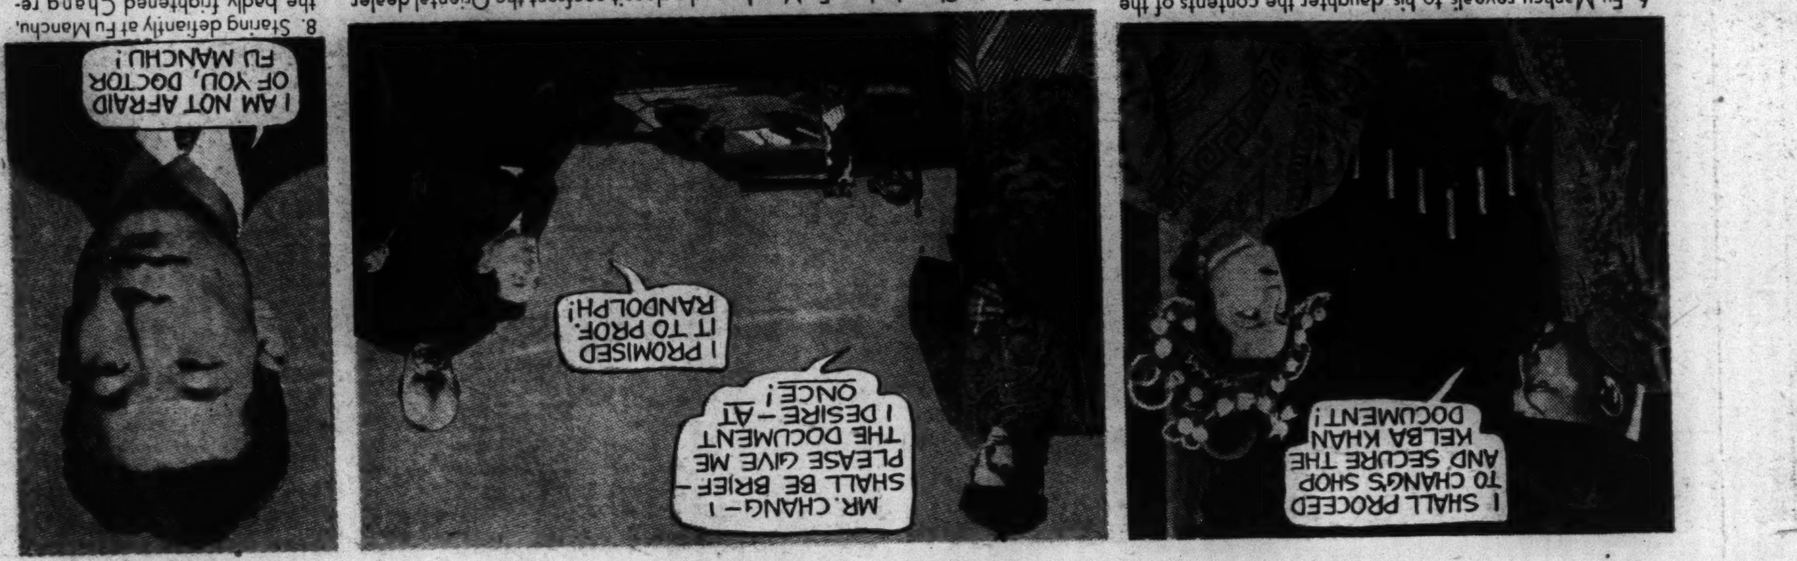
1. Stunned by the impact of the plane as it crashes—Allan gradually recovers his faculties and realizes the danger of confronting them.

2. Struggling frantically, he succeeds in freeing Mary from the wreckage. Quickly he carries her away from the flaming plane.

3. Looking back, Allan sees a burst of flames followed by a deafening explosion which leaves the plane a blazing mass of twisted wreckage.

4. Upon returning to Prof. Randolph's office, they learn that he has had a copy made of the Scroll. Upon translation it reveals that another document is needed if they are to locate the long-lost sceptre of Genghis Khan.

5. This document is in the possession of a friendly oriental merchant, a Mr. Chang, who has promised to allow Professor Randolph to inspect its contents.



6. Fu Manchu reveals to his daughter the contents of the Dalai Scroll and the need of the document in the possession of Mr. Chang.

7. Racing to Chang's shop, Fu Manchu and a dacoit confront the Oriental dealer and make their demands known.

8. Staring defiantly at Fu Manchu, the badly frightened Chang refuses to give up the desired document.

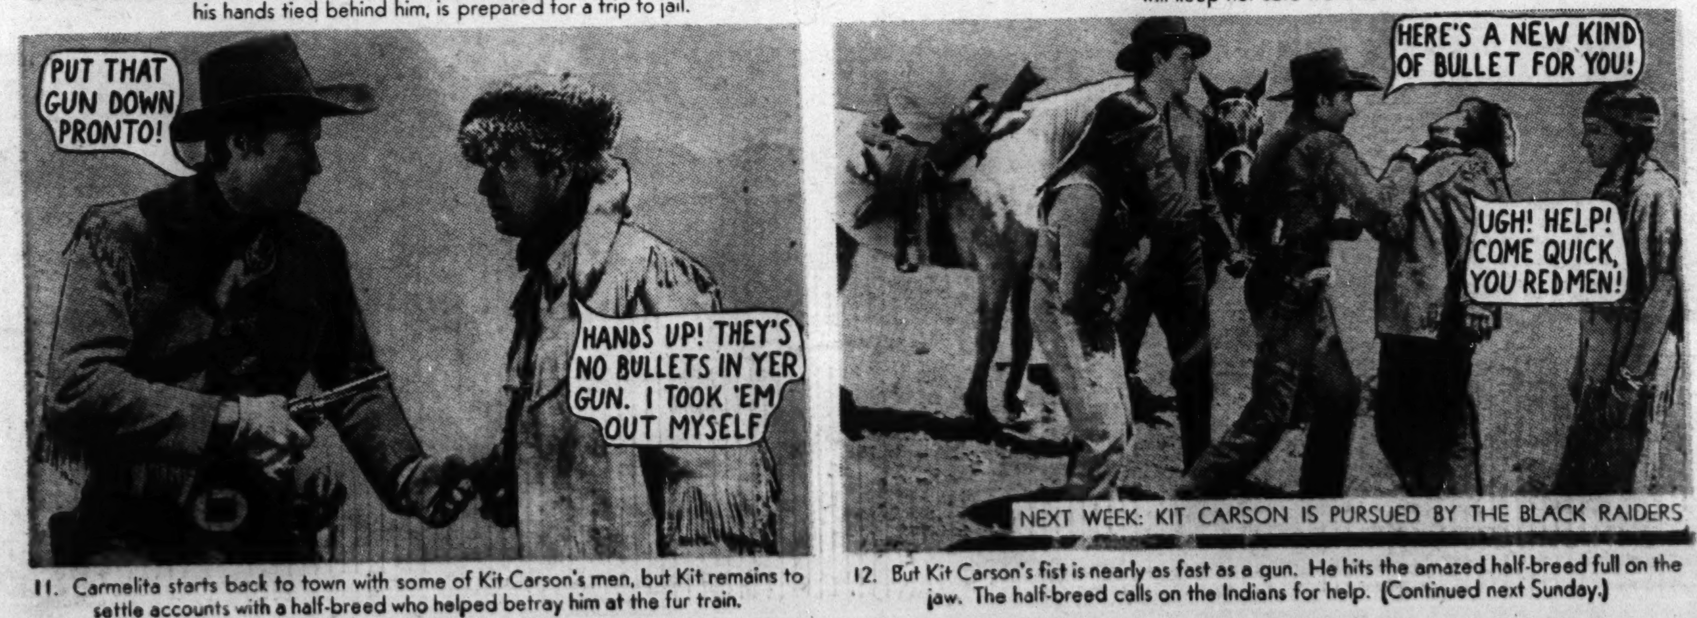
9. Noticing an old arrow cannon, Fu Manchu directs the dacoit to prepare it. He aims it directly at Chang's heart, and threatens death unless he gives up the document.

10. The dacoit anxiously awaits Fu Manchu's comand to cut the rope and release the trigger which will send Chang to join his ancestors.

11. Still defiant, Chang stares at the murderous device and with a stoic calmness awaits his fate rather than surrender the document into evil hands.

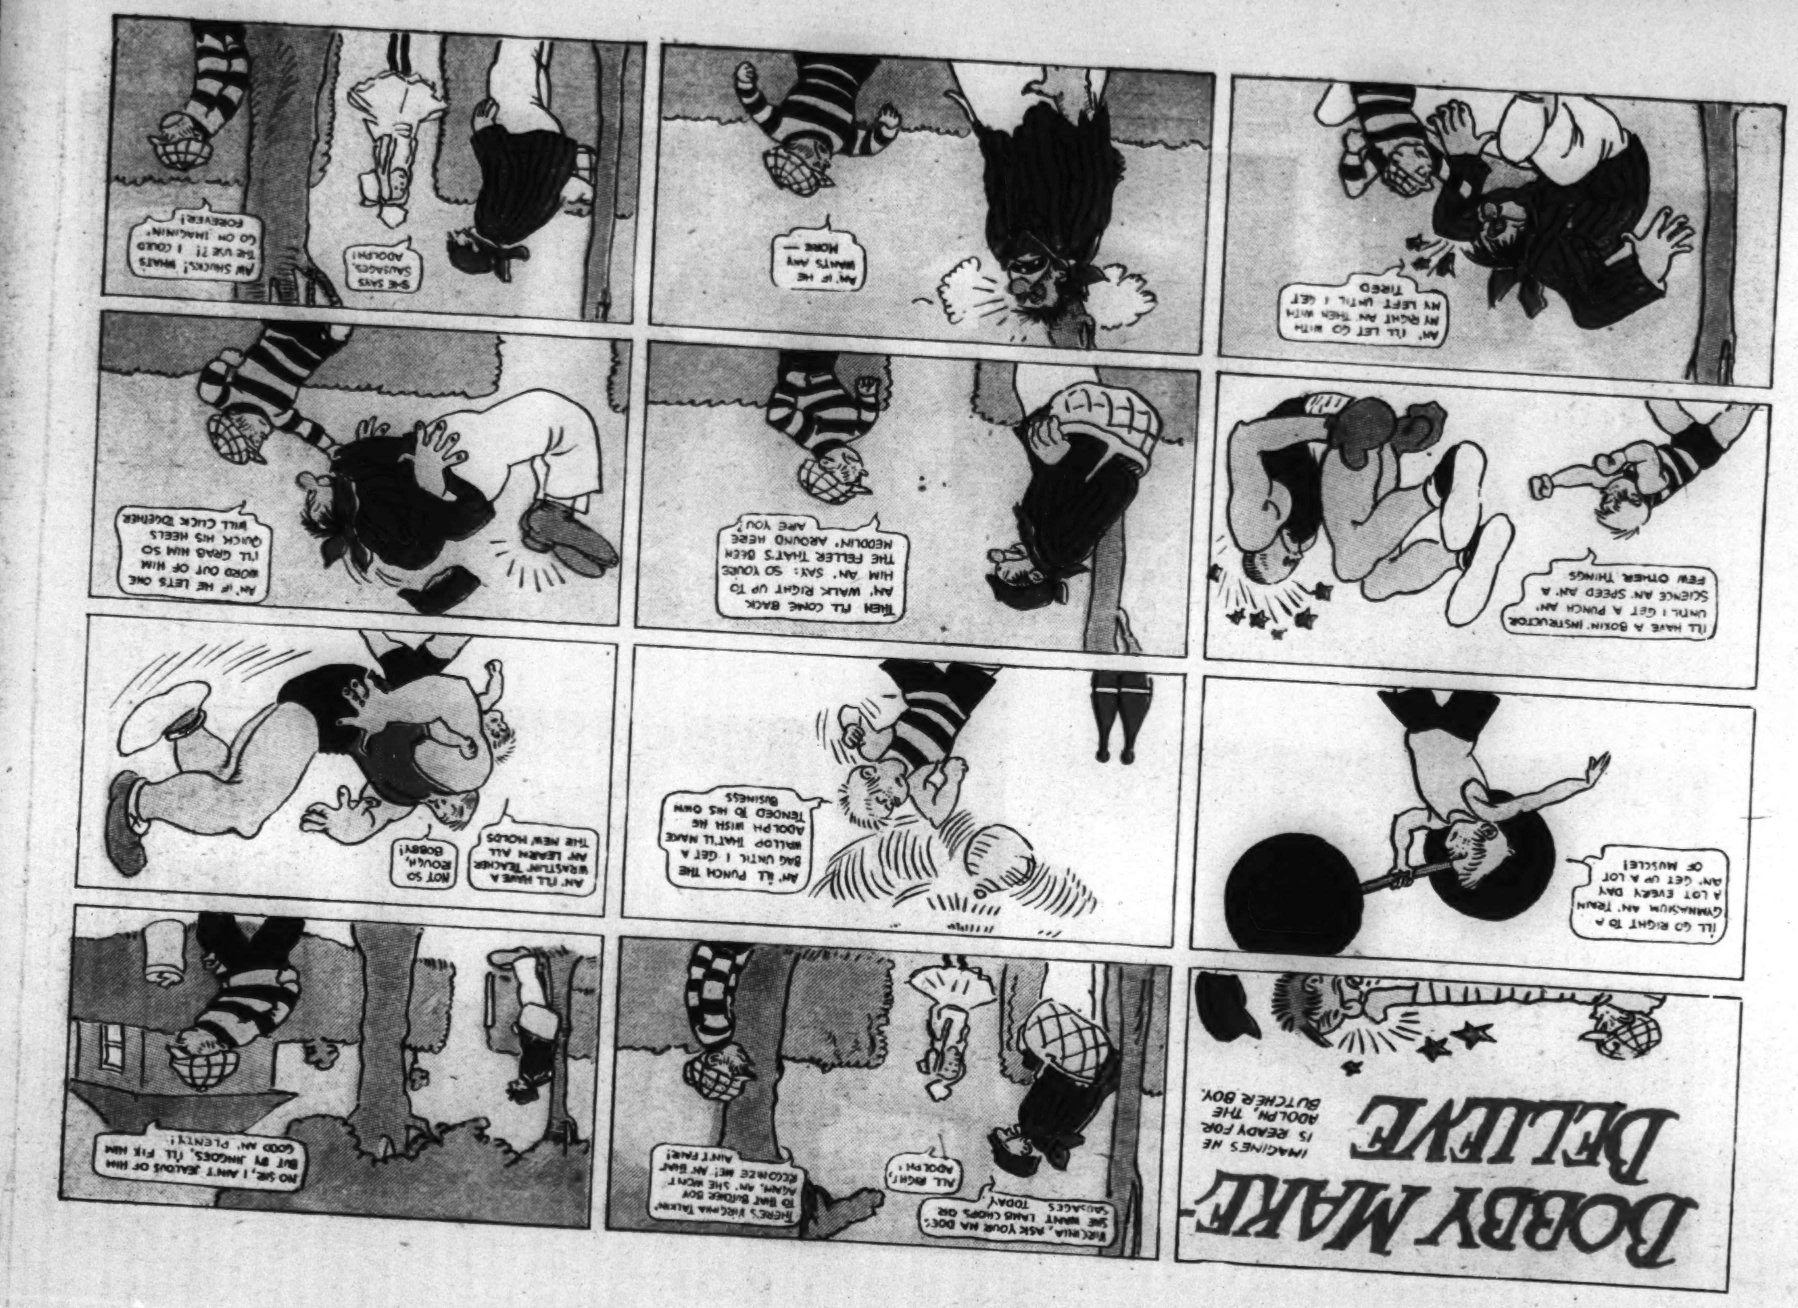
9. Kit and Carmelita are rescued from a horrible death just in time. Their Indian betrayer, his hands tied behind him, is prepared for a trip to jail.

10. Kit Carson picks the still trembling Carmelita up in his arms, and tells her that he will keep her safe from now on.



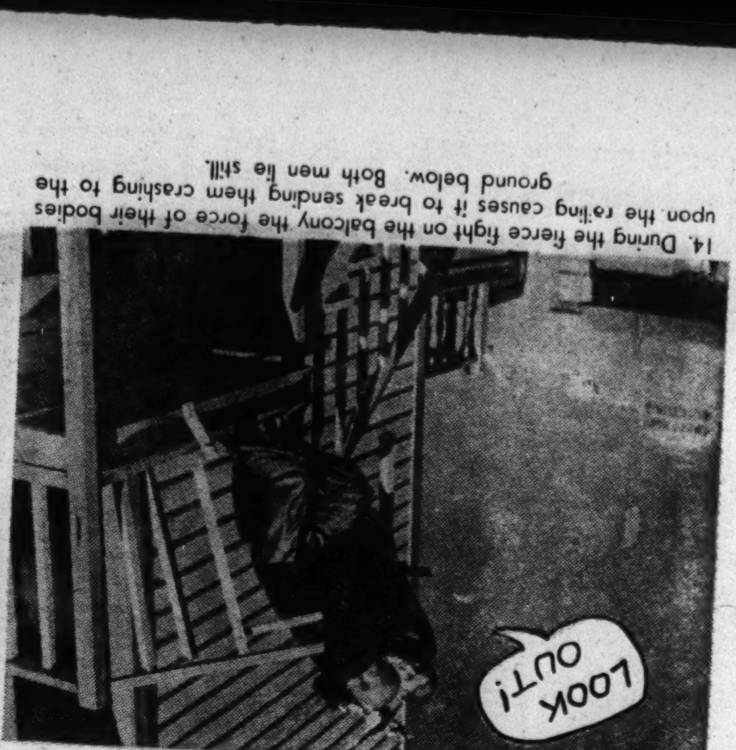
11. Carmelita starts back to town with some of Kit Carson's men, but Kit remains to settle accounts with a half-breed who helped betray him at the fur train.

12. But Kit Carson's fist is nearly as fast as a gun. He hits the amazed half-breed full on the jaw. The half-breed calls on the Indians for help. (Continued next Sunday.)

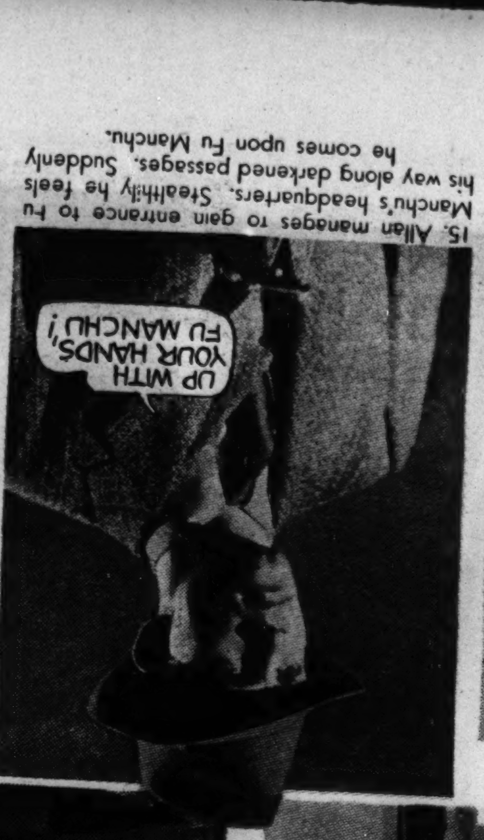


12. Smith and Allan arrive in time to rescue Chang. Meanwhile Fu Manchu manages to escape, but leaves a dacoit behind to delay pursuit.

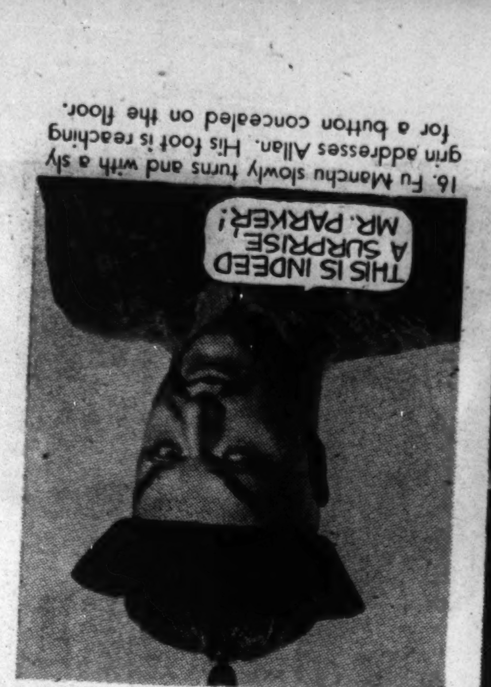
13. The dacoit awaits his chance and when Nayland Smith's back is turned he lunges forward and attacks him.



14. During the fierce fight on the balcony the force of their bodies upon the railing causes it to break sending them crashing to the ground below. Both men lie still.



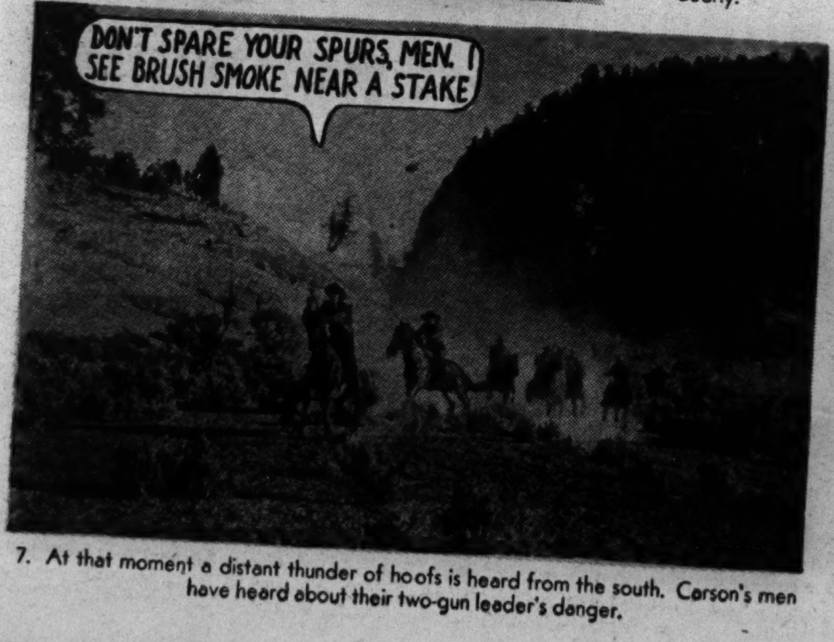
15. Allan manages to gain entrance to Fu Manchu's headquarters. Stealthily he feels his way along darkened passages. Suddenly he comes upon Fu Manchu.



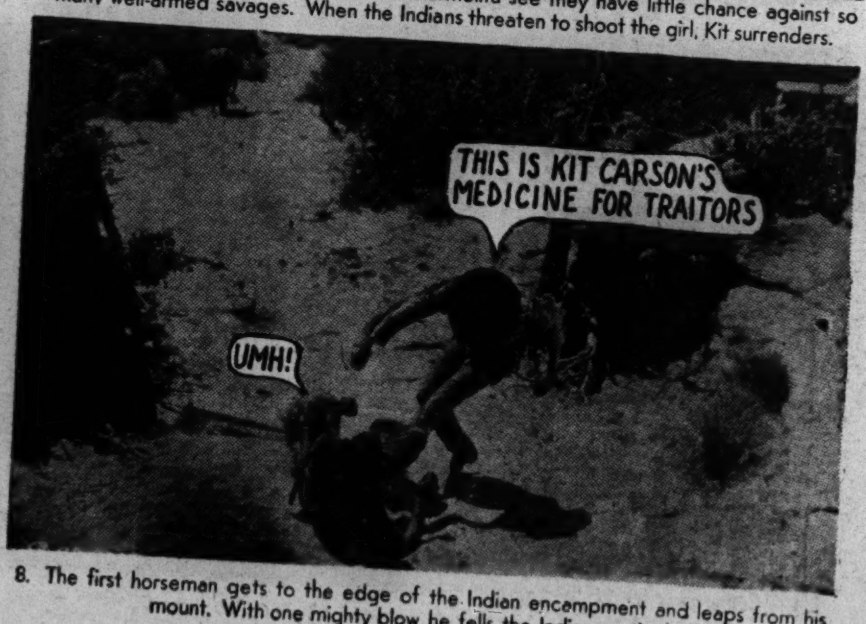
16. Fu Manchu slowly turns and with a sly grin addresses Allan. His foot is reaching for a button concealed on the floor.

5. Carmelita picks up a rifle to defend herself. Kit draws his six-shooter. They are determined to trade their lives dearly.

6. Their last bullets gone, Kit Carson and Carmelita see they have little chance against so many well-armed savages. When the Indians threaten to shoot the girl, Kit surrenders.



7. At that moment a distant thunder of hoofs is heard from the south. Carson's men have heard about their two-gun leader's danger.



8. The first horseman gets to the edge of the Indian encampment and leaps from his mount. With one mighty blow he fells the Indian sentinel.

KIT CARSON'S NARROW ESCAPE from the INDIANS

1. Kit Carson and Carmelita meet an Indian who invites them to come and see his collection of furs.

2. Kit Carson and Carmelita arrive at the fur wagon train. They find frontiersmen trading beads for furs.

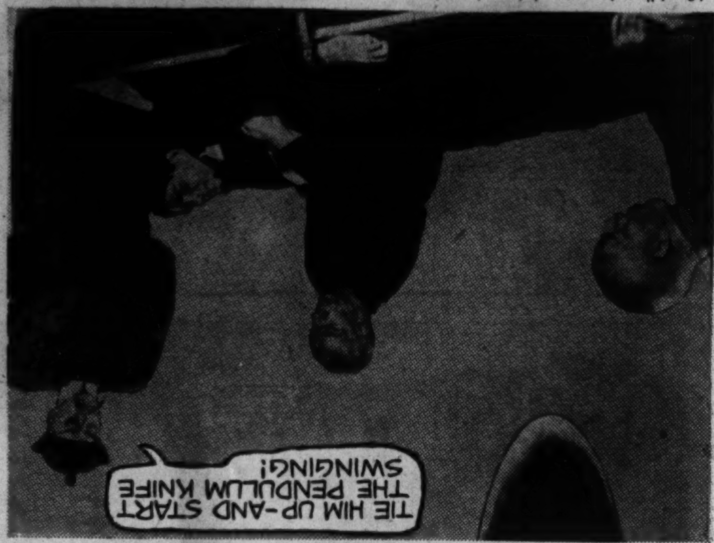
3. Carmelita goes to one of the other wagons and offers a silver braclet for a fine mountain lion fur... suddenly.

4. The wagon train is attacked by a band of mounted Indians. Kit Carson realizes too late that he has been tricked. The fur train was bait for an Indian trap.

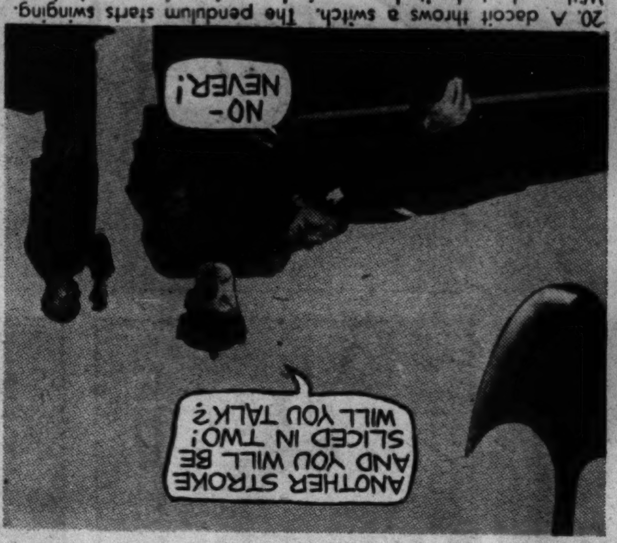
ZIPPER

17. Pressing on it, a rope net drops from the ceiling upon Allan, encircling him. From a doorway spring two dacoits who overpower him.

18. Fu Manchu demands Allan reveal the contents of the Kelba Khan in the possession of Chang. Allan defiantly refuses.



19. Allan is seized by the dacoits and is strapped to a block-like table. Overhead hangs a razor-sharp knife at the end of the swinging pendulum.



20. A dacoit throws a switch. The pendulum starts swinging. With each stroke it drops an inch, coming closer and closer to the helpless Allan who bravely awaits his fate. Will Fu Manchu win again?

and feel the difference
It's difficult to describe this different atmosphere of Coronado apartments, but there's something about them that people like instantly. Perhaps it's their freshness, their new furnishings, their spacious arrangements, their scrupulous cleanliness, the unusual lobby and service—or perhaps it's a combination of these things. In any event it's worth your while to see a Coronado apartment. You be the judge.

NEAR NORTH SIDE
In summer, it's great to get away for week-ends, but when you come back on Monday it helps to know that you have a studio apartment with a porch or balcony overlooking a fountain in the court yard below, or a roof to climb up to where you can still be out in the fresh air. The living room in one of our apts. is 2 stories high, and another 4 room apt. has a living room 37 ft. long, windows at both ends, and a skylight. It's a marvelous room with its fireplace and dining nook, and just outside a little sunny porch and a bit of a roof. All of these are down here where there are so many interesting things you can enjoy and still have a good night's sleep, because they are all just a short walk up Michigan-av. from the loop. We have also some wonderful places for groups of 3 and 4; some are furnished. A special bargain on a 5 room with a beautiful living room and large combination bed and dressing room.

IT ACTUALLY costs less to build in Lincolnshire, yet you have a large lake, swimming pool, 3 golf courses, 12 miles of bridle paths, 5 tennis courts, and thousands of trees at your front door. You have a free bus to I. C. depot, 37 minutes, 16c fare, to loop. Free bus takes children to progressive school; taxes [Will County] on a big home only $45 per year; 1,250 acres and rigid restrictions protect you against encroachment of undesirables; over a thousand enthusiastic lot and home owners of the kind you want as neighbors invite you to see this rolling and wooded development that cost a million dollars to build; hundreds upon seeing Lincolnshire made the same comment: "I've never seen anything so beautiful!" Why buy the "ordinary" when "for less" you can buy the extraordinary. FHA terms. Drive out Halsted-st. 3 miles south of Chicago Heights. Ask for Mr. Homan at Lincolnshire Clubhouse or phone Regent 1242.

Geese Building Nests.

April 20, 1940.

THE Canada geese which live on the ponds of the Du Page county farm evidently do not believe in watching a thermometer to determine when spring is here. They make their nesting plans according to the calendar, and when mid-April arrives they start pairing off to find a suitable nesting site, regardless of whether it is warm or cold.

When we hiked back to the farm ponds the other morning the wind was howling, there were occasional snow flurries, and the temperature was in the 30s. But to our surprise the geese were paddling around the pond in pairs and following a twisting trail thru the willows to find a nesting place on the shore.

Sign of Summer.

Two weeks ago, when the temperatures were higher, the geese flocked together and showed no indication that they were thinking about making nests. But now they are ready to build nests, and amateur weather forecasters on the farm believe it is a sign that warm weather soon will be here on a permanent basis.

The cool weather of last week made it necessary for the men again to penalize the turkeys and the Muscovy ducks on the farm. Unless the weather moderates soon the poor Muscovys will wonder if the flockmaster ever is going to let them raise a family this year. When the thermometer dropped low during the middle of the week the flockmaster thought it would be best to steal all the eggs from the turkey and the duck nests.

More than 60 Muscovy eggs and a number of turkey eggs were taken from the nests and stored in a cool basement. So now the barnyard fowl will have to start all over if they intend to hatch one of their own clutches. The eggs which were stolen from them will be delivered to a hatchery.

26 Eggs in Duck Nest.

For the rest of the spring season we're going to keep an eye on one of the nests in the duckhouse. When the men decided to pick up all of the early eggs and send them to a hatchery they found 26 eggs in one nest—a regular gold mine of Muscovy eggs. Undoubtedly several of the Muscovys had been using this one nest. How they were going to solve the problem of incubating all the eggs is an unanswered question.

The bluebirds which make their headquarters in the orchard near the barnyard each summer still are investigating various nesting sites in apple trees, but as yet they haven't selected one to call "home." A rise in temperatures undoubtedly will be the signal for them to start gathering nesting materials.

Cat Plays with Lambs.

Near the orchard where the bluebirds are looking for a nesting place the 1940 crop of spring lambs have a play session each day with a pet kitten which seems to be their new mascot. The kitten especially likes to oversee the feeding place of the lambs in their corner of the big sheep barn.

When we were in the barn the other morning a number of lambs were feeding at their private trough with their mascot perched on a rail, watching them eat.

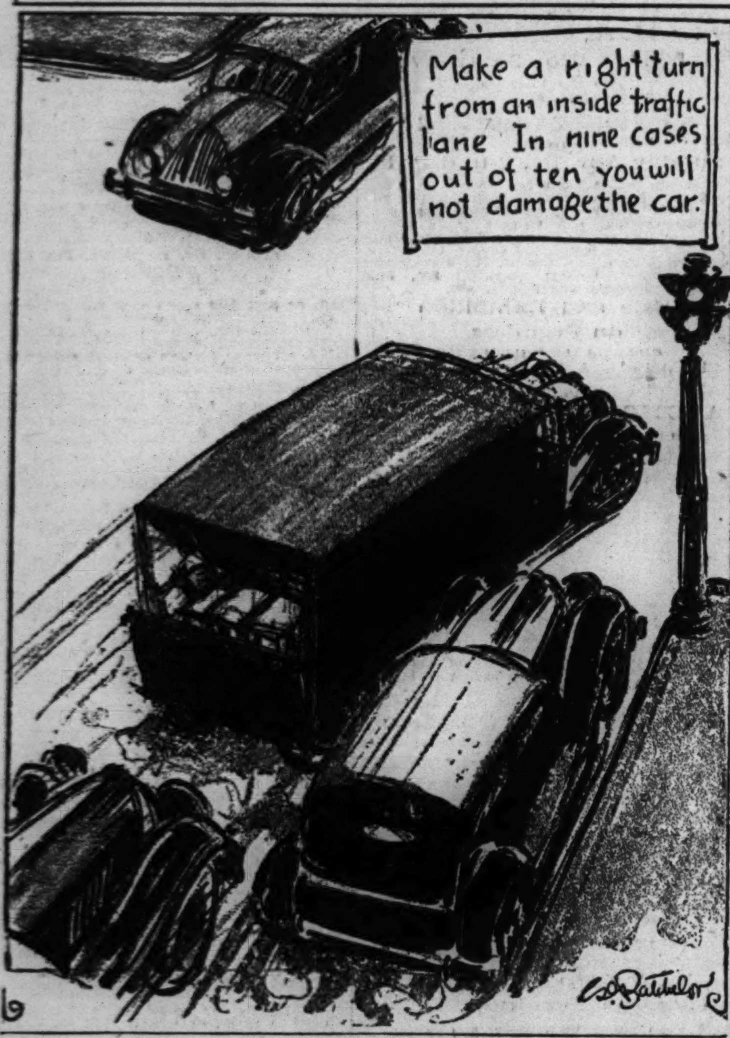
MOTORS—TRAFFIC—HIGHWAYS

Inviting the Undertaker



11 RAILROADS TO FURNISH TRAIN, AUTO SERVICE

BY HAL FOUST.

A travel service combining the use of trains and of automobiles is announced for inauguration on May 1. Eleven railroads will offer motor cars for rent to their passengers in 150 cities in 30 states. Rail ticket agents will sell the service.

Under this new plan, a business or pleasure traveler can enjoy the superior speed and comfort of trains for the ride over long distances. At destinations away from home, he will have the convenience of an automobile for his individual use.

The railroads participating in this enterprise are the Burlington, the Chicago and Eastern Illinois, the Chicago,, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific, the Chicago and North Western, the Chicago St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha, the Great Northern, the Illinois Central, the Northern Pacific, the Rock Island, the Santa Fe, and the Union Pacific.

Applies Equally to Both.

By means of the new service, these carriers are seeking to return to the rails part of the swollen volume of long distance highway travel. They recognize that much of this long distance driving is done not for the pleasure of the trip itself but for the pleasure and convenience of having an automobile at the destination away from home.

This motive applies equally to business and to vacation trips. The Chicago salesman calling on the groceries in St. Louis will drive the 600 miles round trip, two days at the wheel rather than sleeping two nights on the train, so he can have motor transportation in the Missouri city. Vacationists in the Rockies will make the arduous and monotonous drive across the western prairies so they can wander on the roads between dude ranches and trout streams.

Hope to Compete.

Railroads heretofore nave tried to meet this travel problem by offering express freight service for the automobiles of their patrons.

Under the train-auto service plan, the railroads believe they can compete with long distance highway travel on a dollars and cents basis. The tariff announced for the automobile rental is 8 cents a mile subject to the following minimum mileages: Per hour, 10 miles or 80 cents; per 12 hour day, 75 miles or $6; 24 hour day, 135 miles or $10.80; per week, 350 miles or $28; per 24 hour day after first week, 50 miles or $4.

"Take for example a trip between two cities in the central states 400 miles apart," reads an explanatory pamphlet issued by the railroads.

"The round trip first class train fare is $18. The lower berth rate is $5.30 round trip. Thus, the total railroad cost is $23.30."

Need Buy Only Three Meals.

Since the train makes the trip overnight in each direction, it is only necessary to buy three meals away from home. At 80 cents per meal, this item adds $2.40 to the cost. The use of a train-auto service car for 100 miles at destination costs $8. This makes the trip cost $33.70, and takes only one business day.

"The same trip by private automobile would take two business days—one half day going, two half days for work, and one half day returning. It would cost $43 if the car mileage is figured as low as 4 cents or $52 if figured at 5 cents per mile, or $61 if at 6 cents per mile, which is the average figure allowed by careful business firms."

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

ON ADDISON STREET.

Chicago, April 10.—How many of the readers of the Voice of the Traffic drive west on Addison street in the evening or east in the morning rush, and observe the attitude taken by the drivers of the motor coach buses?

The word courtesy is long missing from their dictionary. When you come up behind a bus loaded with workers going to work, it is possible for you to get past the bus within a distance of six or eight blocks. When the driver stops to pick up a passenger, instead of pulling to the curb as expected to do, he stops in the line he was in. Cars behind then have to stop and wait for the bus to start again.

The condition of Addison street between Racine and Western avenues is disgraceful. The bumps and holes remind one of Belmont avenue between Western and Cicero avenues.

Now that the motor coach company has installed new oil burning buses which use a cheap grade of crude oil, that deprives the state of Illinois out of tens of thousands of dollars of gas tax money that they save by the switch to cheap-burning fuel, what is the city going to do to recover the expense required to keep Addison street in repairs?

I have been under the impression that Addison street was a boulevard, but one will observe while driving on it, coal trucks dribbling coal all over the street, beer delivery trucks parked almost in the middle of the street, while a motorist will find a city motorcycle policeman hiding behind a parked car waiting for his prey who has become irritated by buses and trucks and is trying to get to work on time. What can we do, readers?

LOOP PARKING ADVICE.

Chicago, April 14.—Let me "wise up" Mr. J. E. C., who has been having difficulty finding free parking space downtown that he might find room on Roosevelt road between State and the river.

There are No Parking signs there, but don't let that bother him, as about 45 machines are parked there every day as the owners have undoubtedly learned the No Parking signs are meaningless.

I would suggest, however, it might be a good idea to stay off the bridge.

I heartily agree with you that parking should be restricted to one hour or even 90 minutes on lots of streets outside the loop, which would take care of you and me and all-day parkers should use parking lots.

SALESMAN.

PAYOFF DEMANDED.

Chicago, April 12.—On March 20 I took my car over to the vehicle inspection lane at 6934 South Cottage Grove avenue for the fifth time, to get my safety stickers, which you know, of course, is necessary to have to avoid arrest. Every time I had taken my car over, the headlights were too high or too low. I then took my car to a garage and had the lights checked. They said that the lights were O. K., but it cost me 75 cents to find that out.

I then said to one of the fellows that I didn't believe he knew his business, that he had checked the lights on my car the night before, March 19, and he had told me my left light was all right but that my right headlight was too high. Now he told me that both were too high.

With this said, the fellow opened the door of my car and said for half a buck he'd O. K. the lights. That made me so mad I was ready to fight, and I grabbed the fellow and told him he had better give me a safety sticker or I would fix him; whereupon I got the sticker.

What bothers me is just how many other Chicagoans are being treated in the same manner as I. We are trying to obey the laws, but first must pay off to get an O. K. for a safety sticker.

NEWS AND VIEWS

The 28,000,000th Ford is now enroute on a good will tour of the United States, Canada, and Mexico, during which a stop will be made at San Francisco on May 25 for the opening of the Golden Gate exposition. The car recently came off the assembly line at the Ford plant in Edgewater, N. J. Edsel Ford headed a group of officials who took part in the ceremonies.

J. H. Winn reports that the week ended April 6 was the largest new Chrysler and Plymouth combined sales week in the history of the Chrysler Sales corporation for the Chicago region. Then again in the week ended April 13 Chrysler dealers in and around Chicago delivered more used cars than in any preceding week. Winn said that in the first three months of 1940 Plymouth sales were 50 per cent greater than in the corresponding 1939 period and the delivery of Chrysler cars showed a 43 per cent gain.

J. B. Mahoney, a partner in the Mahoney-Sirovatka company and president of the Cicero New Car Dealers association, has been elected president of the Metropolitan Buick Dealers association, composed of Buick dealers in the Chicago and suburban area. Others elected were: W. J. Boone of the James Levy Motor company, vice president; Thomas Lyons of Western Devon Buick, secretary, and Edward Reynolds of North Shore Buick, treasurer.

Henry Felz, president of Felz Motor Sales, Inc., Dodge dealers, has added eight women to his sales force. He recently interviewed 240 applicants. Felz said he believes women can sell automobiles as well as any other commodity. Since women have the say in the purchase of many cars he believes women salesmen should be able to make a notable record in this new field.

Oldsmobile is highly pleased with the results obtained with coil springs in the rear as well as the front. "Not only has riding comfort been increased, but coil springs have proved to be the most troubleproof type of spring suspension Oldsmobile ever has employed," he said. "Replacements have proved unknown in ordinary usage. Lubrication is banished and time is saved." The coil springs, used by Oldsmobile on the front five years ago, were first used at the rear on the 1939 models.
